EASTER SERVICE AT TOMB

Times News Services

JERUSALEM — Christian pilgrims today lighted a fire at the traditional grave of Jesus Christ during special Easter observances which have drawn 15,000 pilgrims to this city.

Friday they retraced Christ's route with the cross more than 19 centuries ago.

The service today at the Tomb of the Holy Sepulchre, believed to be where Christ was buried and so identified by Emperor Constantine who built the church, is the ceremony of the Fire and Font, signifying light beamed from there to the world.

In Rome Friday Pope Paul, bearing a cross, trudged part of the way up one of the city's seven hills in the rain. Earlier the pontiff, without shoes, mitre or papal ring in order to signify mourning, lay prostrate to kiss the foot of a cross in the Basilica of St. Mary Major.

Abortion Reformists Picket PM in B.C.

By ALAN WHITE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau had a brief brush with a hastily organized female power demonstration Friday night after arriving here for an Easter ski holiday at nearby Whistler Mountain.

About 40 persons, including nine young members of the Vancouver Women's Caucus, a feminist group, were on hand when Trudeau's transport department Lockheed Jetstar touched down at Vancouver international Airport at 9:31 p.m.

The demonstrators assembled at one end of the terminal building, outside against a wire mesh fence that was being patrolled by plainclothes RCMP officers.

Disembarking from the Jetstar, Trudeau broke away from his party of three and walked the 30 yards to the fence to see what was going on.

Hatless and wearing a brown leather topcoat, Trudeau leaned against the fence and enquired about their signs, which said "legalize abortion now."

"You mean you've come for me?" the prime minister asked. Members of the VWC explained that their group is supporting "a nationwide campaign" for legalized abortion.

SAYS LAW CHANGED

"But haven't we changed the laws?" the prime minister responded. "Hell, the laws have moved quite a distance in the past year."

The discussion ended shortly thereafter and Trudeau rejoined his travelling companions for the 90-mile limousine trip to Whistler, a ski resort north of here.

He was accompanied by Manpower Minister Jean Marchand, aide Gordon Gibson and his wife. They'll stay at a private lodge in the Whistler area, Canada's proposed site for the 1976 winter olympics.

The length of his visit is not known.

Flight Delays Continue in U.S.

By United Press International

Striking U.S. controllers ignored a government ultimatum to return to work today, tightening their squeeze on operations at New York airports and causing flight delays and cancellations from coast to coast.

The control tower at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, the world's busiest air terminal, was evacuated briefly after police received six telephoned bomb threats. No explosives were found.

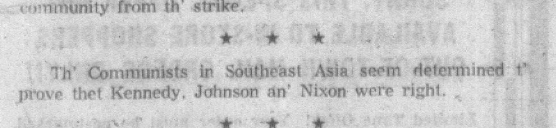
The federal aviation administration said the air controllers' protest "sick-out" has spread to regional air traffic control centres at Memphis and Great Falls, Mont., for the first time and acknowledged that New York was "a very critical problem."

New York area controllers increased their walkout from 55 per cent to nearly 75 per cent of the work force on duty.

But primarily because the peak of Easter weekend departures had passed, the FAA reported that delays at Kennedy, Laguardia and Newark airports were lower than on Friday.

Delays at the three fields ranged from 35 to 75 minutes.

Elsewhere, 84 per cent of the scheduled work force at the Minneapolis regional control centre stayed at home. Other centres hard hit included Oakland, Calif., Denver and Kansas City.



An awful lot o' strikers count on t' other side t' save th' community from th' strike.

Cong Near Cambodia Capital

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — The Cambodian government today said 3,600 Viet Cong troops were advancing on its capital here and ordered Cambodian regulars into frontline positions while mobilizing all former servicemen.

Unofficial reports said Cambodian tanks countered a Viet Cong attack at Koy-ky, on the Mekong River, 12 miles from here.

A government spokesman in the national assembly said three Viet Cong columns of 1,000 men each had pushed to within 50 miles of Phnom Penh from base bamps along the Vietnamese border northeast of the capital and another 600 VC were approaching from the east.

No clashes between these columns and Cambodian forces were reported.

STATEMENTS

The developments followed confused and fast-moving events Friday and clarifying statements came this morning from these countries:

In Saigon, two battalions of South Vietnamese knifed two miles into neutral Cambodia to kill Viet Cong in a raid on a Communist staging area Friday, U.S. military sources said despite earlier denials by South Vietnamese that the border had been crossed;

The sources added that the penetration took place, with U.S. helicopters giving support fire while hovering over the South Vietnamese side of the border, after the new rightist government in Cambodia had given its permission;

In Washington, the White House issued a statement acknowledging for the first time that U.S. commanders have been authorized for some time to cross the border in response to Communist attacks but denied this represented an expansion of the Viet Nam war;

In Cambodia, the capital of Phnom Penh was placed under curfew Friday and provincial reservists were called to duty to halt demonstrations against the new government following arrest of 20 students accused of leading a Thursday protest.

VICTORIA MAIL TO GO THROUGH

Mailmen will deliver throughout Greater Victoria Monday, although they have been asked by national union headquarters to stay home.

The Letter Carriers Union Ottawa office argued the day is a statutory holiday in the union's contract. But the protest appears to have been launched too late to produce co-ordinated action across the country.

Marcel Bountin, president of the Victoria local of the union, said today members will report for work Monday. The local still has no official word from the Ottawa office on the subject and there appears to have been a breakdown in communication somewhere along the way, he said.

Mailmen in Calgary have indicated they will not report but a Vancouver spokesman said a request from them for support arrived too late to be considered by the union members there.

In Winnipeg a union spokesman said members will be advised to report for work.

Postmen in U.S. To Get Pay Hike

Times News Services.

WASHINGTON — Union and government officials have set aside all issues except wage increases in the United States postal dispute.

A joint announcement from the negotiation teams Friday night said both sides "agree that postal workers need and must have salary increases and that the only question is how much and when."

The statement added that "all other problems — and there are many — must be postponed until the wage question is solved."

Canadians Split On U.S. Control

Exactly half the people in Canada believe this country is becoming more dependent on the U.S. than it was a decade ago. In 1961, 43 per cent held this conviction; today 50 per cent say our dependence is increasing.

More citizens in Ontario (57 per cent) than any other region feel this way. In the Maritimes, about a third of the population say we are more dependent and in Quebec 42 per cent say it. In the West 54 per cent believe it.

CNTU Attacks Takeover

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Under a cloud of protest, negotiations were under way here today aimed at resumption of normal mail trucking service in Montreal under federal control as a result of a cabinet decision to take it over from contractors as a permanent government operation.

In a special Good Friday meeting, the cabinet cancelled five contracts with private trucking companies which were to have started on expiry next Tuesday of the old contract with G. Lapalme Inc., which had been the source of a series of rotating strikes and slowdowns holding up mail deliveries in the country's biggest city.

The move was seen by some as setting the pattern in other areas across the country, such as Victoria, when their existing private mail trucking contracts run out.

OLD CONTRACT

The Montreal post office Friday offered to hire about 285 of the Lapalme company's 457 drivers who had been trucking mail under the old contract.

But the powerful Confederation of National Trade Unions, representing the Montreal drivers, condemned the government decision this morning.

However, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, who announced the takeover, and the CNTU general secretary Raymond Parent began discussions today in the hopes of obtaining an agreement which would allow the Montreal post office to start trucking mail to sub-stations itself by Wednesday.

FOLLOWS DISRUPTIONS

The government takeover is a result of almost two months of work disruptions by drivers who feared losing their jobs if the earlier government plan to replace an existing exclusive mail delivery contract with five new ones had been successful.

These new contracts, which were to take effect April 1, will be cancelled, Drury said, and the government will take over direct control of mail truck deliveries.

The government plan calls for hiring about 285 of the present 457 drivers on the basis of seniority. The remaining drivers would be placed on a "waiting list" for future openings.

The union objects mainly to:

- The drivers being represented by a public service union after being hired by the government, rather than remaining within the CNTU.
- The fact that some drivers will lose their jobs and those hired by the government will be asked to accept the wage already paid post office department truckers in east Montreal: between

Central Saanich Sewer Proposal Gets Rough Ride

By BRYDEN WINSBY

Proponents of the revised sewer plan in Central Saanich face a long, hard and perhaps bitter struggle before the proposal is presented to the voters for final approval.

This was indicated Thursday night at a meeting attended by 125 persons held at the Brentwood Elementary School. The meeting, sponsored by the Central Saanich Chamber of Commerce, was held to discuss the proposal and gauge public acceptance of it.

A panel of four, two for and two against the revised plan, spoke, followed by comments from the floor.

Before discussion got under way, chairman Gordon Ewan told the meeting the need for sewers was not under debate. What was to be discussed, he said, was the extent to which they were to be built and the financing of the scheme.

However, it soon became evident that such was not to be the case.

SEPTIC TANKS

Right now, the municipality relies on the use of septic tanks for treatment of its sewage. Some of these tanks are functional, while others are so ineffective they have become a health hazard.

Last December, voters turned down a $1.5 million sewer referendum, apparently feeling that it presented an unfair financial burden.

A revised proposal, now under consideration, has a $2.5 million price tag and represents a cost to homeowners of about $150 per annum for at least seven years.

With increased residential development in the area, many people, including developers, council members and public health officials, contend that an adequate sewage system is a must.

MAIN LINE

The proposed system involves running a main line, or trunk, in a west to east direction from the area around Butchart's Gardens to the East Saanich Indian reserve. Branch lines would run north and south of the main line, providing easier gravity flow of the effluent.

Panelist Ald. Donald MacLaurin, in outlining the new proposal, said, "By beginning now, we can get control of a planned use of the land and plan an extension of present zoning." He said the municipality has done an "outstanding job" so far in coming to grips with the problem of land usage.

TIME IS RIPE

"We don't want to go backwards in land use. The time is ripe now for a proper sewer system."

Howard Laatsch, former president of the Central Saanich Chamber of Commerce, attacked the financing of the revised scheme, calling it "nothing but a big bill." He said he fears a steady rise in the cost of the system, hindering those now building and burdening those who have a fixed income, forcing them to give up their homes.

"Not only that," he said, "when the pollution problem was first discovered, it was in Brentwood. Let's clean up and sewer Brentwood before we borrow all this money."

Art Bolster, another panelist, said that if voters turn down the proposal, they must find an alternative, "because no septic tank is adequate."

REFERENDUM

Haldor Beebe, long an outspoken critic of the sewer proposal, blasted the referendum itself, calling it "autocratic and undemocratic." He proposed that council find a better way of financing it, "even if it is unorthodox."

One member of the audience, Dave Prosser, said the draining methods of the proposed system were not adequate and cited a University of Pennsylvania study which says the Strait of Georgia, including the area around Sidney where the effluent would be pumped, is not properly flushed by the tided. He said only a portion of the effluent would be carried away.

"The rest would accumulate and really cause a problem."

Another resident said that when he first moved to the area a few years ago, he was told he would have to wait 10 or 15 years for sewers. He then put in an expensive septic tank system and is now told he will have to pay for a sewer system — one he does not need.

BROAD VIEW

One man said residents must take a broader view of the situation, not just how it affects them personally. "If we don't install sewers property values will go right down. People will leave as the health hazard rises. Contain your own effluent in your own backyard or get moving and solve the sewage problem."

One farmer stood up and mentioned the distances involve in some cases. "It's going to cost a lot of money just for me to hook up. Where am I going to get the money?"

MacLaurin, in reply, said, "I agree, the 'must connect and pay for the connection' rule in many cases can be an unreasonable request. This is something that will have to be ironed out."

Tentative Agreement Reported

Tentative agreement has been reached between Victoria Press Ltd. and the 207-member local of the International Typographical Union in contract negotiations dating back to October.

The company, publishing the afternoon Times and morning Colonist, agreed to a two-year contract retroactive to Jan. 1.

The ITU, representing the largest of four mechanical crafts employed at Victoria Press, said the terms may be ratified within three weeks.

An hourly-wage increase of 76 cents, spread over two years, with reduction of the time required for apprenticeship training, and in the number of years needed to qualify for four weeks vacation are principal items of the agreement.

FOUR MORE

"We are pleased to have concluded this agreement with our typographical employees for the next two years, but it is only one of the four mechanical unions we are negotiating with," said VPL general manager J. C. Melville.

The other three represent pressmen, stereotypers and mailers. A fourth, non-mechanical group is represented by Victoria Newspaper Guild, consisting of editorial, business office and maintenance staffs, which also is in negotiation with VPL.

FOOL FOIKUS FLEES FAIR

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Vancouver's elusive town fool, Joachim Foikis, failed to appear at a youth fair in London Thursday, and fair officials, who had sponsored his flight from Vancouver and his hotel, said he told them he was on his way to Europe.

They said he arrived in London Tuesday, checked into a downtown hotel and lived on the fair's expense account for the next two days.

A hotel employee said Mr. Foikis didn't check out but added that his room was empty.

John Killorn, public relations director of the fair, said he was at a loss to explain why Mr. Foikis didn't appear because he stood to gain a speaking fee of about $100 plus the equivalent of the return plane fare to Vancouver.

"But he wasn't on his way back to Vancouver, from what he told us ... He said he was going on to Europe and that's why he wanted the money instead of the return ticket to Vancouver," Mr. Killorn said.

Terrorists Free Envoy Despite Plan Failure

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Left-wing terrorists who kidnapped a Paraguayan consul Tuesday freed him today despite the failure of their demands that the Argentine government free two political prisoners in exchange.

Joaquin Waldemar Sanchez, 56-year-old Paraguayan consul, was freed in a suburb early today and appeared at the Paraguayan Embassy shortly afterward. He appeared tired but told reporters he had been treated well.

The Argentine Liberation Front (FAL), a small leftist militant group, had threatened to kill Sanchez and to execute the managers of United States companies in Argentina if the government of President Juan Carlos Ongania refused to free two members of the FAL allegedly arrested last week.

HAD ONLY ONE

Then an anonymous telephone caller told a local news agency that Sanchez had been killed and his body dumped into the Riachuelo River here. The call set off a police search of the river which turned up nothing.

Friday night, the FAL said Sanchez was still alive and would not be killed "for humanitarian reasons."

The government acknowledged that Carlos Dellanave, 20, was in jail, but said the other man whose release was demanded by the FAL, Alejandro R. Baldu, 20, was being sought by police.

The FAL claimed Baldu had been arrested, but had been killed or so badly tortured that the police could not release him.

Dellanave's father, Raul, who had been arrested in connection with his son's activities, said at a news conference Friday that the youth had been tortured while in jail.

Both young men had been accused of participating in bank robberies and in terrorist raids on military and police posts.

Sanchez, the Paraguayan consul in the border town of Ituzaingo, was kidnapped on the eve of the arrival here of Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner for a five-day official visit.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The tissue under your skin has started to get a little bit thinner now that warmer weather is on its way.

Your skin tissue gets thicker in the winter in five different areas of the body surface — on the chest, abdomen, knees, back and the upper part of the arms. When spring arrives the skin starts to get thinner and that's the way nature prepares for hotter weather.

Researchers found that the temperature of your body may tend to go down less as the tissue under the skin increases in thickness when winter comes. The reverse is true, of course, when summer comes. The subcutaneous tissue seems to have some insulating qualities that ward off cold. When you don't need it then it thins out a bit.

. . . MAIL

FEELS MEN SLIGHTED

Guy Beaudoin, director of services for federal employees in the CNTU, told reporters the union also objects to Drury's announcement of the policy at a news conference before the drivers themselves had been informed.

Beaudoin said Montreal mail service will be in a "bad mess" if the government tries to enforce its decision by the Wednesday deadline and the drivers refuse to work.

The present arrangement for mail truck delivery gives G. Lapalme Inc. an exclusive contract in the city.

The government decided to split up Lapalme's area and cancelled tenders which resulted in the award of five contracts in the city earlier this year.

Disruptions in mail deliveries began Feb. 3 as a result of the pending loss of jobs by Lapalme drivers and their demands that they continue under the new contracts.

WANTS DELAY

Beaudoin said the government's latest plan is unsatisfactory and the union has asked for a two-month delay to find a suitable solution.

The government action was recommended to the cabinet by Montreal lawyer H. Carl Goldenberg, who had been assigned by Prime Minister Trudeau to study and report on the dispute.

Marcel Pepin, CNTU president, said Friday night the Goldenberg recommendations were "a victory" for Postmaster-General Eric Kierans.

The four contractors holding the five contracts which are to be cancelled are reported to have invested about $850,000 in the purchase of trucks and to have hired between 200 and 500 drivers in expectation of starting work Wednesday.

Beaudoin said if the government is not able to buy these trucks and hire Lapalme drivers before Wednesday, "there's no way the mail will be moving."

Goldenberg said in his report that a takeover of mail truck service by the government is the only way to avoid future disputes.

A source in the post office department said the takeover could indicate the pattern the government intends to follow in other Canadian centres as existing mail truck delivery contracts expire.

Everton Races Ahead Towards English Cup

LONDON (CP) Everton hammered Chelsea 5-2 today and took a five-point lead over Leeds United in the race for the English League soccer title.

Leeds lost 3-1 at home to Southhampton, its first home defeat in 39 games.

Everton now has 59 points with four games to play and Leeds 54 points with five to play.

Everton scored two goals in the first four minutes. Howard Kendall got the first after 16 seconds, and England World Cup ace Alan Ball the second.

VETERANS' CARE RATE UNCHANGED

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Relatives won't have to pay higher charges after all for veterans living in Veterans' Hospitals after their active treatment programs are completed.

And it's all due to the government's efforts to restrain inflation.

Charges for domicillary care of veterans in the hospitals were ordered increased from the years-old rate of $120 a month to $300 a month, for those who could afford them.

However, a Veterans' Affairs Department official Thursday said a count-order has intercepted the increase and rolled the rates back to $120 a month because of the restraint program.

The Year of Restraint On the Civic Calendar

By JIM HUME

This, as taxpayers throughout the Greater Victoria area will recall, is the year of restraint.

And in Victoria in particular it is (was) to be the year when revenues were increased and taxes held in line. An intriguing prospect when it is remembered that the only revenue a city has comes from taxes of one kind or another.

Anyway, here we are in the third month of the year with time enough before budget talks start in earnest to see how local government is doing in the battle against inflation.

Hume

In 1969, a pretty free-wheeling year, the Intermunicipal Committee of Greater Victoria, paid out $120,000 in grants to various organizations.

This year, grimly determined to hold the line, they have approved $160,000 in grants to the same organizations.

True, some of that total may be trimmed when the recommendations of the committee get back to individual councils.

But it's doubtful, unless councils get really serious about holding the line, that they can — or have the courage to—slash one third of the proposed grant budget.

In a year of restraint a $40,000 hike in hand-outs could be expected to cause a raised eyebrow here or there. So far it hasn't. Not even from Mayor Courtney Haddock, who, to date, has yet to turn down or vote against a request for extra funds for one purpose or another.

The closest he has come to a hard line "no" has been his call for a review, with the possibility of streamlining a couple of organizations in the city. But that hasn't saved a penny for the taxpayer, nor will the streamlining process.

And if all the foregoing sounds familiar, it should.

It's only a matter of four years ago that Victoria newspapers lamented the fact that grants to various organizations had reached the astronomical figure of $75,000 a year.

Oh, happy, dear dead days beyond recall.

The word is filtering down the road that Victoria has a winner in Alfred Hood as chairman of the city's centennial committee. (That's the 1971 centennial and not to be confused with the past half-dozen).

Most readers will recall that Hood was just edged out of the race for a council seat last December.

The betting is that with a reputation already building in city hall he'll be back on the hustings again — and will make it.

What's so praiseworthy about Hood?

Simple. He knows how to run a meeting.

Not many people do.

★ ★ ★

Some bumble, some fumble, some talk too much and some just don't know the first thing about procedure.

It's pleasantly surprising to drop into a Hood-chaired meeting and hear things moving along unhurriedly, but with positive direction.

The active word there is "surprising," as anyone who has sat through the average municipal council committee meeting will confirm.

Not only does Hood move his meeting along with clarity and authority, he files his written reports to city officials with the same quality.

So concise and articulate are those written reports that a couple of secretaries are still in shock. They just aren't used to that sort of stuff from committee chairmen.

Before other municipalities start getting up-tight about the $3,000 survey of city of Victoria service charges for administrating intermunicipal projects a few hidden facts should be considered.

Thursday morning librarian Jack Lort spent considerable time with city solicitor T. P. O'Grady. What did that service cost the library? Nothing.

★ ★ ★

Earlier a Saanich alderman had tied up city treasurer Jim Bramley for a good chunk of time while seeking some information on family and children's court. The cost? Nothing.

There's a feeling here that the firm doing the survey took into account office procedures (although they never did talk to the comptroller) to take into account the uncounted hours spent handing out advice — paid for by Victoria taxpayers.

The answer to the city service charge is simple: if other municipalities think them too high, let 'em volunteer for the job at a cut price.

What, no takers?

Baptists To Hear Missionary

Bill Kapitaniuk, missionary with the Slavic Gospel Association in France, will be guest speaker at the 11 a.m. Easter Sunday service in Central Baptist Church.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. A Kapitaniuk of Victoria and a member of Central Baptist Church, he has worked for 18 years as a missionary in France and eastern Europe.

Kapitaniuk is now on a two-month tour of Canada and the United States, talking on how to evangelize Europe and raising funds to print Christian literature for Communist-dominated countries.

At the 7 p.m. service Sunday, an augmented senior choir of 40 voices will present The Glory of Easter, an Easter cantata by John W. Peterson.

Safecrackers Steal $1,500

A total of $1,500 was stolen by thieves who broke into the J. C. Switzer frozen foods company building at 533 Yates Wednesday.

Police said they forced a steel door to the building and then with a big jackhammer and chisel removed bricks on the side of the vault.

They reached into the vault with a piece of steel, using it to take a cashbox containing $1,500 and a petty cash container containing an undetermined amount.

The container, five tools and four beer bottles were found in the building.

U.S. Army Approves Offshore Drilling

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The Army Corps of Engineers Friday granted permission to Humble Oil Co. to begin drilling in the Santa Barbara Channel, scene last year of a massive oil well blowout. Reaction from civic leaders and conservation groups was quick and critical.

The army said Humble's petition had previously been approved by the interior department but then had been temporarily delayed by a government-imposed moratorium on new operations in the channel. All that was up to the army to determine, a spokesman said, was whether new operations would pose dangers to navigation or national defence.

Marvin Levine, Santa Barbara county counsel, noted that the city and country have litigation pending in U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which, if successful, would require public hearings be held before such petitions as Humble's could be granted.

There was no immediate comment from Humble on receiving the army go-ahead for exploratory drilling on two tracts, measuring about nine square miles, south of Point Conception.

Lois Sidenberg, president of the citizens group Get Oil Out (GOO) told newsmen: "We're extremely angry and particularly disappointed."

The blowout of a Union Oil Co. well Jan. 28, 1969, spread an oil slick over more than 200 square miles of ocean, besmirched some 40 miles of beaches, and killed wildlife.

The Body and the Spirit

THROUGHOUT THE CHRISTIAN world tomorrow a sizable portion of mankind will celebrate the annual Easter observance. It is a time of religious praise and thanksgiving; and it should be conducted in an atmosphere of gratitude, love and a sense of accomplishment. Yet the state of the world is such that there can be little satisfaction in man's over-all accomplishment; there can be little Christian pride in the achievement of the church today.

For the church has been strongly challenged by the new material forces of the world, by the new philosophies—which depend heavily on old Oriental systems of thought—and by an unprecedented revolution in man's ideas which threatens to overturn established customs and morals, to replace values and attitudes which appear to have failed.

Superficially, that failure seems to be complete. In a world dedicated to the principle of peace we continue to have wars, declared and undeclared, which exceed previous conflicts in their indecency and diabolical destruction. As never before, civilian lives have become pawns in military conflict, civilian starvation and exile have become not only the traditional evil aftermath but the modern immediate goal of military strategy.

We see our planet increasingly befouled, even as we aspire to take our learning to other planets. It has become commonplace for experts to estimate the time left before we run out of room on earth, fail in our ability to feed ourselves, use up our basic natural materials, poison our air, our land, our seas, alter the temperature or composition of the atmosphere so that irreversible changes will occur in the planetary conditions that make life possible.

We have created cities which reduce man to lower than an animal level by depriving him of his privacy, of his sense of responsibility to his fellow human beings and his fellow creatures, of those personal codes of conduct which differentiate civilization from the so-called jungle law. The crime rates rise: shoplifting and theft increase, murders and beatings have become commonplace events, dwellers in big cities go in fear.

It is foolish to blame the Christian church for this. But the church is a part of its world; and it has allowed itself to be pushed to the rear in many cases when it should have been taking the lead. It has been on the defensive when it should have been on the attack. It has weakened itself with internal divisions over minor matters when it should have been united on major ones. It has carried weight with those who are convinced but not with those whom it should have convinced.

Too frequently and too long it has appeared as a man-made, man-driven institution, when its origin and its purposes were supposed to be quite otherwise. It has to tackle problems which no man could be expected to solve — and like man, it has failed. It will continue to fail if it remains like man.

Canadian Caribbean Investment

AFTER THE ANTI-CANADIAN demonstrations in Trinidad, conventional wisdom in this country explained the violence as an isolated and unfortunate consequence of the Montreal trial involving 10 West Indian students. Despite the revolutionary rhetoric of the students who have returned home — and some of it was inane — the real causes of anti-Canadian feelings in the Caribbean are much deeper.

John Foster Dulles once said there are two ways to conquer a country: by force or by getting control of its economy. This logic and how it works is well-known around the world now. Radicals are quick to see a foreign conspiracy in simple economic investment. Certainly Canada has no plans to get control of the Caribbean through clandestine investments.

However, it cannot be denied that Canadians have sizable investments in the Caribbean. The Toronto Star reports there are 43 branches of Canadian banks in Port of Spain, Trinidad, and estimates of their share of the total banking business range between 60 and 90 per cent, depending on the island. Many Canadian insurance companies are active in the area, along with Canadian-owned hotels and resorts. In Jamaica the Aluminum Company of Canada controls 48,000 acres of land and its bauxite mining operation there is said to be worth approximately $175 millions.

What the total Canadian economic investment is in the Caribbean no one is prepared to say, but it is reported that the Trudeau government is going to some trouble to find out. Whatever the figure is, it is certain to cause indignation among many Caribbean politicians. After a decade of shrugging off colonialism, most Caribbean countries are extremely nationalistic. The Canadian tourists who flock south each winter are seen as the exploiters. It is not difficult to telescope such arguments into saying the Canadians can afford lavish holidays because they own the banks in Trinidad. At least, this is radical logic.

It is ironic at a time when Canadians are worrying about foreign holdings in this country that we should be accused of exploiting people elsewhere. It is easy to be concerned about the United States investment in Canada; now it is Canadians who are being questioned. There are no easy answers in such a situation, especially since the Caribbean controversy has a racial element. But the average Canadian will sympathize with a nation that wants control of its banks and its newspapers. After all, we ask that much ourselves.

A Priceless Chance to Prevent Tragedy

A PROPOSAL BY THE GREATer Victoria Association on Alcoholism, that Premier Bennett head a task force on drugs with emphasis on tobacco and alcohol, should be well received by the provincial government. The purposes as outlined by the Victoria group would be to conduct and co-ordinate programs for the rehabilitation of alcoholics and other drug addicts.

The Association's proposal is echoed by the B.C. Liquor Inquiry Commission that called for a coordinator of ministerial rank to undertake a crash program in prevention, education, treatment and rehabilitation for alcoholics. While the provincial government has provided some aid for alcoholics — mainly in the form of grants to private groups who set up halfway houses — the whole spectrum of drug abuse has changed radically in the last decade. A government that made a net profit of $56,055,120 for the year ending March 31, 1969, by the sale of a legalized drug should have no qualms about providing a few more millions for the prevention of greater abuse and rehabilitation of those who have been caught in the drug spectrum. By lending his name to such an urgent cause, Mr. Bennett would underline the seriousness of the problem to all British Columbians.

There are 32,500 alcoholics in British Columbia and figures show that about one third of their children are destined to become alcoholics. While few reliable figures are available on other drug abuse and its long-term effects, the growing numbers of narcotic offenders before the courts indicate that heroin and other "hard" drugs are entangling large numbers of people. A healthy investment now could save this province and its citizens from a tragedy that will not be measured only by dollars.

Back to the Couch

The public school system appears well on the way to becoming the modern version of the psychiatrist's couch and the laboratory of psychologists and sociologists. In addition to its traditional function to educate, the schools become the focal point and target for indoctrination in any and all of the socio-economic perplexities of our times.

We as parents are not aware how many precious school hours are devoted to the exposition of social theories that have become the popular whipping-boy of the media. It is apparent, however, that a disproportionate time-element is spent probing the student psyche for the questionable benefit of advanced educational theses. One such test administered recently in Victoria to Grade Six pupils was conducted with the preliminary caution that since the test results would be shown to parents and teachers they must be signed. On completion the pupils were told to erase their names; the truth of their answers thus being obtained by misrepresentation. I have been informed that, paradoxically, the title of the probe was "Moral Dilemmas," designed to uncover student reaction in this field.

For a system that takes an official position of religious neutrality and infers the existence of no moral absolutes, interesting speculations may be raised as to the ultimate worth of such research. — R. Groves, 1730 Richardson.

To Escape Tariffs, Ford Had a Better Idea

AS they say at get-togethers of the automobile manufacturers, it is the greatest story since Henry made a lady out of Lizzie. The latest exciting chapter comes to us in the annual report of that zealous and indefatigable public servant, Maxwell Henderson, Auditor General of Canada. It might appropriately be entitled how to be a success in the stranger-than-fiction world of government without half trying.

Western

Before delving into the auto record, it is important to observe that Mr. Henderson's own efforts have been rewarded with rather less success than one might hope for in the public interest. Although his statistical summary shows a slight improvement when compared to 1968, the fact remains that, of his 50 recommendations and observations of last year, looking to an improvement of administrative practices, only three have been implemented and six partially implemented by government.

Further, his reasonable request for a small increase of staff and the right to recruit staff to deal with the enormous growth in government expansion have been refused. Instead the strength of his office has been cut well below that for which funds were approved by Parliament. In consequence of this and the increasing burden imposed upon him by the ingenious irregularities of departments and agencies, Mr. Henderson has been unable to produce his full report to Parliament on time and all we have is volume one.

Even so there is much in the unfinished work to arouse the attention and interest of taxpayers.

Mr. Henderson's many and varied revelations have a common theme: public money and its misuse. Sometimes the amounts involved are small although not for that reason unimportant, given the principle of Parliamentary control of the purse. For sheer grandeur, however, the automobile saga beats everything.

A brief background may be useful for readers unfamiliar with earlier chapters.

Ignoring some minor preliminaries, the story begins in January 1965 with the Canada-U.S. free-trade-for-automobile-manufacturers pact. The glories of this agreement are now well known if not universally appreciated by impatient consumers.

Motor vehicles tariff order 1965 provided that manufacturers had to meet certain tests in order to qualify for their privilege. Some failed and would thus, on a strict reading, have been subject to duties. But, as Mr. Henderson reported last year, no attempt was ever made to collect any portion or indeed to establish with any precision the amounts owing. Instead, the Department of National Revenue assumed that the government eventually would act on the principle that the quality of mercy is not strained.

Gentle Rain From Heaven

Mr. Henderson estimated last year that the amount about to drop as the gentle rain from heaven was roughly $80 millions, most of it attributable to one manufacturer. As it turned out the duties were remitted by the governor in council acting under Section 22 of The Financial Administration Act. This generous action later attracted a good deal of attention when it was scrutinized by the Public Accounts Committee. The defence was that in these matters (although not in income tax) the spirit is more important than the letter. In any case, letters had been exchanged between Mr. Drury and the Ford Motor Company which anticipated certain difficulties in re-aligning its facilities although it was never explained what authority such correspondence could or did convey to officials.

In his latest report, Mr. Henderson observes "From the evidence given it is obvious that in determining whether or not a motor vehicle manufacturer has complied with the requirements of the Motor Vehicles Tariff Order 1965, the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Department of Finance follow criteria additional to those incorporated in the tariff order. The officials of these departments when testifying before the committee appeared to place greater emphasis on criteria which are not included in the tariff order than on certain criterian which are included."

Indeed they did.

As noted above, the committee was under the impression that about $80 millions was involved. Of this Ford accounted for some $75 million although relatively small amounts were attributable of entitlement from ministers.

It now turns out that as of March 31, 1969, the amount involved in remission was $108,530,000. Forgiveness was later extended to five companies who could not qualify even under the order in council. Evidently about $161,000 was at stake and Mr. Henderson reports that most of this has now been remitted.

But this is not all—not by a princely ransom. For we now read that the company which failed the tests for the years ended July 3, 1965, 1966 and 1967 failed again in 1968 so the round sum is not $80 millions but an inspiring $180 millions and of this, says Mr. Henderson, "an estimated $173 millions is applicable to this one vehicle manufacturer."

It was erroneously stated in these columns last year that the Ford Motor Company had hit the jackpot. What it hit was bonanza creek.

This is not a criticism of Ford which does not have responsibility for protecting the treasury. To quote Mr. Henderson, "The absence from the tariff order of many of the criteria established . . . for determing liability for duty has also led at least one manufacturer to believe that he was not required to meet the conditions of the tariff order to earn entitlement to duty free treatment." This is exactly what Ford said when the matter became public last year.

But there is a responsibility which has been borne very lightly. For the government did not even know within millions (perhaps tens of millions) how much it was remitting when it passed the Order in Council.

No Adequate Records

It is presumably in the dark still for the auditor general continues to complain that the Department of National Revenue does not keep adequate records. Customs and Excise, aware of the criteria outside the tariff order and being faced with the sheer impracticability of collecting millions of dollars in customs duties, after the end of a vehicle manufacturer's production year, should that manufacturer's production year have failed to meet the condition of the tariff order, had had little enthusiasm for the precise determination of duties owing because of an impression that such duties would probably be remitted. Events to date have shown this impression to be amply justified.

One must suppose that the enthusiasm of the manufacturers for such a system — or lack of it — is absolutely boundless.

The quality of mercy as we all know is "twice bless'd. It blesseth him that gives and him that takes." Unhappily in the automobile case him that gives gets it from the taxpayer who gets it again in his role of consumer when he buys the latest miracle on wheels.

FROM LONDON

By DAVID HUMPHREYS

Ulster Leadership—A Facade of Strength

BY normal standards Major Chichester-Clark's reform program has received an overwhelming vote of confidence in the Northern Ireland parliament at Stormont. Unfortunately neither the vote, nor the political circumstances nor the social conditions is normal. Therefore it would be premature, to say the least, to conclude that all is well for the beleaguered Major Chichester-Clark. Nor is it possible to conclude with any assurance that the administration has been voted confidence to press forward, in the words of the motion, with "its realistic policies, convinced that this is the course which will commend itself to the widest section of the community, and command the widest respect and ensure for Northern Ireland the certainty of a lasting future within the United Kingdom."

Humphreys

The prime minister's leadership appeared to be strong before and after the vote, in contrast to that of his predecessor, Terrence O'Neill, a year ago. Having thrown down the gauntlet to rightwing dissidents in his Unionist party, he has kept his promise to expel any who did not support the confidence vote. Four who abstained, including the former home secretary, William Craig, and the former agriculture minister, Harry West, and one who opposed the motion, have been expelled.

Good Impression

The vote itself was merely the tip of the iceberg that is threatening to break up the Unionist party. Except for one token vote, the opposition abstained to watch the spectacle of the ruling party tearing at its vitals.

There is an encouraging sign in Major Chichester-Clark's unequivocal attitude. He made a good impression a few days before the vote in London when he insisted that he would not waver from his course. If people in Britain could become disorderly and intractable over issues like academic freedom, was it any wonder people in Ulster should become agitated when they felt great issues were at stake.

His main antagonist, Mr. Craig, took a low-key approach in a speech before the vote. He did attack the central reforms. But he pledged himself to work towards party unity and consensus for reforms.

If both men mean what they say, and considering that the entire administration solidly supported the prime minister, is there not hope for government stability and progress?

A positive answer has to be qualified because neither man really controls the party. Mr. Craig represents opposition to the reforms and he hopes his views will prevail. By all accounts, he has a large and attentive following. He said, after the vote, he believes he represents the main stream of the party.

The central problem is that in the last analysis the Unionist party machinery forces MPs to be delegates, rather than representatives of the people. The party leadership is not free to put legislation through Stormont over party objections without risking a rift.

Northern Ireland is running contrary to the world trend in the sense that the way to reform is through less democracy rather than more. Power lies in the grass roots. Each MP is constantly subject to the confidence of his Unionist association. As elsewhere, the militants and activists are more active in these associations than the moderates. The party central office is powerless before them.

Party Strife

It is the party structure, not the administration or its intent, that is worrisome. This is precisely why Lord O'Neill's administration collapsed a year ago, despite a series of successful confidence votes. And it is why some have attempted to draw a parallel between the situations then and now. Two weeks before the confidence vote, six Unionist MPs actually voted against the government on a police reform bill that was clearly regarded in advance as confidence. No discipline was taken and the air of party crisis thickened.

This time Major Chichester-Clark's challenge has tended to clear the air. At least it has brought the party strife into the open where the administration might have a better chance of survival in a normal situation. But the situation is normal only by Northern Ireland's peculiar standards.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Spectacle Lake at this time of the year offers an impressive change of scenery. The lake is off the Island Highway about 500 yards north of the Shawnigan Cut-off.

As you drive in you may see the western hemlocks bordering the way with their light green, feathery branches.

It is a very short hike into the park from the edge of the culvert. There is abundant room for cars.

The change of flora is very noticeable. Here, at a higher elevation, the season is not so advanced. Very few spring flowers are in bloom.

On the dry, exposed rocks you will find the tiny bittercress, with its four-petalled white flowers that enhance the rock faces.

Across the lake the tall Douglas firs stand out against the skyline, and if you look at the water, you can see the same scene mirrored on its placid surface.

★ ★ ★

In this area there are many fine lodgepole pines with their clumps of needles in paired bunches. At the branch tips you will see the new male flowers appearing and often with them some very small, tight cones. These cones take up to three years to mature.

Take a look at the alders beside the road and trail. They are Sitka alders and the catkins are quite different from those of the red alders, which grow at a lower level. Here the plant never seems to become a real tree but stays a large, bushy shrub. Look for the female cones. They, too, are different. See how the leaves have fine sharp-toothed edges and are glossy green. This tree is able to withstand heavy snowfall, as the limbs will bend and return to normal when the snow melts.

Growing around the margin of the lake are many kinds of willows. Each one has a different color and the array makes a pleasing sight.

You can find the hairy manzanita in flower. They have attracted many honey bees. Note the urn-shaped blossoms which will tell you that they belong to the heather family and are in the same group as the arbutus tree.

If you look closely you will find the false box. On the underside of its leaves you will see the tiny greenish-yellow flowers. Some of the shrubs are the males and others the females and are pollinated by insects and the winds.

On the lake itself you will see several pond ducks, probably buffleheads, and up by the marsh, some mallards possibly nesting among the cattails growing there.

Sihanouk: Victim of His Own Charisma

GEN. LON NOL
. . . he's in

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG — For years, the effervescent and charismatic Prince Norodom Sihanouk seemed to be a permanent fixture as Cambodia's chief of state.

Yet in a sudden turn of events, he was deposed by a coalition of conservative Cambodian military and civilian leaders — and his ouster may drastically alter the shape of both American and Communist strategies in the embattled region formerly known as Indochina.

Economic troubles, social difficulties, arcane family rivalries and a pervasive weariness with his rhetoric all contributed to Sihanouk's downfall. Cambodia's proximity to Vietnam as this point in time was a key factor in the dramatic change of government. It is also the factor that is bound to give Cambodia enormous international significance in the weeks ahead.

Frustrated in their efforts to prevent increasing North Vietnamese and Viet Cong violations of their territory — and perhaps swayed by signs of allied success in Vietnam — the Cambodian military and civilian leaders moved against Sihanouk in order to alter his brand of neutrality and take more vigorous measures against the Communists.

With a small and ill-equipped army at their disposal, however, Cambodia's new leaders appear to have only a single plausible option open to them: a plea for American help.

Such a request, if fulfilled by the Nixon administration, could set in motion a fresh array of forces in the region. The consequences might well be an escalation of the present Vietnam conflict into a wider and more devastating repetition of the Indochina war, in which the Communists and French fought until 1954 for supremacy over Laos and Cambodia as well as Vietnam.

Despite their pledge to remain neutral, Sihanouk's successors may appeal to the U.S. to expand and intensify its bombings of Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia's northeastern provinces, sparsely-populated sectors adjoining South Vietnam's central highlands.

They could conceivably grant the allies the right to pursue North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops out of the Mekong Delta into southeastern Cambodia, where important Communist supply depots, hospitals and furlough centres are maintained in the midst of a large local Vietnamese population.

In fact, limited American and South Vietnamese operations against the Communists inside Cambodia have been going on with tacit Cambodian agreement for the past two years.

If Sihanouk was able to encourage these limited U.S. operations without provoking a Communist reaction against himself, it was because he had an extraordinary talent for playing several diverse and conflicting sides at the same time.

His style was to accomodate to the various pressures on him so that, to use his phrase, he could "balance the threats."

Thus, in what seemed to be a baffling display of contradictions, he could restore diplomatic relations with the U.S., and visit Hanoi as chief mourner at Ho Chi Minh's funeral, while simultaneously denouncing North Vietnam, praising Peking and playing host to Princess Margaret.

●

The new Cambodian regime is different. Headed by Lt. Gen. Lon Nol, the premier, and his deputy, Prince Sirik Matak, it contains nobody as diplomatically skilled as Sihanouk. More important, it dismissed Sihanouk and assumed power with an avowed anti-Communist objective.

In his first public statement, in fact, Lon Nol bluntly referred to Hanoi, and the Viet Cong as "our Vietnamese enemies." Hence the Communists would respond to his government's request for U.S. assistance, and there are tactical moves they can make.

With an enlargement of the theatre of war to include Cambodia, it might not be far-fetched to anticipate an acceleration of Communist activities in Laos as a diversionary tactic.

Though his virtuoso balancing act managed to preserve the peace in Cambodia while Southeast Asia's turbulence grew, Sihanouk's volatility was in large measure responsible for the constitutional coup d'etat that ousted him. For at critical moments, his pendulum tended to swing uncontrollaby and, instead of achieving equilibrium he went to irreparable extremes.

●

On the domestic scene, his crackdowns on anti-Communist Chinese and Vietnamese in the country in the early 1960s left him without a countervailing weight to offset the leftist factions in the important alien community.

Similarly, his emotional decision to stop U.S. aid infuriated local businessmen and, more significantly, imposed austerity on an army that had become accustomed to everything from American hardware to PX goodies.

His programs to socialize banking, foreign trade and other sectors were disaster, while his showcase projects squandered investment capital that should have gone into such essentials as agriculture and light industry.

A few years ago, for instance, he constructed a jet airstrip, a large airlines terminal and a luxurious motel in desolate Battambang province in the hope of attracting tourists to the region. Asked what to do by a tourist who actually went there, a Cambodian official thought for a moment, then replied: "Well, there are nice walks."

In the realm of foreign affairs, Sihanouk had a sole aim — to assure Cambodia's survival as a national entity. Convinced that he could not rely on the U.S., particularly after the Eisenhower administration lavished its attention on his traditional Thai and South Vietnamese foes, he turned to Peking in the belief that the Chinese would protect him.

SIHANOUK
. . . he's out

His reasoning was that China preferred a fragmente Southeast Asia that it cou influence and would therefo defend Cambodia against predatory Vietnamese.

Carried away by s dream, he characteristy out did himself on a to Peking in 1965, extolli the Chinese to such lengt that the Russians, angere his performance, crude cancelled a visit he ha anned to Moscow.

Not long afterws, even though they apo zed, the Chinese disappoin him during the hectic cu al revolution by inspirin heir compatriots in th Cambodian capital of ompenh to propagandize Peking.

By 1967, no longer sure of China's help or that a Communist victory in Vietnam was imminent, Sihanouk started edging back towards the U.S.

He welcomed Jackie Kennedy to Cambodia, invited in an official U.S. mission, headed by Ambassador Chester Bowles, and gradually divulged that he favored a continued American presence in Southeast Asia in order to "balance the threat" of China.

●

These noises did not deter Hanoi and the Viet Cong, whose need for bases in Cambodia had grown substantially as the Vietnam wa escalated. For years, feari that the allies were seek an excuse to invade is country, Sihanouk ad vehemently denied the presence of the Comm ists. Now, belatedly, he egan speaking out again them while striving to rsuade them to res ct his sovereignty. But y rebuffed him.

Finally, in spi of all the cordial hyperbo heaped on him by those regarded as friends, Sihan k found himself isolated.

His forme rench mentors were not in ested. He could not call o he U.S. to back him agai the Communists into a b efield.

The ssians and Chinese, compe for influence in Hano would not dare alienate North Vietnamese by sup ing him — until, having een ousted as chief of st he could serve as their i ument.

●

In the end, too, Sihanouk as isolated in his own capital by former subordinates who, along with the foreign powers, had flattered him while privately plotting to contravene his policies and, if necessary, to usurp his authority.

Sihanouk's tragedy, like that of Indonesian President Sukarno, India's Prime Minister Nehru and other charismatic Asian figures, is that his perception of reality was frequently blurred by a narcissistic confidence in his own rhetoric.

The tragedy of Cambodia is that its era of deceptive peace may be fading as it faces the spread onto its soil of the second Indochina war.

Rich Make Reckless Revolutionaries

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

NEW YORK — The police had put barriers across West 11th Street, but no one who didn't have business on the block wanted to pass them. The bomb squad was sifting through the ruins of the Wilkerson Townhouse for more undetonated explosives while other police were digging for human parts, hoping to scrape together enough to make a positive identification of the pieces of young bodies they'd found.

Some of the people who looked down this Greenwich Village street of expensive early 19th-century rowhouses tried to explain how the people in it had come to blow themselves up.

A Bomb Factory

There was little to base surmises on, save that the authorities said the place was a bomb factory, that there had been an accident while the nest of young radicals was making anti-personnel explosive weapons, that they were probably connected with Weathermen, that wildly aggressive smithereen of a smashed and fractured SDS.

Some of the people looking down the street passed it off as criminal insanity; a few tried to excuse it as corkscrew idealism, a craziness come of insupportable political frustration, but none of these thoughts satisfactorily answered the question of why young, rich, educated people could be so whacked out as to move around the city of New York planting bombs.

In the last 10 years we've grown accustomed to the credit card radical, the person who has the time and the money to bang around the country making an appearance at all the big political manifestations, but the rich revolutionary seems to be somebody new.

Diana Oughton, the young woman whose remains were identified only by a print taken from the severed little finger of her right hand, came from a rich family. She went to Madeira, one of the country's most hoity-toity finishing schools, She graduated from Bryn Mawr College, and you won't find a school much better or more costly, and she died too young, a Weatherwoman, a revolutionary.

She wasn't unique; many of her friends and fellow revolutionaries have the same family and financial backgrounds. When you look at the pedigrees of some of these people, it's as though the country club junior membership had been transformed into an Algerian revolutionary cell.

Such behavior by such people contradicts most of what we think about revolution. We assume that revolutionaries come from classes and groups which stand to gain by overthrowing the political system.

We presume the ones who profit most from the status quo are the ones who guard it best. Now we have what appears to be a reversal, the sons and daughters of the rich seeking to overturn the present order and the poorer classes being hostile to change secured by straight force.

Had Own Way

Moses, St. Paul, St. Francis, Lenin, Mao, Castro were revolutionaries who came from a higher social class to lead their oppressed constituencies. Many of America's most famous social reformers were of a much higher class background than the people for whom they worked.

Poverty is more shocking to the rich than to a poor man who knows neither better nor other. A rich man can afford moral sensibility; he's got the resources to buy a social conscience. Guilt, fear, many things can turn a rich person into a reformer or a proponent of social change.

But what turns him into a bomb thrower, a political terrorist? In the case of our rich revolutionaries, it may also be their money and their upper class origins. They are young people who grew up accustomed to being obeyed, to having their own way.

Money to Command

This is your permissive psychology stuff; this is the expectation of people doing what you tell them to do because all your life you've had the money to command.

Such a disposition makes certain kinds of rich people very useful in a movement for social change. They're not used to having people say no to them the way the poor are, and so, when it happens, instead of subsiding, they get angry, they retaliate, they put starch in demoralized people.

But the rich can also be reckless, double so when they're young because young people think they're immortal. Rich people get reckless because they grow up protected. Their life experience has been that their family and friends will get them out of trouble.

During that period in the civil rights movement when a number of rich, upper-class whites were going south as volunteers, one of the recurrent problems faced by the native blacks was their visitors' arrogant, swishing behavior. The volunteers often couldn't be brought to see that needless riling up of local sensibilities increased opposition without any commensurate political gain.

They couldn't see it because they had never had to play as underdogs; they lacked fear and the chiselling guile which is bred into people who must operate from an inferior power position.

Rich people don't cultivate stealthy wits, nor do they develop an aptitude for studying their opponents to discover a weakness because when you're born a goliath, there's no need to learn the ways of the weak.

If you look at the short, busy biographies of some of these people, you'll see they rarely stick at any one project long. For six months they'll try community organization, then it's back to campus agitation, then building radical caucuses in labor unions, then high school organizing, then something else so that a person who's been a radical revolutionary for three years will have attempted five or six political projects.

Others Win Allies

But the studied patience of long-term work is generally foreign to people reared in the habit of giving orders and having them obeyed. Contrast the absolutism of the Weatherman and Weatherwomen, their quickness in calling others sell-outs or Uncle Toms, contrast that to the compromised pragmatism of even the Black Panther party, a political organization which makes deals, tries to win allies and keep working at long-term programs.

While the Panthers have tried to broaden their base in the black community and win flanking support outside of it, the rich, white revolutionary terrorist has, through arrogance, absolutism and a recklessness that makes him very dangerous to be around, isolated himself until he has run out of choices; he can give up politics or become a clandestine bombthrower.

Most radicals even most revolutionary radicals, have no use for these angry, undisciplined incendiaries.

Social Blackmail

Some people defend blowing up buildings as "advanced reformism," which, translated out of the revolutionary lingo, means social blackmail —do as we say or we'll detonate your corporate headquarters.

In fact, it's self-indulgent anger of the upper-class person thwarted, and in this the rich revolutionary resembles his parents. This violent, military, murderous politics he's practicing here is what his elders have practiced abroad. This is the domestic application of American foreign policy tactics.

Invitation to Heroes

By ART STOTT

An attractive young lady of my acquaintance has embarked on a classical health program that promises to extend her youth and attractiveness far into the future. She has taken up swimming. It is not her purpose to replace Elaine Tanner and other youngsters who leap from the cradle to Olympic heights with the speed of a jet ascent. She is concerned with the more enduring objective of keeping in reasonably good shape, maintaining muscle tone without developing the cords of an Atlas, and retaining the grace of relaxation with mild exercise.

Stott

The young lady is an excellent advertisement for the course she is pursuing. But, like many converts, she brings to her new-found faith a sort of crusading zeal. In recent weeks she has been telling me all the benefits of regular but non-competitive swimming which I have been detailing for the last 40 years in features and columns. Unlike me, in my present state of lassitude, she practises what she preaches.

★ ★ ★

Inevitably, her enthusiasm has prompted some of the more pragmatic figures in competitive swimming to channel her energies into a practical means of advancing their interests. She has been inveigled into participating in a swim-a-thon which will raise funds to support youngsters seriously intent on racing proficiency. More power to her.

A swim-a-thon, if you haven't noticed, is the aquatic equivalent of a "march for millions" a spectacular success as a money-raising event for good causes here. The participant invites sponsors to pledge a certain amount of cash for a given distance covered by their protege. The distance may be measured in lengths of the pool, in miles or in time in the water, as I understand it.

★ ★ ★

Several of the attractive young lady's acquaintances, who know nothing about swimming, have been going for the pool-length pledges. This is madness. The pool is short. The young lady can swim far better than they think. But with the heedlessness of the affluent society, the sponsors have gaily undertaken to pay a nickle or more a length. More prudently, I have promised two-bits a mile. In my opinion, the others don't realize to what lengths the lady will go.

My prudence, though, has won me no approval. The young lady looked at my two-bits-a-mile pledge and said: "Ha! The last of the big non-spenders. Wait till I show this to the coach. Ha!"

No appreciation here whatever for the financial exertions I am currently making to keep Mr. Edgar Benson in the style of living to which he has become accustomed. My swimming friend fails to appreciate certain attributes I share with Old Mother Hubbard — other than the implication of age.

Still, the swim-a-thon and the "march for millions" routines have seeded in me a cunning and inventive idea.

I have pondered these events and have tried to figure out the source of their success. My conclusion — and it may be shaky — is that a lot of people like to participate in a mass operation for the benefit of good causes. They'll walk and they'll swim to raise funds not only to help a large body of humanity, but particular groups in it.

The concept germinating in my mind would exploit that inclination.

If people will walk why wouldn't they dig, collecting sponsors' returns for the ground they covered?

It so happens that I have a fairly extensive hunk of real estate on the sea side of my lot that offers a challenge. Digging there is no child's play. It is an activity for heroes. Anyone who attacks that heavy clay with a shovel should win the admiration of the multitude — or be packed off to the booby-hatch. (There's material for debate here.)

I would be perfectly willing to mark off the arena in square feet scratched on the surface and invite a couple of dozen people to enlist sponsorship from their friends for a dig-in that could cover the complete back lot.

★ ★ ★

Sponsors' pledges would be receivable by me to be allocated to my favorite charity. (Are you listening Mr. Benson?)

The project is so inspiring I discussed it with the lady of the house last night. Like most great concepts sprung on an unprepared audience, the reaction was only mediocre.

"Look," she said. "I bought you a new shovel at the last bargain sale of our favorite department store. You told me it was light, sharp and had a fire-hardened handle. Get out, boy, and break ground."

I told her I couldn't. At the time of purchase I was unaware of the meaning of "fire-hardened". I am no longer ignorant. It means baked dry so it will break off at the shank when you put a little weight on it.

Contrast the absolutism of the Weatherman and Weatherwomen, their quickness in calling others sell-outs or Uncle Toms, contrast that to the compromised pragmatism of even the Black Panther party, a political organization which makes deals, tries to win allies and keep working at long-term programs.

While the Panthers have tried to broaden their base in the black community and win flanking support outside of it, the rich, white revolutionary terrorist has, through arrogance, absolutism and a recklessness that makes him very dangerous to be around, isolated himself until he has run out of choices; he can give up politics or become a clandestine bombthrower.

Most radicals even most revolutionary radicals, have no use for these angry, undisciplined incendiaries.

Social Blackmail

Some people defend blowing up buildings as "advanced reformism," which, translated out of the revolutionary lingo, means social blackmail —do as we say or we'll detonate your corporate headquarters.

In fact, it's self-indulgent anger of the upper-class person thwarted, and in this the rich revolutionary resembles his parents. This violent, military, murderous politics he's practicing here is what his elders have practiced abroad. This is the domestic application of American foreign policy tactics.

Invitation to Heroes

By ART STOTT

An attractive young lady of my acquaintance has embarked on a classical health program that promises to extend her youth and attractiveness far into the future. She has taken up swimming. It is not her purpose to replace Elaine Tanner and other youngsters who leap from the cradle to Olympic heights with the speed of a jet ascent. She is concerned with the more enduring objective of keeping in reasonably good shape, maintaining muscle tone without developing the cords of an Atlas, and retaining the grace of relaxation with mild exercise.

Stott

The young lady is an excellent advertisement for the course she is pursuing. But, like many converts, she brings to her new-found faith a sort of crusading zeal. In recent weeks she has been telling me all the benefits of regular but non-competitive swimming which I have been detailing for the last 40 years in features and columns. Unlike me, in my present state of lassitude, she practises what she preaches.

* * *

Inevitably, her enthusiasm has prompted some of the more pragmatic figures in competitive swimming to channel her energies into a practical means of advancing their interests. She has been inveigled into participating in a swim-a-thon which will raise funds to support youngsters seriously intent on racing proficiency. More power to her.

A swim-a-thon, if you haven't noticed, is the aquatic equivalent of a "march for millions" a spectacular success as a money-raising event for good causes here. The participant invites sponsors to pledge a certain amount of cash for a given distance covered by their protege. The distance may be measured in lengths of the pool, in miles or in time in the water, as I understand it.

* * *

Several of the attractive young lady's acquaintances, who know nothing about swimming, have been going for the pool-length pledges. This is madness. The pool is short. The young lady can swim far better than they think. But with the heedlessness of the affluent society, the sponsors have gaily undertaken to pay a nickle or more a length. More prudently, I have promised two-bits a mile. In my opinion, the others don't realize to what lengths the lady will go.

My prudence, though, has won me no approval. The young lady looked at my two-bits-a-mile pledge and said: "Ha! The last of the big non-spenders. Wait till I show this to the coach. Ha!"

No appreciation here whatever for the financial exertions I am currently making to keep Mr. Edgar Benson in the style of living to which he has become accustomed. My swimming friend fails to appreciate certain attributes I share with Old Mother Hubbard — other than the implication of age.

Still, the swim-a-thon and the "march for millions" routines have seeded in me a cunning and inventive idea.

I have pondered these events and have tried to figure out the source of their success. My conclusion — and it may be shaky — is that a lot of people like to participate in a mass operation for the benefit of good causes. They'll walk and they'll swim to raise funds not only to help a large body of humanity, but particular groups in it.

The concept germinating in my mind would exploit that inclination.

If people will walk why wouldn't they dig, collecting sponsors' returns for the ground they covered?

It so happens that I have a fairly extensive hunk of real estate on the sea side of my lot that offers a challenge. Digging there is no child's play. It is an activity for heroes. Anyone who attacks that heavy clay with a shovel should win the admiration of the multitude — or be packed off to the booby-hatch. (There's material for debate here.)

I would be perfectly willing to mark off the arena in square feet scratched on the surface and invite a couple of dozen people to enlist sponsorship from their friends for a dig-in that could cover the complete back lot.

* * *

Sponsors' pledges would be receivable by me to be allocated to my favorite charity. (Are you listening Mr. Benson?)

The project is so inspiring I discussed it with the lady of the house last night. Like most great concepts sprung on an unprepared audience, the reaction was only mediocre.

"Look," she said. "I bought you a new shovel at the last bargain sale of our favorite department store. You told me it was light, sharp and had a fire-hardened handle. Get out, boy, and break ground."

I told her I couldn't. At the time of purchase I was unaware of the meaning of "fire-hardened". I am no longer ignorant. It means baked dry so it will break off at the shank when you put a little weight on it.

NEW EXACT
CASH FARE SYSTEM

Effective April 1st on all
B.C. Hydro buses in Greater Victoria

New system will contribute to faster, safer service

The exact cash fare system will mean that drivers will be able to concentrate on driving without the constant distraction of making change and selling tickets. This will benefit all bus riders by contributing to faster and safer bus service. The system will also simplify the internal operations of B.C. Hydro and contribute to lower operating costs.

Tickets will be eliminated

No tickets will be sold on B.C. Hydro buses after March 31st. Tickets still in circulation will be accepted as full fare until April 5th – after that date, they can be redeemed for the original purchase price at the offices of B.C. Hydro, 820 Pandora in Victoria, or at the Garbally Road Transit Centre, 520 Gorge Road East.

Drivers will no longer carry change

Beginning April 1st, you must deposit the exact fare in cash to ride a B.C. Hydro bus in Greater Victoria. Drivers will carry no change . . . and will be unable to accept anything but the precise amount of your fare.

These are the new cash fares effective April 1st

Adult:	25¢ cash
Student:	15¢ cash Student fares valid only on presentation to operator of valid school certificate. Otherwise anyone 12 years of age and over is required to pay an adult fare.
Child:	10¢ cash
Sunday Pass:	adults – 50¢ cash children – 25¢ cash

Sunday Pass still the same great bargain

The cost of a Sunday and Holiday Pass remains unchanged – You can still travel anywhere in Greater Victoria, all day on any Sunday or holiday, at a total cost of 50¢ for adults and 25¢ for children. The only difference is that beginning April 1st, you must deposit the exact fare in cash to purchase a Pass.

Remember: The exact cash fare system begins April 1st on all B.C. Hydro buses in Greater Victoria.

GAGLARDI'S JOB-FINDER SERVICE UNDER NEW FIRE

'Political Patronage Alive and Well in B.C.'

Political patronage is flourishing in B.C.'s government despite Premier Bennett's stated view that it is a "cancer," NDP leader Dave Barrett charged Thursday in the legislature.

Barrett cited the establishment of the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen by Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi as a case where "plush offices and plush salaries" had been provided for Social Credit supporters.

The charge brought an immediate denial from an enraged Gaglardi who replied that Barrett was "misrepresenting" the truth and said that only two of 14 salaried employees of the alliance were known Social Crediters.

JOB-PROVIDER

The alliance was set up by Gaglardi — who is its chairman — with the aim of providing jobs for the unemployed.

During the current fiscal year the alliance received a grant of $140,000 from the government, and it will be given a grant of $500,000 for the fiscal year 1970-71.

Barrett, who termed the organization a "pork-barrel alliance," said it was a "payoff of public funds to friends of the minister and blatant patronage."

JOBS NOT POSTED

The job openings on the alliance were not posted, Barrett stated, and there were no applications handed in to the civil service for the positions available. He said he had checked with the civil service to see if this was the case.

Barrett pointed out that Ron Price, the executive assistant who heads the alliance, was a defeated Social Credit candidate and the son of Vancouver Socred MLA Bert Price. He had no experience in social work that might qualify him for the position, the NDP leader said.

SALARIES HIT

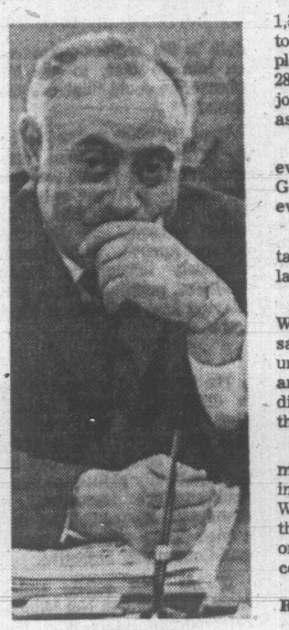
Regional Director D. G. Stewart of Kamloops was Gaglardi's campaign manager during the 1963 election, Barrett said.

The NDP leader, a social worker, had harsh words also for the salaries paid Price and the five regional directors. Whereas Price receives $1,050 per month, and Stewart $730 per month, Barrett said, the welfare department hires social workers with a bachelor degree (five years university) at a starting salary of $537 per month.

Even the most experienced senior social workers get only $820 starting salary with the civil service, Barrett said.

MERIT ALONE

To pay such high salaries to those without experience, Barrett added, would "destroy the morale and fabric of the civil service structure."



GAGLARDI

. . . defends appointments

Gaglardi replied that he had hired 14 people and only two of those were known Social Crediters. "Those two were chosen on merit and merit alone."

The minister said he had phoned the personnel manager of the civil service commission to ask for directions on how to hire personnel.

"I was told it was outside the civil service," he added.

NO POLITICS

Gaglardi described himself as the "champion" of the working man, and said the alliance staff had worked "arduously" to provide about 1,350 jobs. In a recent answer to a question the figure was placed at 1,281 jobs provided, 282 of which were permanent jobs for people on social assistance.

"At no time was politics ever used in the department, Gaglardi said, nor will there ever be.

The alliance had saved the taxpayers thousands of dollars, Gaglardi claimed.

Allan Williams (Lib. — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said the minister did not understand welfare problems and the people on the alliance did not know how to cope with them.

Gaglardi did not know how many of the people were still in the jobs found for them, Williams said, adding that there was no one on the staff organization equipped to counsel people in need.

RAY OF HOPE

Williams said that "compared to what we have now, the previous minister (Dan Campbell) was a ray of hope . . . The minister doesn't deserve our support."

Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) summed up the NDP attack on Gaglardi by calling him "the albatross of the Social Credit cabinet" who was "hurting" not only the government but the people on welfare.

He said it was "incredible" that a "high-flying, high-living minister" with "plush-carpeted offices" in Victoria and an expensive office building in Vancouver's West End should be made the minister of welfare. He also referred to a "suite in the Hotel Vancouver" after having asked in interjections, "how much rent" Gaglardi paid for that accommodation.

LABEL STICKS

"The patronage label still sticks," Williams said, and it would continue as long as Gaglardi failed to disprove the NDP charges about his approach to the welfare job.

Gaglardi assured Dave Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) that the alliance is making steady efforts to reach businessmen and praised the co-operation he has been receiving from them. He also said co-operation from social workers "by and large" has been good, as it has from unions he has dealt with.

Brousson said that as a Vancouver businessman the only contact he had with the alliance is from hearing Gaglardi on radio "hotline" programs.

EMPIRE BUILDERS

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) suggested that social workers too often are more dedicated to maintaining their "empires" than to helping people with new approaches.

Capozzi suggested something of a "worker's anonymous" system whereby welfare recipients who get jobs after several years of idleness should be helped by other workers to endure in the difficult readjustment period. It could take the form of making sure the worker gets picked up in the mornings, for example, he said.

He said it would require co-operation of both unions and businessmen to make the idea work.

Opposition MLAs attacked Gaglardi for using the terms "deadbeats" and "kooks" to apply to certain persons out of work.

Gaglardi replied that the reason some people would be removed from the welfare rolls would be to give those really in need more.

DAY-CARE AID

Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby North) said frustration was growing among lower income groups because of a lack of communication with the minister. She also called for greater aid to day-care centres from the government.

Barrett blasted Gaglardi for a statement he allegedly made that he was doing "such a good job" as minister of welfare that he would be getting his jet back. "That is the final insult," the NDP leader said.

There was not one single shred of evidence that Gaglardi was doing his duty, Barrett said. The minister had not met with the United Appeal or with the School of Social Work, the NDP leader added.

ELDERLY DESERVING

Barrett said that the government should increase the maximum in old age assistance to $175 from $150. "If anyone deserves better housing, income, and protection from inflation, it is the elderly."

The minister's salary and three other votes of the newly-named department of rehabilitation and social improvement were passed by the legislature during four hours of discussion.

The house adjourned at 5:45 p.m. until Wednesday.

Bennett Rejects Charges Of Public Funds Misuse

Premier Bennett labelled "stupid" charges that he spent public funds campaigning for Social Credit candidates in the 1968 feferal election.

Asked Thursday about the charges made by Liberal Leader Pat McGeer, the premier said he was traveling on public business during a period in which he also worked on behalf of federal Socred candidates.

FOUR RIDINGS

News reports at the time showed Bennett campaigned in four constituencies between June 11 and June 22. These were Okanagan Boundary, Okanagan-Kootenay, Kootenay East and Fraser Valley East.

All four Socred candidates lost in the June 25 election.

Reports also indicated the premier mainstreeted, taped television commercials, addressed campaign rallies and chamber of commerce meetings on behalf of the candidates.

"The premier is always the premier," Bennett told reporters in explaining that he was on public business and campaigned only when he happened to be in an area where the opportunity arose.

He described McGeer's charges as "stupid" and typical of the Liberal leader.

BEHAVIOR HIT

Meanwhile McGeer was accused by George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney) of "reprehensible" behavior in making the charges against Bennett and two other cabinet ministers outside of the public accounts committee.

Mussallem is chairman of the committee whose last meeting McGeer said he boycotted because it was being held in secret.

McGeer charged that Minister Without Portfolio Pat Jordan and Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi also spent public funds with no indication they were on public business during 1968.

Musallem said if McGeer had followed parliamentary procedures he would have made his charges in the committee instead of "in the corridors and on the news media."

City Police Display To Inform Public

If you are doubtful about some driving and traffic regulations, the point system or aspects of compulsory automobile insurance, you will find the answers at the Victoria city police exhibition next week.

It opens Monday on the fourth floor of the Bay and will run until Saturday.

Police officers will be there to help motorists seeking advice and information on all aspects of driving.

At a B.C. Telephone Co. booth on defensive driving, a motorist may also test his driving ability by answering a carbon-copy questionnaire. After completing the form, he tears off the first sheet and reads the answers on the second.

ALL ASPECTS

The exhibition takes in every aspect of police work — crime, education and community work. It represents more than a month's work and planning by co-ordinator Sgt. James L. Smith. He was assisted by Sgt. Ron Bentley and Sgt. Scotty Grant.

"After seeing a similar exhibition, I thought it would be an excellent idea if we had a similar exhibition here showing some of the facets of police work that are not so familiar to the public," said police chief John Gregory.

One of the big attractions will be demonstrations on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday at noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. by Vancouver city police Dog Sabre II.

TOP DOG

Sabre has been named the "dog of the year" because he has won the top award in police service dog competitions in the province. His handler is Constable G. C. Thompson.

One booth features a historic display which includes many old police relics, such as badges, ledgers dating back to 1860, old photographs and nightsticks.

One of the most interesting nightsticks is a decorated one which was used in England between 1840 and 1850. It was donated to the department.

There is also a desplay of Norris' cartoons depicting policemen, and a booth showing weapons used in armed robberies and bank holdups.

BOGUS BILLS

Other exhibits include counterfeit money with information on how to distinguish between good and bad bills.

Visitors will also be able to listen to police calls which have been taped for the exhibition. The object is show them how patrol cars get orders and how they are dispatched.

One display features the police department's most modern motorcycle.

The organizers of the show forgot nothing. They even included a recruiting booth where interested young people can obtain information on joining the force.

Government Holiday

The provincial government offices will be closed all day Monday.

EXTRA-LONG BREAK TAKEN BY MLAs

Most out-of-town MLAs headed home for an extra-long weekend Thursday night after the legislature adjourned at 5:45 p.m. until 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Adjournment means the legislature will sit after Easter for the first time since 1951. The session is expected to wind up next Friday, with a possibility it will run over until Saturday.

Deaf Man Perfects Tiny Hearing Aid

OFFERS FREE MODEL (not an actual hearing aid)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—A remarkable tiny hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and represents a new, unusual design idea in a product to help hard of hearing.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This new hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write to Anderson Hearing Electronics, 1320 Blanshard St., Victoria.

U.S. Army 'Biggest Recruiter' for Anti-Draft Office

By FRANK GRAY

TORONTO (CP) — By any businessman's standards, the Toronto Anti-Draft Program is a going concern.

Under directors William Spira, a 48-year-old businessman, and Bernard Jaffe, a 24-year-old draft dodger from New York, the program is counselling nearly 40 young American immigrants a day.

This is nearly triple the volume of persons counselled when the organization was first started as the Student Union for Peace Action more than three years ago.

Because of the heavy demand put on its facilities, the program moved from its crowded two-room office to an equally crowded five-room basement headquarters nearby in the city's north end.

It now employs five full-time workers at $50 a week, its 98-page Manual for Draft-Age Immigrants is in its fourth edition with 45,000 copies in print, and assistance from Canadian church groups is on the increase.

DESERTERS INCREASE

Director Spira said that with the mounting influx has come a shift in the ratio of draft dodgers to military deserters.

"Now, almost two of every three young men coming to us from the United States is a deserter; it used to be the other way around," he said in an interview.

"One reason, I think, is that the methods of avoiding the draft without leaving the U.S. have become more refined. A simple change of address or an appeal of the draft classification really slows down the whole drafting process."

Mr. Spira, a native-born Austrian who emigrated to the U.S. in 1938 and moved to Canada in the early 1950s, noted a few of the differences between draft dodgers and deserters.

NOT ALL OPPOSED

"The difference between the two is that the draft dodger usually encounters the anti-war movement in college; the deserter is often a married man and, lacking that kind of educational background, doesn't encounter this sentiment until he is in the army.

"I guess you might say then that the army is our biggest recruiter," he said.

"Most of the deserters I've talked to not only object to the war in Vietnam, but to the brutalization of young people in the service—those who simply go along with the military game because it's what they're brought up with."

But Mr. Spira conceded that not all the young immigrants support such issues as getting out of Vietnam, civil rights and gun control.

"A little more than a year ago, we got one pair here wearing George Wallace buttons. Their reason for deserting was 'Why should I get myself killed for an administration full of Commies—they should use the bomb and get the war over with.' But we don't get too many of those."

Relatively few Negroes appear at the anti-draft program's office, he said.

"I'm not sure why this is except that most blacks who desert or dodge the draft probably hide in the big city ghettos. They don't have to leave the country to find a safe refuge."

TOTAL NOT KNOWN

How many such immigrants are in Canada?

He could only estimate the number at between 30,000 and 40,000. The U.S. consulate here says it has no official records either, but uses a figure ranging between 10,000 and 30,000. And organizations such as the New York-based Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam put the number at anywhere between 30,000 and 80,000.

A U.S. consulate official here said:

"We used to get four or five persons a day coming in here asking what would happen to them if they went back home. We told them that they would be inducted immediately and no charges for breaking the law would be laid against them. A few took our advice and returned.

"But now few ever come in any more. . . . On the other hand, we know the desertion rate is increasing. . . ."

One thing is certain: the Vietnam war has had a drastic effect on the migration of people between the two countries.

Canadian immigration department figures for the year ending June 30 show that in 1965, 40,013 Canadians emigrated to the U.S. This figure decreased steadily to a total of 15,722 in 1969.

Conversely, figures for the calendar year showed 1964 immigration to Canada from the U.S. at 12,565. By the end of 1968 it had risen to 20,422.

NAOMI WALL . . . one of five counsellors

Doubts have persisted about the vulnerability of young American immigrants in Canada to U.S. authorities.

In a 1968 speech in Calgary, Frank Kossa, a secretary in the U.S. selective service system, declared that the RCMP and FBI were co-operating to expose organizations aiding draft dodgers.

The U.S. consulate here denied knowledge of such a pact, and the RCMP noted:

"There has been no change in our policy towards draft dodgers. If they behave as responsible immigrants, there are no problems.

"We do visit those persons, however, whose whereabouts has been sought by the FBI. But this is only to determine their whereabouts, their status as immigrants and if, in fact, they are in Canada."

CLARIFIED IN HOUSE

Mr. Spira said the Toronto program has not been bothered by the police. He felt that any doubts about Canada's policy regarding draft dodgers and deserters was clarified May 22, 1969, when Allan MacEachen, minister of manpower and immigration, told the House of Commons:

"An individual's status with regard to compulsory military service in his own country has no bearing upon his admissibility to Canada either as an immigrant or as a visitor; nor is he subject to removal from Canada because of unfulfilled military obligations in his country of citizenship."

Mr. MacEachen noted the Visiting Forces Act, however, which says that persons who desert foreign forces while such forces are visiting Canada will be subject to arrest and return to their command.

Alan Borovoy, director of the Canadian Civil Liberties Union, called for a reaffirmation of Canadian policy from the immigration department so that minor officials who deal directly with American immigrants "would be less inclined to assert their own prejudices."

Prithee Privy Would'st Be With Me?

SENRI HILLS, Japan (Reuters) — The experts miscalculated, and the great toilet shortage has hit Expo '70.

Officials at Japan's world exposition, which opened here March 15, have reported numerous complaints from irate toilet-goers forced to wait in long lines for the privilege.

Throughout the site 813 males and a similar number of females can use the facilities at any one time.

This, explained officials, followed a scientific study which indicated men use toilets every 2½ hours and women every four hours.

Even if 600,000 people visited the Expo site in one day there should in theory have been no problem.

So why the toilet shortage?

"Maybe it's because of the current cold weather," ventured one official.

That's a Volkswagen?

That's a Volkswagen.

Honest.

The Volkswagen Notchback.

And while it doesn't bear the slightest resemblance to a Volkswagen, it does bear some terrific similarities:

Like gas economy. Up to 30 miles on a gallon of regular.

An air-cooled engine that gets by without water or antifreeze.

And workmanship you'd expect to find only in a...well, Volkswagen.

The Notchback also has a few things you wouldn't expect to find in a Volkswagen:

Like electronic fuel injection. (A $300 option on some fancy priced cars.)

A Porsche-type rear suspension.

A more powerful engine. (The Notchback cruises at better than 80.)

It has cushy bucket seats.

Disc brakes in front.

An optional fully automatic transmission.

And, luxury of luxuries, an electric clock.

What's more, you get all of this for less than $2700.

No doubt about it.

That's a Volkswagen.

Prime Rate Cut In Canada Soon?

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prime lending rate reductions in the United States this week sent Canadian stock markets to their second-best weekly gains of 1970.

After starting the week slowly—declining slightly Monday and rising moderately Tuesday—markets soared ahead in active trading Wednesday, continuing to advance Friday.

Prime rate reductions to eight per cent from 8½ by several American financial institutions, including the Bank of America, touched off the activity during the last two sessions.

A reduction in U.S. prime rates—the interest charged to a bank's best customers—could indicate an easing in the tight credit restrictions that have depressed North American markets since last June.

Prime rates had been pushed to a record high 8½ per cent by the U.S. and Canadian governments to reduce the availability of money in both countries in an attempt to fight inflation.

In recent months markets rose on any rumors of prime rate reductions but fell back just as quickly when nothing materialized.

Some analysts feel a cut of about one-quarter point in Canadian prime rates may be just a few weeks away.

SOVIET INVITATION ACCEPTED BY FORD

DETROIT (WP)—Henry Ford is going to Moscow April 12 because the Russians apparently are still looking for help from the Ford Motor Co. in building an auto induatry.

The industrialist, board chariman of the world's second biggest auto firm, was invited to Russia "for a series of discussions." The visit is expected to last about a week.

There is no agenda set yet but the meetings obviously will deal with the auto business. The invitation came from the Soviet ministries for science and technology. It was sent through diplomatic channels two weeks ago.

U.S. Interest Cut Aids Bond Market

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Canadian bond market closed with considerable gains following news of prime rate reductions in the United States this week.

The market opened the short trading week with a lacklustre tone but sprang forward on Wednesday when prime rate figures of major U.S. financial institutions were cut to eight per cent from 8½.

Among the leading institutions to announce the cut were the Irving Trust Co. of New York and the Bank of America.

Industrial Acceptance Corp. introduced a new issue Tuesday totalling $15,000,000.

The 9½-per-cent Oct. 15, 1992, issue is retractible to Oct. 15, 1982 and was sold at par to yield 9½ per cent.

Dealers said reception on the market was good and was sold almost immediately but has not been cleared for trading.

Dealers say the market is showing a firm tone and should hold for at least a while.

Day-to-day money was available at 6¾ per cent.

Three-and six-month treasury bills traded at 6.97 and 6.74 per cent, respectively.

Profit-Takers Reaped Big Harvest

NEW YORK (AP) — A drop in interest rates, signalling progress in the fight against inflation, inspired the stock market to rally spectacularly this week.

The surge got under way Tuesday after a sharp fall in short-term interest rates. Then on Wednesday came what Wall Street had long awaited—a cut in the bank prime lending rate.

The reduction in the prime rate—the interest charged the biggest and most credit-worthy borrowers—to 8 per cent from a record 8½ per cent was initiated about mid-day by Irving Trust Co. of New York. Other major banks quickly followed.

The market immediately erupted with its biggest gain in two years, in heavy trading.

AVERAGE JUMPS

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 16.37 points Wednesday on top of its 10.16 advance of Tuesday. This average closed the week Thursday—stock markets were closed Good Friday—at 791.05, up 27.39 for the week.

The other major averages also posted good gains. The Associated Press 60-stock average advanced 7.9 to 278.8. The New York Stock Exchange index of 1,200 common stocks went ahead 1.26 to 50.03. Standard and Poor's 500-stock index was up 2.86 to 89.92.

The rally faded Thursday, but analysts said this was not unexpected. Profit-takers moved in to reap the harvest of big gains in the two previous sessions, and there was some portfolio lightening in advance of the long weekend.

Of 1,738 issues traded on the Big Board during the week, 1,278 rose, and 326 fell.

VOLUME SOARS

Volume for the holiday-shortened week totalled 45,035,780 shares, exceeding the 44,639,760 shares traded in five sessions in the previous week. Volume on Wednesday was 17,500,000 shares, highest since last Dec. 31.

Among the biggest gainers for the week were Telex 11¾ to 128½; Commercial Solvents 6⅝ to 34⅛; General Electric 4¼ to 74⅛; Xerox 3⅝ to 94, and Westinghouse Electric 3⅝ to 67.

The five most-active issues on the New York Stock Exchange were: TWA, off ⅛ to 17⅞ on 407,600 shares; Great Western Financial, up 1¼ to 53⅛; Texaco, unchanged at 27½, and General Motors, up 4⅞ to 75½.

The five most-active issues on the American Stock Exchange were: Career Academy, off 1¾ to 12 on 602,200 shares; Milgo Electronics, up 14½ to 73½; Reserve Oil, up ½ to 9⅝; Sequoyah Industries, up ⅛ to 5¼; and Syntex, up 1⅝ to 34¼.

Wall, Redekop

Wall and Redekop Corporation Ltd. has reported net earnings of $482,251 for the six months ended Jan. 31, an increase of 44 per cent over the comparative period a year ago.

Net earnings for the company which deals in real estate, lumber and building products, poultry and farming, were equal to 26.5 cents a share compared with 19 cents.

Trans-Canada

Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. cite the increased cost of short term borrowing as a factor in the drop in net income from $12.6 million in 1968 to $9.27 million in 1969. Other causes were higher prices paid for gas from Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co., start-up problems at Great Lakes Gas Transmission Co., extended shutdown of its northern Ontario system and delays in completion of processing facilities.

Revenues from operations totalled $232.4 million, up from $195.65 million. Per share earnings were $1.12 compared with $1.53 in 1968.

Pine Point

Pine Point Mines Ltd. has reported net earnings for 1969 of $17.87 million or $396 a share, a decline of $3.154 million or 70 cents a share from 1968.

Company President D. D. Morris said in an annual report to shareholders the decline was due mainly to the lack of high transportation charges and a substantial increase in depreciation and depletion charges related to the company's Sphinx mine.

The company reported that 1969 sales amounted to $42.917 million compared with $38.9 million in 1968.

Acklands

Financial results of Acklands Ltd., Winnipeg-based national distributor of auto parts, hardware, machinery, equipment and electronics goods, declined last year by 17 cents a share to $1.12.

Sales were up to $134.9 million from $116.7 million and net profit in the year ended Nov. 30 was $3.17 million against $3.37 million in 1968.

Earnings were restated for the year previous in order to comply with Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants guidelines.

U.S. TRADE SURPLUS UP SHARPLY

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Boosted by record exports, the United States trade surplus rose sharply in February to $372,500,000, the commerce department reported Friday.

The surplus compared with one of $55,500,000 in January and a $357,500,000 deficit in February last year.

Seasonally-adjusted exports rose 9.8 per cent to $3,628,000,000 over the previous month and exceeded the previous record of $3,372,000,000 in August, 1969.

Imports rose at a slower pace, increasing 0.2 per cent to $3,255,000,000 over January.

Northwest Trade Group Parley Set

The spring conference of Pacific Northwest Trade Association at Portland, Ore., will feature an address by Indian and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien April 20.

Speaking at the first-day luncheon, Chretien will discuss Canada's North as it relates to the conference theme: The 1970 — Decade of Challenge and Change.

The needs of energy-producing industries, mutual interest of the U.S. and Canada in nuclear power and environmental effects will be discussed by specialists, including a member of the Sierra Club, a Canadian industrialist and a member of the joint committee on atomic energy.

Production and transportation of Pacific northwest resources to the U.S. midwest and overseas markets; the role of Alaska, northern Canada and the Pacific northwest; a continental energy policy and the role of pipelines, also will be outlined.

The second day program will include the subjects: Environmental Hysteria and Nuclear Energy, and The Economic Outlook and its Application to Pacific Northwest Industries.

SPEAKERS

Among speakers will be California Republican Representative Craig Hosmer, of the joint committee on atomic energy and the Republican conference on nuclear affairs; president E. D. La Borde, of La Borde Petroleum Ltd., Calgary; ex-economic commissioner for Alaska Frank Murkowski; Husky Oil Ltd. president Gene Roark, of Calgary; Bruce Willson, president of First National City Bank, New York, and Ralph H. Millsap, vice-president Portland General Electric Co.

PNTA, which held its fall conference in Victoria last year, selected its theme "to offer business and civic leaders a forum for the discussion of those things which are most likely to influence their policies and decisions in the years that lie ahead."

Bendix

The proposed takeover of American Forest Products Corp., of San Francisco, by Bendix Corp., Detroit, has been approved by their boards of directors and is now subject to stockholder endorsement.

Bendix is already diversified into auto parts, electronics and aerospace industries.

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

Uninitiated Must Pay Penalties

As any real estate agent will tell you, buying a home is one of the soundest investments you can make.

Paying cash for it is even better, from a tax point of view. This is particularly true if one also owns interest bearing investments.

It all stems from the fact that if you earn any interest income, you pay tax on it. But if you have interest expense, the interest may not be deductible.

Under tax law interest paid on borrowed money (e.g. a mortgage or bank loan) is only deductible if you use the borrowed money to invest in an income producing asset, say, bonds or company shares.

A house is a non-income-producing asset, so any interest you pay on your home loan mortgage can't be deducted as an expense.

Thus the man who sells his house and buys another has a predicament.

Suppose he owns his house, clear title, worth $30,000 and wants to sell it and move into an identical home in another neighborhood.

He sells it for $30,000 receiving $10,000 in cash and takes back a mortgage for $20,000. He charges seven per cent interest on the mortgage.

Next he buys a home for the same price and pays $10,000 down and gives back a mortgage to the owner for $20,000 at seven per cent.

By the end of the first year he has collected $1,400 in interest from the mortgage he owns, and he's paid out about $1,400 interest on the mortgage he owes.

TAXABLE

The $1,400 in interest he receives is taxable while the $1,400 he pays isn't deductible. If he earns $10,000 per year, his $1,400 interest income is taxed at 30 per cent making a tax of $420.

It may seem weird, but all this man has done is sell his home and buy another identical one. He hasn't got any money in his pocket, yet he's $420 poorer each year for it all.

That's why one is wise to use very extra dollar he has to pay off his mortgage, rather than invest his money. The tax cost of investment in these circumstances is too high.

Another case in point. Suppose a man buys a $20,000 home. He pays $5,000 down and assumes a 20 year mortgage for $15,000 at seven per cent. At the same time, he invests the same amount of money in an investment that yields eight per cent per annum.

Assume that over the 20 year period his income from employment averages $12,500. He is married with two children.

During this time he pays out $12,500 in non-deductible interest and receives $15,000 of taxable interest.

His tax on this is about $5,200.

So even though he invested his own money at a higher rate than he was paying himself, his net after-tax loss is still over $2,000.

TOO FEW KNOW

Too few people are aware of these rules. Our mythical home buyer could have saved almost all his tax if he had changed his timing.

For example, he should have paid cash for his home, then later borrowed money by mortgaging his house, and used the borrowed money for investment. Then, although the investment income is still taxable, the interest payable on his mortgage is deductible. The reason: because it's interest paid on money borrowed to earn income.

The cost of a 7½ per cent mortgage for many people is about 10 per cent per annum because they must first earn the money, pay tax on it and still pay the 7½ per cent interest.

The system deserves criticism when it produces this result. Those who are tax knowledgeable can arrange their affairs to get the best tax position possible, and this is perfectly proper. But it seems quite indefensible that the uninitiated should pay these tax penalties.

In the U.S., partially in recognition of the fact that people aren't aware of the tax complexities, the law provides that all interest payments of any kind are deductible.

As a further encouragement of home ownership, the U.S. federal laws allows you to deduct from your taxable income all municipal real property taxes. This is eminently fairer than the Canadian tax treatment of homeowners, who must first earn their money, pay income tax on it, and out of what's left, pay their property taxes. It's nothing less than double taxation. But until the tax law is changed, homeowners ought to take a close look at their tax position arising from the interest payments on home mortgages.

Oil Controls Delay Urged By Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Walter Mondale (Dem. Minn.) said Thursday that 25 senators have asked President Nixon to defer the mandatory controls he has put on Canadian oil imports.

Mondale said the limiting of imports to 395,000 barrels a day is disturbing and seemed to be a backward step and an affront to Canada.

Mondale had said in testimony before a Senate subcommittee last week that presidential action in applying a quota was done in undue haste and without regard for consumer opinion.

President Nixon issued the proclamation concerning formal but temporary limits on Canadian oil March 10.

Tuesday 48 members of the House of Representatives sent a letter to Nixon advising him of their disappointment with what they termed his failure to implement the recommendations of his cabinet study group on oil-import control.

Representative Lee Hamilton (Dem. Ind.) said in putting the letter into the Congressional Record that "last year the American consumers paid an extra $5,000,000,000 for oil products due to present restrictions on oil imports."

The majority of the cabinet-level committee on oil policy, after working a year, urged replacement of the present quota system on imports with a system of tariffs. Nixon, in releasing their report, neither accepted nor rejected outright their recommendations, but instead named a new body to advise on oil policy.

RANDOM NOTES FOR WATCHING TV

By WALTER McKINNON

History Is Alive and Well and Living in Duncan, B.C., reads the listing. We're interested so we read on.

It's a publicity release from Cowichan Valley Forest Museum, to let us know the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will be presenting half an hour of film Monday afternoon at 4:30 p.m. (Channels 2 and 6) on the collection of machinery and artifacts from the impressive past of West Coast logging on display at Duncan.

The footage was filmed at the Forest Museum in the summer of 1969.

And still on the local scene, Sealand's white killer whale will definitely be featured on a coming Jacques Cousteau special. The filming is now complete, but when it will be aired remains to be decided.

Tonight

Been Here Before Department

It's convention time for the Fraternal Order of Raccoons (JACKIE GLEASON, 7 p.m., Channel 8; 7:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12.) and Ralph (Gleason) is determined to attend. But he's financially embarrassed and the trip depends on prying some cash out of wife Alice.

Andy Williams (7:30 p.m., Channel 5) plays host to singers Ken Berry, Peggy Lipton and The Temptations. Andy sings such standards (for him) as English Country Garden, God only Knows, Climb Every Mountain and Proud Mary.

Every private eye show tries at least one blindness episode. And Mannix (10 p.m., Channel 7) is no exception. After a killer's bullet creases his skull, Mannix develops psychosomatic blindness. It's a bit far-fetched and a rerun besides, so you might want to skip it ... that's our recommendation.

Horse Opera Department

Wagon Train (6:30 p.m., Channel 7) has Flint and his Indian sidekick, Curly Horse, arriving at an army post. Ann Blyth has a featured role as the commandant's daughter, who accuses Flint of turning renegade.

Missionary Priest Jean Baptiste Lamy is featured in the semi-documentary Death Valley Days (7 p.m., Channel 5) as the show details his problems in attempting to Christianize the Indians.

Galloping Gourmet Graham Kerr (9 p.m., Channel 2) prepares baked mango and kills a fair amount of cooking wine in the process.

Beneath the Briny Department

After three years of examining underwater life for North America's sedentary television-viewing population Jacques Cousteau (7:30 p.m., Channel 4) takes time out for a bit of introspection, along with a view of Calypso activities and footnotes for future shows. It's mainly an idea show and Cousteau talks at length about his own particular philosophy of the sea.

Remember When Department

Perry Como, who seems to have all but retired from the entertainment business, is not 79 years old. He will be 57 in May.

Sunday

Canadian Chauvinism Department

This Land of Ours (5 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) shows ice jams being broken to clear the waterway from Montreal to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The captains and crews of Canada's icebraking fleet are in the spotlight.

Tommy Hunter (7 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) sings The Old Rugged Cross, Let the Good Times Roll and Sittin' Back Lovin' You. The Rhythm Pals, the Allen Sisters and Debbie Lorrie Kaye also do their bit to boost the Canadian Content figures.

Maestro Ivan Romanoff presents a global music tour (8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) featuring traditional and popular songs. His wife, Lesia Zubrack, folk singer Joso, actor-singer Paul Kligman and singer Eleanor Calbes also perform, in this one-shot special.

Family Shows Department

Walt Disney (6 p.m., Channel 2; 7:30 p.m., Channel 5) delves into the private lives of some of Nature's Strangest Oddballs. Prof. Ludwig von Drake, who's a bit of an oddball himself, narrates live action footage and animation about the planet's more unusual residents — iguanas, lungfish, kangaroos.

Bill Cosby (8:30 p.m., Channel 5) tangles with some blue language. It's the same show aired on Channel 2 Thursday night and if you missed it, tune in. Coach Chet Kincaid (Cosby) tries to subdue the language of his top basketball player in This Mouth is Rated X.

Old Stoneface Department

Ed Sullivan (8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12) filmed this show at the invitation of the surgeon-general of the United States. An Easter Sunday special, it includes Bobbie Gentry, impressionist David Frye, Gladys Knight and the Pips, Marty Allen, Nancy Ames and Buck Owens. They're performing in various hospitals to entertain Vietnam veterans.

. . . and Finally Department

Hoss Cartwright (BONANZA, 9 p.m., Channel 5) is a riot in an Easter Bunny costume. But Caution: Easter Bunny Crossing, as this episode is titled, doesn't quite come off. It has its funny moments, but they are fewer and farther between than a comic episode's funny spots should be.

Filmland Down But Not Out, Thanks to TV

By HARVEY PACK

NEW YORK — The depression which has hit Hollywood has given the entire entertainment industry the jitters. Stories of lines around the block at the Hollywood unemployment office are rampant and new versions arrive in New York on every jet.

There is talk of studios becoming parking lots although nobody seems able to explain where the cars are going to come from to fill these lots. Even the craft unions have made sharp concessions to management hoping to bring down production costs and start a new cycle of "Made in Hollywood, U.S.A." feature films.

The irony of it is that these same unions have contributed to this slump and perhaps made the glamorous film factory an anachronism.

* * *

Personally, we would not sell our property on Hollywood and Vine if we were fortunate enough to own any. We suspect the movie industry will bounce back once it recovers from its "Easy Rider" jitters and starts analyzing the grosses on Airport, or Cactus Flower, a couple of old-fashioned pictures which are scoring at the box office even though they were not aimed specifically at the youth market.

There are still many factors working in Hollywood's favor. Movie theatres need films and the best craftsmen in the world are still living there.

TV eats up a lot of studio fabricated celluloid which cannot be produced on parking lots. And, unlike most industries, automation cannot destroy it because you cannot automate creativity even though Universal has given it the college try.

* * *

Just about every expert concedes that the problem was caused by tying up too much capital in blockbuster-type films which either flopped or took so long to recoup costs studio finances were strained to the breaking point.

In addition many studios were gobbled up by calculating conglomerates who envisioned the movie industry as a cash flow business with which to underwrite other enterprises and are now unwilling to stand fast and fight like the old moguls did when the going got rough.

If Hollywood-style films have no market today why is it that the Late Show is still a big attraction even though most of the pictures were made before 1950 and have been shown on TV for years? If only flicks like Easy Rider can make it, how come revivals of Bogart, Tracy, Gable, the Marx Brothers or W. C. Fields not only attract audiences to theatres which specialize in such films ... but young audiences at that?

Certainly retrenching is in order but let's not start the funeral just yet. Gone are the days when a Louis B. Mayer would receive a phone call from a major theatre chain asking if he had a Gable-Turner flick for holiday release and then put such a picture in production the same day utilizing whatever sets were standing on the MGM lot.

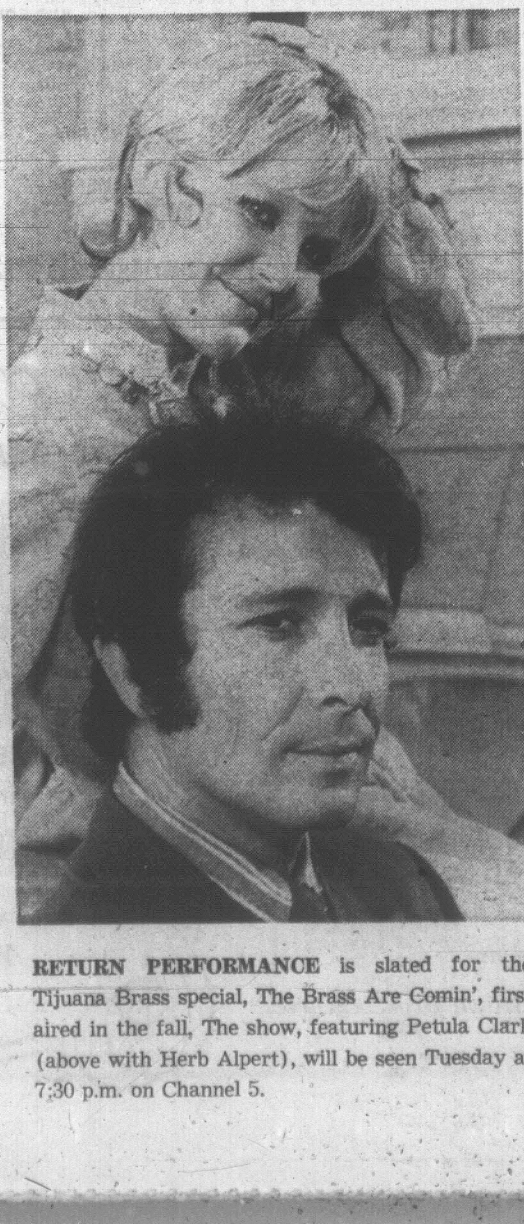
* * *

Gone too are the more recent days when $10 million can be sunk into a picture based on the biography of an actress 90 per cent of the movie audiences never heard of.

Somewhere in the middle of the two eras is the battleground where the new breed of Hollywood executive must take his stand.

They rolled up the sidewalks and buried the community when TV began keeping people away from the movie palaces, but that depression ended when the enemy not only refinanced the studios by buying up the old films but created a new prosperity with the TV film series. Perhaps this time the panacea will be the demands of Pay-TV, the dreaded ogre the movie theatres are currently attacking.

The most ironic aspect of the Hollywood depression is that the social event of the season ... at least for the people still gainfully employed ... is the upcoming auction by MGM of furniture, props and assorted paraphernalia from its illustrious past. Perhaps the substance of Hollywood's death wish can be seen in the fact that they'd rather sell Gable's film wardrobe to a collector than diligently scour the countryside for another Gable.



RETURN PERFORMANCE is slated for the Tijuana Brass special, The Brass Are Comin', first aired in the fall, The show, featuring Petula Clark (above with Herb Alpert), will be seen Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

A MUSICAL JOURNEY around the world on Channels 2 and 6 at 9 p.m. Sunday will feature (left to right) Lesia Zubrack, Joso, Ivan Romanoff and Eleanor Calbes. Some Travelling Music, Please, will feature popular and folk music from around the globe.

'CHILDREN'S' SPECIAL SERIES PILOT

Hot Dog Hot New Property

NEW YORK — How does the lead get into the lead pencil? Come to think of it . . . is it lead? Where did the hot dog come from? Does pop corn grow? How does the white line get in the middle of the road?

Trivia questions? Perhaps. But, coupled with a few others, they form the basis of a delightful hour of entertainment which NBC telecast today as a children's special, perhaps because some pompous vice president was ashamed to admit the answers fascinated him.

The show is called "Hot Dog" and it was telecast on Channel 5 at 11:30 a.m.

Somewhere along the line that vice-president stumbled upon some other vice-presidents who confessed to enjoying the hour, and the network has assigned it a weekly berth in next season's Saturday morning schedule with even a bit of hope that it may be moved to an early evening time slot.

"Hot Dog" is the brainchild of Frank Buxton who spent several years as host of ABC's highly acclaimed educational series for junior viewers, "Discovery."

Buxton went around the world several times in behalf of that program and even the idea for "Hot Dog" was taking root in his child-oriented brain.

"I think it's because I don't have any children of my own that I've always had a great relationship with them," explained Frank. "Once you're a parent there are certain disciplinary responsibilities which eventually develop into a generation gap. I just love kids . . . and maybe I do think like one."

EX-COMEDIAN

A former nightclub comedian — he was a contemporary of Jonathan Winters and admittedly suffered by comparison — Frank is quite friendly both socially and professionally with many of today's big names in the field of humor. Therefore . . . with an eye on its series potential . . . when he was producing this first episode of "Hot Dog" he enlisted the aid of some friends, namely Woody Allen, Jo Anne Worley and Tommy Smothers.

The three guests improvised on the questions "Hot Dog" answers on film and, as you might imagine, Mr. Allen's comments made this Saturday morning a funny moment for parents within audio range of the set.

MANY QUESTIONS

"Personally I think Tommy's description of his childhood days when the family used to make pop corn is a beautiful bit of nostalgia and shows a side of Tom the public has never seen before," points out Buxton.

Buxton has already thought of enough questions to keep "Hot Dog" grilling for years. He hopes to be able to answer some of the queries young viewers will undoubtedly submit but by the time the fall series reaches the home screen at least the first six or seven shows will be completed.

Jonathan Winters — the man whose talent overshadowed comic Buxton into producing and directing . . . will be the host when "Hot Dog" becomes a series.

"Every day I think of some other little thing like how lead gets into a pencil which I want to put on film," he said as we drove out of NBC Burbank. "Why is the grass green? The sky blue? How do they get maple syrup out of tree? I can go on forever.

"Of course the maple syrup one is a personal choice. As you know, I'm from New Hampshire and I love the country up there. Watching them tap the trees always fascinated me and I know kids from other parts of the country have never seen anything like it."

HISTORIAN

Buxton is something of a historian of the halcyon days of radio and television as well as an old movie buff. He knows about every show which made it back when the ten inch tube was a novelty and programming packagers were merely trying to out-gimmick one another.

And one show we know he remembers was a thing called "You Asked for It" starring the late Art Baker because . . . in point of fact . . . "You Asked for It" was an adult "Hot Dog." But Buxton's show is more educational and, thanks to the comedians . . . does not take itself too seriously.

Tommy, Dick To Join ABC For New Show

By RICK DU BROW

Hollywood (UPI) — The Smothers Brothers, fired by CBS-TV last year, will have a new one-hour variety series this summer on ABC-TV.

This means the brothers now have made the rounds of all the networks in a relatively short time with their own show.

CBS, of course, is where they scored great success with their series before it slumped in the ratings, and before they were bounced following friction with the network.

Then, last month, they had a comeback with a one-hour special on NBC-TV. There was natural speculation that NBC might be considering them as series possibilities, but obviously nothing along these lines developed to fruition.

At any rate, the brothers now have made it to ABC-TV following their associations with CBS and NBC.

ABC's vice - president in charge of programming, Martin Starger, says of their new summer series: "We are hopeful that this will be the beginning of a long and successful relationship with them."

PAULSEN BACK

Returning with the brothers as a regular will be Pat Paulsen, who was with them on CBS. Paulsen currently has a weekly comedy series on ABC, a midseason replacement, but it has failed to arouse much excitement or interest, and is being cancelled.

The fact is that he is really better suited for spot duty than for lengthy comedy sessions in a show of his own. Like Jonathan Winters, he has a unique talent, and when it is exposed too much and too often it loses its unique appeal.

The Smothers Brothers summer series will have its debut July 8, and will be seen weekly at 10 p.m. on Wednesdays, bumping the Engelbert Humperdinck variety show, which will move to Saturdays, beginning July 11. The executive producers of the Smothers Brothers series will be the Smothers Brothers, naturally.

Contract Awarded

PENTICTON (CP) — L. S. J. Construction Co. of North Vancouver has been awarded a contract to enlarge the water quality control centres in Penticton and to build a tertiary sewage treatment plant to remove phosphates. Value of the contract is $249,000. The tertiary plant is expected to remove 90 per cent of the phosphates contained in sewage, a major pollutant of Okanagan Lake.

The new Mercedes-Benz 250: "At 80 mph, it's loafing."

The new Mercedes-Benz 250 is built to be driven, not just admired. As good as the 250 looks, it's no brittle showpiece. It was designed around people, not a styling theme. And on the open road it can run rings around its competitors.

The 250's top speed is comparable to any standard V-8, yet the engine delivers the fuel economy of a Six. This car was designed for European road conditions—where there are no speed limits—so it can't afford to be fragile. At legal speeds in Canada, the 250 is just loafing.

The 250's engine is built to aircraft tolerances. The bearings, for instance, are machined to 4/10,000ths of an inch. And, before it's installed, the engine is run-in for a minimum of one hour and 40 minutes. Maybe this engine is better than it has to be. Some critics have called the Mercedes-Benz 250 "over-engineered." It's true. And Mercedes-Benz is proud of it.

The new Mercedes-Benz 250 bristles with engineering innovations. A fully independent suspension system makes this 3,000-lb. sedan handle more like a sports car. Back road or superhighway, you're always in precise control. Standard equipment includes features like 4-wheel power disc brakes. And that handsome body is structurally sound: 10,000 welds squelch the squeals and rattles of conventional body bolts.

You owe it to yourself to look into the new Mercedes-Benz 250. It's on display in our showroom now. Come in for a demonstration drive today.

WEEKEND TV MOVIES

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

7 p.m. Channel 11: I'll See You in My Dreams (1952 Biography), Doris Day, Danny Thomas. A romantic biopic on the rise and success of songwriter, Gus Kahn.

9 p.m. Channel 5: My Six Loves (1963 Comedy), Debbie Reynolds, Cliff Robertson, David Janssen. Broadway star finds six abandoned kids living at her country home, decides to adopt them.

9 p.m. Channel 8: Arabesque (1966 Adventure), Gregory Peck, Sophia Loren, Alan Badel. Intricate British suspense comedy.

9 p.m. Channel 12: Come Blow Your Horn (1963 Comedy), Frank Sinatra, Lee J. Cobb. Broadway comedy successfully brought to the screen with Sinatra well cast as a playboy and Tony Bill as his hero-worshiping younger brother.

11 p.m. Channel 11: Driftwood (1947 Drama), Ruth Warrick, Walter Brennan, Dean Jagger. Slow-moving, sentimental drama about an orphan girl and her dog.

11 p.m. Channel 12: A Man Called Peter (1955 Biography), Richard Todd, Jean Peters. A brilliant performance by Richard Todd as Peter Marshall, who became a minister and rose to the high position of U.S. Senate Chaplain. Sermon scenes are standouts.

11:15 p.m. Channel 4: Double feature: Kiss Them For Me (1957 Comedy), Cary Grant, Jayne Mansfield, Leif Erickson. A trio of Navy war heroes arrive in San Francisco for rest and recreation, with accent on the latter, and Confessions of a Nazi Spy (1939 Drama), Edward G. Robinson, George Sanders. Well done propaganda melodrama about a weak link in the Nazi spy network. Dated, but still a grim reminder.

11:15 p.m. Channel 8: Carmen Jones (1954 Musical Drama), Dorothy Dandridge, Harry Belafonte. Despite some faults, this is a good film. Well sung by dubbed voices for the principals.

11:20 Channel 6: Arabesque (see above).

11:30 Channel 7: Double Feature: The Miracle of Fatima (1952 Drama), Gilbert Roland, Angela Clarke. Reverent account of a miracle that occurred in Portugal in 1917, and Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House (1948 Comedy), Cary Grant, Myrna Loy. Tired of city life, a married couple buys a run down country home — some hilarious moments in this smoothly produced comedy.

11:35 Channel 2: Ambush Bay (1966 Drama), Hugh O'Brian, Mickey Rooney. World War II yarn about U.S. marines on a secret mission in the Philippines.

SUNDAY MOVIES

6 p.m. Channel 12: Boy on a Dolphin (1957 Drama), Alan Ladd, Sophia Loren. The plot about the discovery of a sunken work of art is on an elementary level and offers no surprises — excellent photography.

9 p.m. Channel 4: The Chase (1966 Drama), Marlon Brando, Jane Fonda, Robert Redford. Lillian Hellman's drama centres on an escaped convict's return home, which fans flames of jealousy, bigotry and adultery.

11:35 p.m. Channel 2: Fanfare for a Death Scene (1964 Mystery), Richard Egan, Burgess Meredith. Ridiculous thriller about a secret government agent tracking down a vanished physicist.

12:15 Channel 4: One Foot in Heaven (1941 Drama), Frederic March, Martha Scott. This story of a minister's life is funny, sad, moving and interesting.

UNUSUAL ROMANCE is the basis for My Six Loves, tonight's NBC feature movie at 9 p.m. on Channel 5. Debbie Reynolds and Cliff Robertson star, Debbie as a musical comedy star and Cliff as a small-town minister.

WEEKEND SPORTS

TONIGHT

GAY BITS OF STRAW . . . . . . STILL PUT SPRING INTO A WOMAN

Easter Bonnets Bloom in Millinery No-Man's-Land

By JACK SCOTT

Yes, Virginia, Victoria's Easter Parade lives on. Just barely living, it's true. But it may be the last charming relic of a once-cherished tradition on the North American scene.

•

A reporter callously assigned to the no-man's-land of the city's millinery shops, a man selected for his coolness amid chaos, may now report that, weather permitting, large numbers of resolute ladies of the city will promenade under the classic, frivolous bonnet with all the ribbons on it when Sunday rolls around.

The giant computers are still digesting the statistics, but it may be revealed that the chapeau shoppes haven't done such business in recent memory, that seven out of 10 women covertly observed in the process of making up their minds were of an age to be somebody's grandmother, that each experimented with a mean average of 11.5 bonnets before reaching the irrevocable decision and that two out of three absolutely agree that there's just nothing like a gay little bit of straw to put spring into a woman's heart.

"I've had a new Easter hat every year for 55 years and I'm not stopping now." was the explanation of Mrs. Cora Hines who is, as it happens, a grandmother five times over. "Time was when we'd all take the streetcar to Beacon Hill Park after church to show off our finery. It was a grand sight. I still go every year in the hope that it will all happen again."

Mrs. Hines will be seen this year, come hell or high water, wearing a wide-brimmed pink straw with a matching pink organza sash, in which, it may be said, she looks like a million dollars, a superb example of the feminine mystique of economics since it cost a mere $22.98.

"A bonnet does wonders for your morale, especially at Easter, and please don't ask me why," was the explanation of Mrs. Margaret Murray, who will be 70 years of age next Tuesday and who, in a lacy, beige, wide-brimmed Tuscan straw, at $16.98, will look maybe 20 years younger. "I still have possibly three dozen hats from other Easters, including a Eugenie with a feather two feet high," said Mrs. Murray, "but any woman will tell you: there's no hat like a new hat."

Could just be that this sort of thinking might revive a dying tradition.

"Hats are definitely coming back," says Mrs. Rita Clarke, a woman of absolutely bottomless patience who has lightened the winter-worn spirits of thousands of the customers of Miss Frith's Millinery Shop and wouldn't be seen dead, herself, without an eye-stopping little something atop. "More and more young women are following the trend of Paris and Rome. It isn't just that it's the new style, but every woman knows that she's a little bit more attractive in a hat."

•

Sure enough, there were at that moment two young ladies getting the message—one with a navy blue straw with a splash of white, pink, red and mauve organza flowers ($28.98)—and they were quick to agree.

"My boy friend has just traded his motorcycle in on a car," said one, all of 22, "and, gosh, I'm glad to get rid of that crash helmet. It did nothing for me."

"What's an Easter parade?" asked the other, clearly born 60 years after Irving Berlin, though the ancient tunesmith might well have composed a musical tribute to the velvet and organza cloche she was trying on.

There was a lone man in the Bay's hat department. He bought a dark brown fedora. It did nothing at all for his looks or his morale.

. . . But Oh! The Glories of Hair

He Dropped Out —Of Dope Scene

Many parents are both frightened and baffled by the drug scene. Stories they hear and read leave them with more questions than answers. Little is heard from the young people who have used drugs.

Julian Martin is 17 years old, will be 18 next month. He has long hair, lives in Gordon Head and is a grade 12 student at Mount Douglas high school.

For two years he has used them all—marijuana, LSD, methedrine and the rest — everything but heroin.

He stopped. In the article below, written to his contemporaries, and appearing in the school newspaper, he analyses why kids take dope and why he stopped.

By JULIAN MARTIN

This expression of opinion was based upon, and written because of personal experiences and involvement of the last few years.

I direct it at my friends and companions and hope I have not instantly turned you into enemies. My purpose is to make you "turn off" and "tune in" or simply, convince you to quit using dope and direct your many talents and energy into worthier spheres.

The use of drugs by the "flower children" of the early 1960s was a grand experiment that failed.

They regarded dope as the means to an end — a possible medium for the development of new levels of consciousness. Their experiment backfired. Quickly, drugs began to be used for other reasons and today the great majority of users are abusing and crippling their power to change the fortunes of the world they will soon control.

If you are not too disgusted to continue, I hope you will read the following passages with great care and even greater honesty. Otherwise, read no further! You will not understand major portions of this article and just gain a false impression of what I am writing. So there!

How often have you wondered why you began using dope and why you continue its use? Most people began (and continue) for one or more of six reasons.

● Status — to prove courage, daring or originality.

● Curiosity — to try and experience that which everyone talks about — drugs.

● Romance — the seeming romantic sub-culture of the "heads" and their supposed philosophy of life.

● Influence of friends — friends talked you into it. They use dope, so should you.

● Boredom and escape — you are bored with present life patterns. You desire a means of escape from tensions and problems of the world.

● Mind Expansion — possibility of finding new dimensions of consciousness through drug use.

★ ★ ★

What's your reason? Honestly now!

None of these reasons are valid excuses. True, one usually gains status for originality, but taking dope or selling it are certainly not original — no status points for following a common fad.

Curiosity alone is not reason enough to take dope more than once. There is always some other factor involved.

Only the uninitiated or naive would sincerely believe that the world of the "heads" is anything but sordid, violent, capitalistic and plastic. No romance here!

Haight-Ashbury in San Francisco reminds one of Al Capone's Chicago — murder and brutality commonplace events. Very little love or brotherhood either, I'm afraid. Cliques are rampant and almost impenetrable.

Surely to say that your friends influence you is a feeble excuse — individuality was the password of the last decade.

Those who use dope because of their boredom with present life are those people who say they use dope "because I enjoy the feeling." There is so obviously some hidden reason.

Escaping the tensions of life by using dope is extremely dangerous. This is the quickest way to cause a drug dependency. One shouldn't close one's eyes to the fact that one can't cope. If this is your particular reason, find a less dangerous hobby such as "Russian Roulette."

I usually wonder about the person who tells me that he is trying to develop a new dimension of thought through drug use. This is definitely the most subtle excuse.

What is a "dimension of thought" or a "state of consciousness?" Very few people seem to have any definite idea. Even fewer people claim to have developed this "growth of consciousness."

★ ★ ★

In my humble estimation getting "stoned" causes an ordinarily temporary accentuation of certain emotions, senses and thought patterns and suppression of certain others.

When by prolonged drug use some of these effects become more or less permanent do they add up to conscious-expansion? I tend to think not.

Everyone hates to be made a "sucker" or to be laughed at, but every time you buy dope (in any quantity) someone is laughing at you.

Every time you "drop acid" or "blow some hash" someone is taking you for a ride. Some dealers of drugs become extremely rich and affluent — on your money my friend.

(Parasites, Mr. Lowther (Mount Douglas principal Jack Lowther) called them, and although I hate to, I must agree.)

I am convinced that the non-medical use of drugs destroys ambition, creativity, energy and tends to narrow one's judgment rather than enlighten it.

Most users of dope would have to admit to a loss of ambition and energy (what about you, or don't you care?), many take refuge in living the life of the supposed "hippie — irresponsible, lazy and unrestricted.

Those who fall into this state of thought decide that they have finally "made the scene" and contentedly close their minds to further opinion.

Those of you who exist in this space (and the number is large) are usually as closeminded as the mythical yet despised "straight cat" — a blind conservative gentleman who supports the mythical yet dreaded "Establishment" — a scene where initiative dies quickly from reactionary brainwashing.

According to these same "hippies," anything and anyone that doesn't fit in with the accepted customs and graces of the "cool people" (a nauseating term) is branded "uncool" and summarily rejected (i.e., if someone under 20 wears a tie, he is immediately pounced upon and asked why he wears it—"it seems so strange . . .")

And yet some still talk of the Establishment of the older generation with disgust and loathing.

Our generation will "inherit the earth" within the next 25 years. We will be the Establishment. Are we prepared?

In order to meet the menace (no fooling now) of the world's great problems: overpopulation, loss of resources, pollution, disease, racial strife, and the lack of international understanding, we must begin to work together.

Individuality was the theme of the 1960s; sadly enough, it was too often interpreted as irresponsibility.

Hopefully, Unity will be the keyword of the 1970s—all of us united in the knowledge that each person is using his individual "God-given" ability in the coming struggle towards some greater degree of world peace.

The use of drugs clearly hampers the realization of this goal. I am hoping that you will be the catalysts in this struggle.

Come together now.

Joe Pilot has a dream for Victoria — which is so elemental, so close to the roots of brotherhood, people may have trouble buying it.

He hopes young and old will work side-by-side to build themselves a park out of a brush-choked creek valley.

The stream is Colquitz Creek in the vicinity of Burnside Road, plugged with grass nurtured by pollution and hidden from the world by a jungle of scrub.

Joe fervently believes it could be turned into a magnificent park if enough people can share the dream and turn out to make it come true.

Work parties had already done some clearing along the creek between Hyacinth Park and Burnside. On the weekend of April 4-5 volunteers are needed to root out the dangerous stubble which stands like spear points in the wake of earlier work.

"I honestly believe Victoria's the only place where we can get people together on this," said the 34-year-old bachelor who bears a disconcerting resemblance to the standard portraits of Christ.

BIBLICAL FLAVOR

His dream has the flavor of the Bible in it too.

He sees the creek-park project as a step to meeting two great social needs — first, by taking a small but significant swat at the world-wide monster of pollution — and second, putting young and old alongside each other in a common cause where they are bound to meet, to talk, to nurture an appreciation for each other.

Both during and after the clearing job Joe suggests developing the park offers a perfect chance to blend the talents of young and old.

The heavy work will give the young a place to channel their energy. And the older people have the skills and talents of a lifetime to bring to it.

"All these retired gardeners walking around waiting to die. They could work here, have pride from really doing something and leaving something behind for others."

Other working bees have shown the spirit of the thing is reaching some people. At a session in December McDonald's Hamburgers provided 150 hamburgers and 150 hot apple pies for the toilers.

FREE DRINKS

The Tastee Freez people came up with five gallons of syrup to mix into drinks. Neighbors supplied buckets of water.

It's not all work. Some of the young people man guitars.

"Instead of doing something like going to a baseball game and watching 18 people play, we all play."

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please tell me why the Eiffel Tower in Paris was built?

A. It was built as part of the Paris Exhibition of 1889 and was designed by the French engineer and bridge builder Gustave Alexandre Eiffel (1832-1923).

Mixed-Media Happening Set for Uvic

"An unstructured and unscheduled collage of events, performances, and encounters, mixed media presentations, embarrassments . . . ."

That's one description of Event, a happening involving several University of Victoria departments Monday evening starting at 8 p.m.

Event will include students from the following departments: studio-visual arts, creative writing, music and theatre. Co-ordinator is arts teacher Dana Atsch.

CPR Pulls Fast Switch On Harbor Proposals

Revamping proposals for Belleville Street have come to a sudden halt after Marathon Realty pulled a last-minute switch in its plans presented to city hall.

Marathon, a subsidiary of Canadian Pacific Railways, presented the modified plans for facelifting the old CPR terminal to city officials Wednesday.

Thursday city council quietly but firmly tabled a bylaw designed to provide elbow room for the CPR proposals.

Marathon representative Lance Jefferson, although he hinted that his company could still go ahead "with a development", countered with a veiled threat that the CPR might now pull their summer Victoria-Seattle ferry service.

'WHAT WOULD HAPPEN?'

"I wonder how the merchants would like to lose $3.5 million a year?" he asked following Thursday's city council meeting.

"It might be a good idea to ask Victoria merchants what would happen if the Seattle run were stopped. It brings in 127,000 visitors every year."

Besides stating the company would go ahead with some sort of development on its property (design of that development is beyond city jurisdiction) Jefferson accused the city of trying to get all sorts of things done with our money."

'BOWLING ALLEY'

City officials, who term the latest CPR proposal "a bowling alley concept", remained unperturbed by Jefferson's charges and threat.

The bylaw council tabled would have reduced setback limits in the area from 90 feet to 45 feet. Without the set back CPR can still go ahead with a thin ribbon of development along the waterfront.

But even company officials admit it will be a poor looking development.

The switch in CPR plans took city planner Geoff Greenhalgh by surprise.

"We had worked out what we thought was a mutually acceptable proposal," Greenhalgh said. "The city was prepared to make certain concessions and the company had agreed to do certain things if those concessions were made.

"The latest proposal (received Wednesday) bore no relation at all to the scheme worked out and agreed upon."

Ald. Peter Pollen, chairman of the city's community planning committee, said Marathon had behaved "in a most insensitive fashion" and that after making a verbal commitment on certain issues had failed to come through "with a satisfactory undertaking."

He added that the city would not agree "to prostitute our environment for the benefit of a few big corporations."

PROMENADE CUT

Missing from the verbally agreed-to plan were proposals to convert the outer CPR wharf to a landscaped promenade provision for pedestrian access at various points of the over-all project; and an area of walkway at the water's edge.

Estimated cost of the concessions was $250,000. Marathon decided that would be too much.

Pollen had already described the proposal with promenade and walkways "a second best choice." He was referring to the original plans of Marathon which called for a close to $3 million face-lift.

This was later trimmed to $1.5 and later to $1 million.

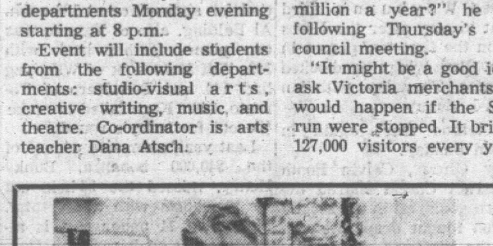
Price tag on the narrow strip of stores now planned for the old wharf area is not known.

'NOT THE BEST'

While hinting at withdrawal of the ferry service, Jefferson said he agreed that his company's latest proposals for Belleville Street "were not the best for the city or for us, but we have no alternative but to get on with something if we want to complete the project for this year's tourist season."

The ferry docks a few yards from the Marathon development and is expected to provide the bulk of the trade for the specialty shops.

The stores, and possibly a seafood restaurant, will be open only in the summer.



Arthur Mayse . . .

WHEN I WAS A BOY IN my father's house, my concept of God was unhazed by thought or theology. God was a supplementary father, Baptist by denomination, and gifted with awesome powers. He could see around corners and into minds, and he was more inclined to punish than to reward.

On Sundays, He required churchgoing. He might permit an afternoon walk on His day, but it must be a dress-up affair, and any activity that might be construed as fun was to be avoided.

•

It was a straightforward discipline, but a joyless one except at Christmas and Easter. Then Christ rather than stern Jehovah was in the ascendant, and my earthly father could substitute love, wonder and passion for the forbidding doctrine his congregations preferred.

For this God punished him . . . at least, I blamed God in those years, not realizing that men of harsh and narrow inclination see God as no more than a reflection of their own images.

They could accept Christ as the lamb of sacrifice and sing of fountains filled with Immanuel's blood. But I think now that in their secret hearts they disapproved of Him.

I tell you this out of remembered pain for my father. He was a simple man without unction or artifice, and he found more kindness outside his churches than within them.

When I was a boy, still in my father's house but older, I confused God with religion and turned my back on both. But I needed something—I couldn't give it a name—and as and when I could, went looking for it where others have also tried.

When a man applies perspective to his youth, a distortion takes place. Vision is refracted as light rays are by water. What seems clear in retrospect was actually vague, formless and deep-buried.

I would load a packboard and go into the Coast Range hills across the water from Vancouver.

Oftener than not, I started up by night, with my dog of those years for company. He would travel on his own feet until he became tired. Then he would whine to be picked up. Since he was small, I could drape him atop my pack, where he rode happily enough.

We would sleep for a while in the early morning, then push on with no particular goal or defined object. I can think of those trips now as lonely and unwise. But they didn't seem so then. To the extent that I served any defined want, it was simply to be part of the wild country for a weekend, or for a week if I had it.

My dog died, not in the hills but in the city, run over by a car.

Soon as I could get away, I headed out. No pack this time. Just what hard food I could carry in my pockets.

On the second evening away, I stopped for a breather in the bed of a summer-shrunk creek. Except for the whisper of water, all was very still. It was a time of waiting and expectation. I am no mystic, nor was I one then. But it seemed to me that something was shaping, and that some mystery of supreme import would be made plain.

But there was no revelation, only rocks and the thin strand of running water, and the dusk stealing up from the lowlands.

Nature has much to give, and perhaps there are men who have found God in nature. I would like to believe so. But those probings of hidden places solved no mysteries for me.

Nothing in my experience since has helped me reduce God into terms that my mind can grasp.

Yet somewhere along the way, and without knowing how or when, I have acquired a sense of God.

When I was a boy in my father's house, I tried to give God shape and substance. Now I am content with the mystery. In that I accept the fact of Christ and the validity of His teaching, I prefer to think of myself as a Christian.

I am aware that very many of the young today are involved in a search of their own for something that defies pragmatic answer. They may not find it, but if in the effort they turn their world into a better abode, I think they will be serving the purposes of God.

In the end, I have come back to the father-image. But a father more remote than a boy could conceive of, and master of not one universe but of the infinite.

I love Easter still. It is a festival keyed to the rhythms of an earth that sleeps to wake. Even more, it is a time of promise that calls to whatever faith in the triumph of light over darkness a man may possess.

The question remains. But for me, the sense of God is enough. I no longer feel that it is necessary for me to understand the mystery.

Bill WALKER

There is more than one way to do this sort of thing. One is to work, which is generally frowned upon in the profession. Another is to be like Arthur Mayse, and go fishing. Yet another is to spend a day at the track.

No, they are not all off and running. Not yet. Opening day at Ex-Park is not until April 10. But they are running. There are 72 horses on the grounds at Sandown Park, and training has been a daily chore there since Jan. 8.

That's when Alex Jack started this year's work.

Alex is a trainer, and owner, and clocker. He may have a few winners. He thinks so, as a trainer. He hopes so as an owner, and he can give you all the times to prove it as a clocker.

It is in the latter category that he is employed by the association. This is to keep the record straight. Nobody is allowed to sneak a word, as if they would. And none do. Because the word always gets around. The works, in turn, are relayed to racing headquarters in Vancouver where they are duly studied, published, and filed. This is the integrity of the jockey club in its relationship with the owners, and public. This is the official basis for comparison, and judgment.

From these figures you get a winner, an also ran, or a clinker.

Which is just what Alex Jack has got as an owner-trainer. But his "clinker" may be a winner. And likely will. Alex thinks so. And he does have an allowable pride. For this particular three-year-old has a nobility of its own. It is a chestnut gelding by Consider II with the completely uninspiring name of Wishaw Clinker.

●

That's where the historical significance cannot be overlooked. Wishaw, Scotland, is Alex Jack's birthplace, and Wishaw Clinker at one time was one of the most famous Collies in the land. Yes, Wishaw Clinker already is famous. It remains only for him to prove it, as a race horse.

Alex comes by his love for horses as naturally as anyone. His father was a bricklayer, and he is a boilermaker by trade. And horses just happen to have been his love almost all his life, especially since coming to Canada in 1910, and during his stay at Clayburn, Nanaimo, and latterly at Vancouver.

His son, Alan Jack, also is a trainer, of Honarium, among others of note.

Then there is Sky Runner, still a maiden at three, but don't count on it for long.

"Very promising," said Alex, who firmly believes there is much to be offered in return. He points to a five-eighths work in 1.07.4 under a hard hold as indicative of what's in store.

Suddenly a call: "Ready Alex?"

A work is to be recorded.

It was Yankee Fighter. He won only one race last year after a fine season in '68. Could he come back? The time for a half was 52 with the first quarter in .25.

"He wasn't getting hold of the track," Alex remarked. "He should do it in 49."

There was a murmer among the railbirds as First Theory worked a quarter with Moonlight Breeze. A son of Firbibbles, "This one has promise," Alex suggested. "He's a First Table colt."

They went head and head to the wire the time was .26. "That's fine, just the way I wanted it," said trainer Claude Sample, and co-owner Herb Cooper seemed satisfied. There had been a touch of class.

"To get the best out of a horse, you should have him run about 75-85 miles before the campaign begins," Alex explained of his training theories. "If you blow a horse out too soon, he's liable to go backwards from then on," he added.

●

Meanwhile Scalp Hunter worked three-eights in 38.1 and Mr. Bliss, a winner of three and $3,900 last season, did the half in .52.

"She's a tough little one," trainer Roy Jewell stomped harder on his cigar as the three-year-old filly, Elk Lake, eased up. "I think she's got the fastest work here for the quarter," he added.

"Yes, she'll be all right," said Danny Bothwell, who had worked the horse.

"Danny will be all right, too," said Alex of the 20-year-old rider from Gibson's Landing. "It's his second year and he'll get his change early in the meeting," he promised. "I think he'll do. He's got a good way with horses."

Meanwhile, back in the barn, there were a couple of others who may have some run when they are asked for it.

Lockett, a four-year-old bay gelding, owned by Billy Brown, has the fastest three-eights to date, 36.2.

But Alex showed a distinct fondness for another.

Midnight Dreamer, owned by Mrs. Trudy Rebbeck, ran down the track in last year's futurity, but he may be up the track this season. Alex pointed to a white spot on the shins. "See that," he said. "That happened in the futurity when he was close up. And he wasn't that badly beaten. I think we'll run him in the first three-year-old handicap."

So this was a part, a small part of one day at Sandown. But this was racing.

Or as Alex said:

You know there are some horses you can never figure. They never run to their works. They will break the clock in the morning, and break your heart in the afternoon.

This, too, can be a day at the track.

Painters Wrap Up McGinnis Honors

Bob Holness scored his second hat trick in as many nights Friday at Memorial Arena while leading Empress Paint to a 10-1 triumph over Victoria Automatic Transmission and the Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League playoff crown.

Painters took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series by downing VATs 7-5 Thursday at Pearkes Arena.

Holness scored three goals each night.

Fred Moulson, Brian Turnbull and Glen Vickers each added two goals while Sandy George chipped in a single during the rout on Friday. Doug Couch, Lonnie Restall, Turnbull and Vern Gibson added singles on Thursday.

Ric Hamilton averted a shutout for VATs in the final loss. Bob Ennis (2), Larry Todd, Hamilton and Dick Gibbons scored for VATs at Pearkes Arena.

MARAVICH GETS $1.9 MILLION PACT

ATLANTA (AP) — Pistol Pete Maravich, college basketball's "Player-of-the-Year", will play professional ball with Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association.

The announcement was made at a press conference by Lester Littrain, one of two lawyers who handled the negotiations for Maravich, a three-time All American at Louisiana State University.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but sources said Maravich signed for about $1,900,000, which would be the greatest amount ever paid a college athlete turning professional.

Maravich, who averaged 44.1 points a game in his three years at LSU and set a major college record of 3,667 career points, was initially drafted by Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association.

Carolina was reported to have offered a multi-year contract worth $2,000,000.

MORNING WORKOUT

Under grey morning skies, Sky Runner, maiden three-year-old chestnut colt owned and trained by Alex Jack, is held by pony boy Tony Costa after running five-eighths in 1:07.3 minutes under hard hold at Sandown Park workout. Looking on is Colleen Hague, who, with husband Bob, owns Coordinate, another four-year-old colt. See Bill Walker's column. (Times Photo by Bill Halkett)

Vernon Trailing In Junior Series

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP)—Weyburn Red Wings of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League defeated Vernon Essos of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League 3-0 Friday to take a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven Memorial Cup quarter-final playoff.

It was Weyburn's third straight victory after the Essos had won the first two games in Vernon. Red Wings deadlocked the series Thursday with an easy 11-1 victory.

The teams meet again in Weyburn Sunday.

Larry Giroux, Calvin Booth and Garnet Currie shared the Weyburn goals, all in the second

Vernon fought desperately to break the Weyburn shutout but were unable to outfox Weyburn goaltender Jerome Mrazek. Mrazek blocked 20 shots while Gary Osborne in the Vernon nets kicked out 32.

The B.C. champions were never in the game Thursday as Wings rang up an 11-0 lead before Alex Dick, a pickup from Vancouver Centennials, connected for the lone Vernon goal.

Booth and Greg Hubick each scored twice for Weyburn while Graeme Bennett, Bob Gerrard, Gary Leippi, Currie, Scott Smith, Bob Sperling and Wendell Bennett supplied singles.

CAMBRIDGE CRUISES TO VICTORY

LONDON (AP) — Cambridge University's eight led from start to finish to defeat Oxford in the 4¼-mile Varsity boat race today for the third straight year.

At the finish, Cambridge was about 2½ lengths ahead.

Cambridge has won 64 times and Oxford 51, with one dead heat, since the races began in 1829.

Golfers Robbed

PONTIAC, Mich (AP). — Avid golfer John Ponushis, who said he just couldn't wait to swing his golf club on an open fairway this season, was ordered at gunpoint Wednesday to drop his club. Two youths sprinted across the Pontiac Municipal Golf Course staging hit-and-run holdups. Police reported that eight golfers were robbed.

Laughing Boys Apply Pressure

MIAMI (AP)—Bob Menne can't afford to glance over his shoulder. There's a matched set of Latin laughing boys closing ground for the stretch run to a $40,000 top cheque in the National Airlines Open golf tournament.

Mexican Lee Trevino streaked around the County Club of Miami course in six-under-par 66 Friday and Puerto Rican Chi Chi Rodriguez shot 67—leaving both at nine-under 135 for two days' work.

Menne withstood pressure to back up his course record 64 of Thursday with a sharp 69, giving the unknown from Massachusetts a two-stroke lead with 36 holes on the docket.

Behind the front-running threesome is R. H. Sikes at 136, one behind Trevino and Rodriguez and three off Menne's blazing pace.

George Knudson of Toronto was among a group of seven tied for sixth place at 139 each. Al Balding, also of Toronto was two places farther back with 143, Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg had 144 and Ben Kern of Toronto, 146. Kern failed to make the cut for today's round.

Last year's surprise winner of the $40,000 bonanza, Bunky Henry, missed the 36-hole cut by two shots with a 146 total. Menne, at 11 under par, is already one shot lower than Henry's winning 10-under total of 278 from 1969.

Eight teams, including Lake Cowichan, are expected to compete.

Polish Driver Leads Field Into Nairobi

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters) — Sobieslaw Zasada of Poland, driving a Porsche, was first to arrive today at Nairobi, the halfway stage in the gruelling 3,200-mile East African Safari motor rally.

He was followed into the Nairobi checkpoint by veteran driver Joginder Singh of Kenya in a Datsun.

The early leaders, Edgar Hermann of Kenya and Hans Schuller of West Germany in a Datsun, were third into the Nairobi checkpoint.

After them came Italian S. Munari in a Lancia Fulvia and Jamil Din in a Datsun.

The German Ford Capri of Raund Aaltonen of Finland and Australian-born Peter Hutch was forced out with engine trouble. More than 25 cars have withdrawn from the rally.

The race, which began Thursday with more than 90 cars in Kampala, Uganda, will end there Monday.

ANOTHER SLAP . . . . . . AT SOUTH AFRICA

Cyclists Hit Barrier

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — South Africa has been barred from international competition in yet another sport, amateur cycling, it was announced Friday by Cyril Geoghegan, president of the South African Cycling Association.

Geoghegan told the federation's annual meeting that he had received a letter from Guiliano Pacciarelli, Rome-based general secretary of the International Amateur Cycling Federation, stating that South Africa's application for affiliation for 1970 would not be accepted.

This means South Africa — already barred from the Olympic Games, World Cup soccer and Davis Cup tennis — will not be allowed to participate in the world amateur cycling championships at Leicester, England, in August.

Geoghegan said: "Perhaps, the most disappointing part of it all is the fact that we fully intended sending a multi-racial team to Leicester. This decision is as much a slap in the face for non-white cyclists as it is for us."

Seals Grab Firm Hold On Fourth

Esposito Blanks Red Wings 1-0 To Break Lumley's Shutout Mark

By the Canadian Press

Oakland Seals scored twice in the first period Friday and held on to trip St. Louis Blues 3-2, strengthening their fourth-place grip in the National Hockey League's West Division.

The Seals have a three-point edge on Minnesota North Stars for the final playoff position, but their challengers have one game in hand and they play tonight in Los Angeles against the last-place Kings.

A win for the North Stars would set the stage for a showdown with the Seals Sunday afternoon in Oakland.

Bill Hicke and Earl Ingarfield shot the Seals ahead in the first period. Ingarfield's goal, his 18th of the year, came on a power play with Barclay Plager of St. Louis in the penalty box.

Ab McDonald cut the Oakland lead in half in the second period with his 22nd score of the season, but Oakland defenceman Harry Howell scored the winner six seconds after emerging from the penalty box. Rookie Norm Dennis finished the scoring for St. Louis late in the second period.

ESPOSITO SETS RECORD

All other teams were idle Friday, but a weekend schedule of 10 games, including three home-and-home series, is expected to shuffle the frantic East Division race.

Chicago Black Hawks with Tony Esposito, their record-breaking rookie netminder, in top form have a shot at overhauling Boston Bruins for first place. The Black Hawks, one point off the pace, play the last-place Maple Leafs in Toronto tonight and in Chicago Sunday.

Esposito, who Thursday blanked the Red Wings 1-0 in Detroit to set a one-season shutout record of 14, has five starts left to increase his record. Harry Lumley of the Leafs set the record at 13 in 1954.

Esposito turned in a dazzling display, handling 35 Detroit drives cleanly for the victory. Pit Martin scored the Chicago goal midway through the third period.

The only other game Thursday saw Los Angeles nip Philadelphia Flyers 3-2, the winner going to Real Lemieux with one second remaining in the second period.

The Kings grabbed a 2-1 first period lead on goals by Ed Joyal and Matt Ravlich. Simon Nolet scored in the first period for the Flyers and Andre Lacroix in the third period.

The Red Wings, involved in a three-team playoff survival struggle with New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens, take on the Bruins in Boston tonight and Sunday on home ice.

The defending champion Canadiens, two points ahead of Detroit and four ahead of New York, play the Rangers in Montreal tonight and in New York Sunday.

Second place in the West Division is at stake tonight in Philadelphia when the Flyers, one point behind Pittsburgh, tangle with the Penguins.

Ball Boss Shelves 'Jackrabbit' Test

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Baseball's experimental lively ball is gone, but not forgotten, as far as commissioner Bowie Kuhn is concerned.

Kuhn said Friday that although he has halted use of the new jackrabbit ball in exhibition games, he still is committed to introducing a livelier ball into the game.

"The ball we experimented with this spring was listed as five per cent more resilient than the present official ball," Kuhn said. "Last year we experimented with one that was supposed to be 10-per-cent livelier.

"What I'd like to try now is a new ball that is livelier by less than five per cent."

Kuhn admitted he heard a lot of complaints about the "five per cent" ball from pitchers, but none from batters. He said the reason he halted its use in spring training games each Wednesday was that "we have enough statistics to make a judgment."

"I'm determined to step up the hitting because I think the game needs it," the commissioner said. "And I'm sure that one aid to it this year will be the synthetic grass surfaces.

"There was an improvement in hitting last year when we lowered the mound and reduced the strike zone."

Touring Squads Triumph

(Times News Services)

Touring rugby squads from British Columbia showed their best form on opposite sides of the globe.

At Cardiff, Wales, the University School team from Victoria, reduced to 14 men for most of the match, achieved a 21-9 victory over Atlantic College Thursday.

The winners scored three goals and two penalty goals. The losers had three tries.

Fullback David Roxborough had to go off after 15 minutes with a face injury which needed a stitch. But the Victoria side took command of the game after two defensive errors had given Atlantic College a 6-0 lead.

Linking cleverly with Reeves, Hall scored a try which Reeves converted. Soon after half-time, Reeves landed a penalty goal to give Victoria the lead, and then Hall got a second try which Reeves converted.

Atlantic College hit back with a try following an interception, but Hall was soon over their line again, bursting through in a 40-yard run. Reeves converted. A late penalty goal by Reeves completed the scoring.

EASY OUTING

At Tokyo, the B.C. all-stars overwhelmed Japan's Athletic University 32-0 in an exhibition today.

The Canadians led 16-0 at the half.

The Japanese were unable to stop the bigger Canadians — all stars from the British Columbia Rugby Union — as David Austin scored the first try of the game in the first minute of play.

The Canadians went on to score tries in the 14th, 26th, and 39th minutes with Barrie Burnham converting two goals to lead 16-0.

In the second half, the Canadians added four more tries, including a 60-yard run in the 16th minute by Jim Ryan, who also converted. Ryan also scored a try in the first half, while Austin again scored the first try in the second half at the eighth minute.

Other tries in the second half were made in the 20th and 34th minutes with Burnham making his third converted goal.

T-Birds Bow To Croatians

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Croatia, already assured of second place in the Pacific Coast Soccer League, finished its regular schedule on Friday by whipping the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds 1-0 at Callister Park.

Wayne Thompson scored the lone goal of the match at 72 minutes on a pass from winger Zlatko Kos.

Croatia ended the season with 24 points, four behind league-champion Columbus and five in front of third-place Victoria O'Keefes.

Westminster had a chance to pass O'Keefes while meeting Eintracht today at Callister while UBC also played its final regular match of the season, meeting Firefighters.

In a fifth-round Province Cup match at North Vancouver on Friday, North Shore downed Paul's Tailors, 1-0.

First Division Takes Charge

Only first division squads remained alive following second-round matches Friday in the Victoria and District Soccer League's Jackson Cup competition.

Gorge Molsons, Oak Bay and Hourigans advanced to the third round of the knockout series with shutout victories.

Gorge trounced Tally-Ho 5-0 at Heywood Avenue Park, Oak Bay blanked Cosmopolitan Royals 2-0 at Central Park and Hourigans ousted third-division Oak Bay 2-0 at Topaz Park.

Uvic Vikings face Victoria West in the remaining second-round tussle Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

HOOKER LEADS WAY

Daryl Hooker led Gorge to victory with two goals while singles were added by Bill Abbott, John Tregear and Vic Escude.

John Rostron and Palle Polson booted the goals which gave Oak Bay its victory while Barry Moen and Jos DeBruin scored for Hourigans.

Gorge meets Oak Bay in the opening third-round (semi-final) match on April 8 with Hourigans taking on the winner of the Vikings-Victoria West match on April 15.

The Jackson Cup final is slated for April 22 with all the remaining matches scheduled at Royal Athletic Park at 8 p.m.

STAMPS PEN PAIR

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference announced the signing of two new players, import defensive halfback Richard Wagoner and non-import split end Douglas Smith.

BOWLERS OF WEEK

Joining list of award winners in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest are Don Inkster (above) and Bill Syme, who captured men's laurels in 22nd week of annual competition. Don cracked maples for searing 195-259-19—653 ten-pin series in Victoria Senior League at Mayfair Lanes to earn award while Bill rolled 272-243-385—900 total in Mixed Fivepin League at Chemainus Bowlarena. Both are now entitled to chase rolloff glory and cash on May 10.

Victoria Bowler Takes Third Spot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frank Nozaki, 22, of Vancouver overtook Bob Kroll of Winnipeg in the last game to win the Western Canadian men's singles fivepin bowling championship Friday.

Kroll had a 12-pin lead going into the eighth and final game before Nozaki finished with a total of 2,389 to beat him by 41 pins. Kroll's final total was 2,348.

Stan Hesp of Edmonton was third with 2,300, Ted Halabourda of Vancouver was fourth with 2,281 and Sig Bachmann of Chilliwack was fifth with 2,229.

Mary McConaghie of Edmonton retained her first-half lead to win the women's title over June McColm of Saskatoon by a count of 2,154 to 2,099.

Sandra Wood of Victoria was third with 2,089, defending champion Emma Johansen of Calgary fourth with 2,083 and Ruby Mile of Burnaby was fifth with 2,055.

In the women's team event, the Vancouver squad was leading with a total of 5,031 pins among its seven members. Eastern Saskatchewan was second with 4.835 pins, Northwest Ontario was third with 4,727, Prince George, fourth with 4,725 and Southern Alberta fifth at 4,703.

The teams bowled four games of an eight-game block, which finishes today. Winner of the series earns the Western Canada women's team championship.

VOLLEYBALL TOURNAMENT AT ESQUIMALT

Title-winners from seven zones across the country and one from Germany will be at the CFB Esquimalt gymnasium later this month for the fourth annual Canadian Forces volleyball championship tournament.

Scheduled from April 15 to 18 with the host CFB Esquimalt team representing Zone I, the tourney will be open.

Also slated to compete for the title are squads from Calgary, Gimli, Man.; Rockcliffe, Kingston, Bagotville, Que.; Greenwood, N.S., and Soest, West Germany, which will be represented by the Second Battalion PPCLI.

Previous tourneys have been held at Kingston, Winnipeg and Edmonton.

Canucks Spurred By 15,039 Fans

By the Canadian Press

Vancouver Canucks fought back hard Friday night to overcome a 3-2 third-period deficit and edge Portland Buckaroos 4-3 in a Western Hockey League game before a sellout crowd of 15,039 fans.

The victory gave Vancouver 100 points, 13 ahead of second-place Portland. In the only other game of the night, Salt Lake City Golden Eagles whipped Denver Spurs 6-4 at home, dropping Denver out of contention for a playoff berth.

Canucks played a superb third period for their victory, getting the equalizer and the winning marker from Paul Andrea, his second and third goals of the night. Pat Hannigan added the other Vancouver goal, while Andy Hebenton, Cliff Schmautz and Norm Johnson replied for Portland.

A glancing shot by Johnson off a Vancouver defender and past Canuck goalie George Gardner put the bite on Vancouver by making it 3-2. Canucks then had to play a man short for 10 minutes after Hannigan got a match penalty for breaking his stick over Portland defenceman Connie Madigan's head.

Andrea tied the score at 12:53 with a 20-footer past Portland netminder Dave Kelly and poked a loose puck under Kelly with just 16 seconds left for the victory.

FIELDER'S CHOICE

In Salt Lake City, the last-place Golden Eagles scored five goals in the second period for their win, as Guyle Fielder set up five goals, three of them by Ted Hodgson.

Other Salt Lake goals were by Jerry Mazur, Bob Toothill and Jim Hay.

Denver scored twice in the first period on goals by Dan Sharpe and Brian McDonald while Brian Smith got both the others, one in the second and one in the third period.

Salt Lake goalie Jim Armstrong turned aside four clean breakaways by Denver before a crowd of 8,000.

McLain Furniture On Auction Block

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Suspended pitcher Denny McLain's furniture is scheduled to be auctioned April 7 to satisfy a government claim of $9,460 for delinquent income taxes.

The 25-year-old McLain, a $90,000-a-year pitcher with Detroit Tigers, won 55 games over the last two American League seasons, has been having recurrent financial difficulties and currently is under suspension from baseball while commissioner Bowie Kuhn investigates his possible connections with gambling activities.

Fifty-three pieces of furniture, including an organ that originally cost $5,880, were seized by Internal Revenue Service agents at McLain's home in suburban Southfield March 13.

It's Up to Swedes To Block Russians

STOCKHOLM (CP) — For the Swedes, the route to Russia is through Poland.

Sweden needs a win against lowly Poland today to set up a decisive final match Monday with Russia for the 36th world hockey championships.

The Swedes are the only team to have won a game against Russia in this year's championships but they are three points behind the defending champions in the standings following Russia's 5-1 defeat of Czechoslovakia Friday.

They have played one game less than Russia, however. A win over last-place Poland would give them 15 points and they could win the championship by beating the Russians Monday. The Russians would need only a tie Monday to capture their eighth consecutive title.

In today's first game, East Germany beat Finland 4-3.

The Russians, who had lost three straight to the Czechs before the championships, had little trouble with them Friday, taking the initiative from the first with fast, accurate passing. The Soviets led 2-0 after the first period and 4-0 after the second.

Checking grew fiercer on both sides towards the end of the game and several players appeared to be seeking a fight. In the Soviet-Czech game last week anti-Soviet placards were raised and beer cans thrown into the Soviet players box, but Friday's game saw only whistling when flag-waving Russian fans tried to chant support for their team.

TAKE 2-0 LEAD

Vyatcheslav Starshinov opened the scoring for the Russians after 6:57 of play and Vladimir Petrov made it 2-0 minutes later and the Czechs seemed to lose heart.

Anatoli Firsov and Vladimir Vikumov raised the Russian total in the second period. Jan Hrbaty scored for the Czechs after five minutes of the final period and Vikulov closed out the scoring a minute later.

It was the biggest score for the Russians against Czechoslovakia in a world tournament since a 7-1 victory in Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, four years ago. The Czechs triumphed 5-4 at the 1968 Winter Olympics at Grenoble, France, and 2-0 and 4-3 at the 1969 world championships here. On March 18, in their first clash in the current championships, the Russians beat the Czechs 3-1.

Their loss Friday left the Czechs in third place with 11 points followed by Finland with eight points, East Germany with three and Poland with one point which it gained from a tie with the Germans.

The championships conclude with Poland meeting East Germany Sunday and Finland playing Czechoslovakia Monday in addition to the Sweden-Russia clash.

Curling Tips

By Ron Northcott

(Three-time World Champion)

In today's situation, blacks lead by two shots playing the final end without last rock. With his last rock, the skip of blacks can either play a guard on "A", or draw to the opposite side of the rings to split the house and lie two.

THE STRATEGY: I would definitely play to split the house by drawing for two. A second shot is your best call because if you make it, there is no possibility that you can lose, or even have the game tied.

I wouldn't play the guard on "A" because it would have to be perfect or your opponent would have a chance to win the game.

Remember, a perfect guard is one of the toughest shots in the game.

* * *

TODAY'S TIP: Consistent weight is a must for consistent shotmaking, especially on normal, open takeouts.

Once you are brooming well, the key to hitting and staying is almost entirely the result of being able to throw exactly the same weight on all open hits.

If a skip can get his entire rink to develop the same weight control, it is a simple matter for him to call the ice properly, and it eliminates any question of what weight to throw. Unless advised otherwise by the skip, you throw the same hitting weight at all times.

MANCHESTER U. CLIPPED 1-0

Bremner Sparks Leeds

BOLTON, England (CP) — Leeds United advanced to the final for the English Football Association Cup by defeating Manchester United, 1-0, Thursday night in a cliff-hanger match involving 10 members of England's World Cup squad.

A goal in the eighth minute by Billy Bremner, Leeds United skipper, decided this second replay. It was the only goal in five hours of magnificent football between the semi-finalists.

Leeds meets Chelsea in the final at Wembley Stadium on April 11.

KEY TO ATTACK

It was fitting that Bremner, a little red-haired Scottish International, broke the deadlock. Bremner, voted British Footballer of the Year earlier this week, gave a brilliant all-round performance, urging on the attack and organizing his defence.

Manchester United battered itself almost to a standstill in a vain effort to break through a Leeds defence which has conceded only one goal on the way to Wembley.

The match-winning goal came when Allan Clarke headed down a centre from Peter Lorimer and Bremner slammed the ball home from 18 yards.

The crowd of 56,000 had plenty to cheer about as Manchester made an all-out assault on the Leeds goal. England World Cup players Bobby Charlton and Brian Kidd came close to scoring with fine efforts.

GREW DESPERATE

Second-half substitute Denis Law had his name taken for a foul on Bremner as Manchester grew desperate in its effort to tie the score.

Leeds' victory took it a further step towards a triple-title target. Leeds is second in the English First Division and has reached the semi-final of the European Cup.

Leeds, like Chelsea, has never won the FA Cup.

ANDERSON SIGNS

EDMONTON (CP) — Roger Anderson, 27, a six-year veteran of the National and Canadian Football Leagues, has been signed by Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Conference. He is a 265-pound six-foot-five tackle.

Bugs Kill Billions Since Stone Age

By JAMES CLARKE

Man's war with the insect world is as old as man himself. No creature, bar man himself, ever posed such a real threat to the survival of the human race and even as late as the end of the last century one half of human deaths could in one way or another be blamed upon insects.

Even now insects are still in control of millions of square miles of the earth's surface—their attack upon man and his livestock prevents us from developing at least four million square miles of Africa and further millions of square miles in the Amazon and Orinoco areas. Even now they kill well over a million people a year, and at least 38 billion people have, on the evidence, been killed by these tiny creatures since Stone Age times.

(Second of Series)

The tiny, ubiquitous mosquito is the greatest enemy. One billion people live under the threat of the diseases it carries and a million die annually from malaria alone. The mosquito threatens half the world, from Peru across to Africa, through Asia to the Indonesian archipelago.

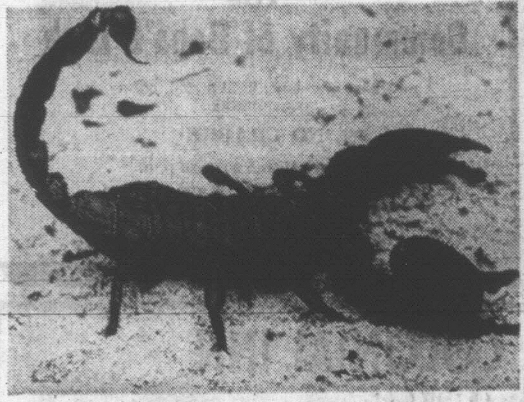
Then there is the humble flea. Riding on the back of a rat, it carries the plague, which is still a dire threat in many of the earth's most crowded quarters and in two decades, while man the scientist was developing his first serial bomb, the flea wiped out ten million in India alone.

▣

The tsetse fly, spreading sleeping sickness, has also taken an enormous toll of human life over the centuries, and so have the more common species of flies, which are great carriers of epidemics.

In 1955 the World Health Organization declared a war of extermination against the Anopheles mosquito. Now, of the 1,576,000,000 people in areas where the malaria mosquito is indigenous, 77 per cent are in areas where it has either been eradicated or is being eradicated.

Only in Africa can it be said the picture is gloomy. Out of 197 million Africans who live under the threat of endemic malaria only 3 million have been freed. And in the age of jet travel, while malaria remains in Africa, it poses a threat to the health of the rest of the world.



THE SCORPION

MAN IS THE PREY

There can be no solution until Africa is politically stable, for during political transition periods the mosquito often regains all it lost. The same applies to the fifty years' war against the tsetse fly, which is now swinging back in the fly's favor.

The Black Death of 1347 was probably triggered off by man's first attempts at germ warfare four years earlier. Tartars were besieging Genoese traders in the fortified post of Caffia in the Crimea when bubonic plague crept into the Tartar ranks. The Tartars, believing the plague was contagious, catapulted their dead over the walls into Caffia.

The Tartars withdrew, but enough Genoese survived to carry the scourge home. The Black Death killed an estimated 75 million — 25 million of them in Europe. It probably killed off a third of the world's population.

It is ironic that nowadays the 'honey bee' kills more people than the plague-carrying flea. In the United States in 1959 the annual toll was put at 33. In Africa it must be well over 200, in South Africa six or seven, though many in the rural areas must go unrecorded. The world total would run into a few hundred.

African bees are notoriously irascible. Entomologists suggest that in Africa, after centuries of nest-robbing by man and beast, only the most aggressive strains have survived. In Europe, where bee-keeping as opposed to nest-robbing has been practised since ancient times, the insect is docile.

▣

There can hardly be a schoolboy in the world who does not believe that Africa's driver ants chase elephants, lions and buffaloes up and down the length of the country and eat men alive in their beds.

One famous hunter wrote: "I would rather face a charging lion than wilfully disturb a column of these ants on the march."

Although it seems logical that the siafu, or driver ant, must have, at some time or another, killed African babies or even finished off and eaten dying men, I have found no such incident on record. The ants march in a column that can stretch thousands of yards and which is six to eight ants in width. They have been known to eat dogs and, on one occasion, a gorged and helpless python.

There is only one sure way to stop them and that is by soaking the ground with petrol and setting it alight.

Few creatures have been so libelled in popular fiction as the arachnid Lactrodectus mactans: shy, secretive, non-aggressive and no bigger than a pea. Looking at what there is of international statistics on deaths through black widow spiders, I doubt whether there are more than one or two a year — in Australia ten deaths since 1927, in New Zealand three this century, in South Africa one eight-year-old girl since World War II. In the United States, where the black widow is really notorious, only 55 people since 1726.

B. J. Keyter, director of the Transvaal Snake Park, near Johannesburg, puts the mortality rate at less than 2 per cent and says that half the people bitten by the black widow feel little more than a severe local pain with localized swelling. The others really suffer, but only 2-3 per cent have to fight for their lives.

The tarantula spider or wolf spider, Lyosa tarantula, used to be blamed for a disease known in Europe as tarantism, which was supposed to be fatal, the only cure being music and wild dancing. In fact, the tarantual is absolutely harmless to man.

Scorpions can be divided into two types; ones whose venom has only local effects, and ones whose venom does more general damage and is occasionally fatal. The former are harmless and their sting is about as painful as a wasp's. The more dangerous ones include two fairly common species in the United States: Cenruroides Sculpturatus and Centruroides gertschi.

Scorpions live only in warmer regions and are found in most of the southern states of America as well as Central and South America right down to Patagonia. They are common in Africa and fairly common in Southern Europe — Greece, Yugoslavia, Italy, Spain and occasionally north as far as Southern Germany.

They are not usually aggressive. There have certainly been several dozen deaths, mostly in North Africa and the Middle East. During World War II 11 men were lost on both sides during the western desert campaign through being bitten by Buthus. They kill an average of two people a year in South Africa.

Air Wave 'Pirates' Bombard U.K. Again

LONDON (CP) — Radio "pirates" are again roaming Britain's airwaves, bombarding listeners with pop music and commercials.

The British government, which banned such transmissions in 1967, is vigilantly eavesdropping on the latest buccaneers, who anchored their 600-ton ship six miles off the Essex coast this week.

Known as Radio North Sea International, they have been beaming their music to British and German listeners for weeks from a point off the Dutch coast. The new position was expected to give them good coverage of southeastern England, including the densely-populated London area.

Legislation passed in 1967 forced a number of marine-based commercial stations off the air, restoring to the BBC its traditional monopoly over domestic radio.

Siebner Show Has Wide Range

Looking at Art

. . . With Gordon Rice

Many Victorians will certainly be interested in the major retrospective show of the work of Herbert Siebner.

Just opened at the Art Gallery of Great Victoria, and running through April 12, the show comprises over 150 paintings, drawings, prints, and sculpture pieces, and fills almost every room of the Gallery.

While we have seen a lot of Siebner's work here during his 16 years residence in Victoria, there are two aspects of his art which should be new to most viewers. These are his later work and, represented in profusion, his very early paintings and drawings.

A key work in the gallery which displays his landscapes is the "Afternoon" (Lago di Como, Italy). This beautiful large painting evolved from a series of eight paintings attempting a theme of four people seated at an outdoor resort table near the lake. The strong deep afternoon light which bathes this scene is captured everywhere in the paint. It is almost as if the picture had yellowed with age, until one realizes that each color is in fact apt for the kind of light, shadow, and mood conveyed here.

Ease, Naturalness

Everything about this picture manifests great care and thoughtfulness, and at the same time a remarkable ease and naturalness.

In this same room "Cloister Garden", "Homberger Strasse (Berlin)", and "From Settin" in early 20th century styles, somewhat Fauvist or neo-impressionist.

What matters is that they are masterful works within this style. Painted early in Siebner's career they indicate a thorough grounding in drawing and a concentrated mastery of color and brushwork.

There is a room largely of figure studies, dating back as far as 1946. Again the background of this artist's work is revealed here, a rich source.

Warm and Subtle

The "Birthday Party" ("with dry wine and dry sandwiches") reminds one strikingly of the work of his fellow Victorian, Maxwell Bates, yet it was painted long before the two had seen each other's work. It is another large painting with a warm and subtle touch, expressing this time an ironic sort of poetry.

A few of the small watercolors, seen in a show last year, display one of the most charming facets of the artist's work. Several paintings of the Flying Men, Earth Mothers, and Giants are here too, and have been discussed often in this column. This attempt to reach back to mythic, prehistoric sources has much preoccupied Siebner in later years, and seems to hold endless fascination for him.

His sgraffito-encaustic paintings, employing highly unique technical discoveries, seem to re-enforce the sense of age and mystery appropriate to such themes. The technique will remind one of both bas-relief and petroglyph carving.

"Transfiguration"' and "The Day it Happened" are two large new paintings which are highly surrealistic. They are enigmatic and quieting pictures, reminding one a bit of Magritte or Bacon. It will take some consideration to determined whether these strange paintings are as successful as the previous work.

Strong, Sensitive

One should not miss the drawings and watercolors displayed in the Kearley Gallery. There are many obviously strong and sensitive drawings here, especially the works in charcoal, the figure studies.

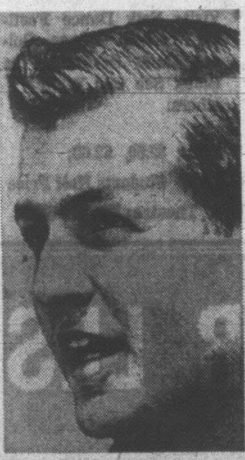
One should not miss the chance to take in this large retrospective which can be considered a major Canadian show, and the best chance to really review Siebner's long and varied career.

* * *

A show of Helen Piddington's prints has opened at the Print Gallery, and will be up until April 8. It will be the subject of next week's review.

BUSY APRIL will be a prelude to busy summer for these three of six Victoria students who were successful candidates for 1970 National Youth Orchestra. Violinist Nancy Meredith and trombonists Richard Carswell, left and John Gibson are also entrants in several classes of Victoria Musical Festival starting April 13 through April 25.

Blain Fairman Stars In Brecht Title Role



Something of special interest to theatre goers will take place at McPherson Playhouse next Thursday and Saturday, at 8 p.m.

These evenings will mark the first appearance in Victoria of the Western Canada Youth Theatre.

Basically an amateur theatre company, it is under the artistic direction of Tom Kerr, one of Canada's most talented and dynamic directors.

The production they are bringing to the city on this occasion is Bertolt Brecht's The Resistable Rise of Arturo Ui, a play which records Hitler's rise in terms of parody, Brecht's attempt to destroy "the usual disastrous respect which we feel for great murderers."

Blain Fairman, a former Victorian, will be seen in the title role.

The company which began life nearly 10 years ago with Kerr's Dominion Drama Festival successes, The Long, The Short and the Tall, and Taste of Honey, in 1969, undertook a three-week tour of Britain, performing an original script by Vancouver playwright Miles Murchison.

University of Victoria Players Club is sponsoring the current visit.

U.S. Buys British Treasures

By JOYCE EGGINTON

NEW YORK — Thirty antique dealers—most of them owners of one-man businesses in little towns in Britain—were in New York last week, selling nearly two and a half million dollars worth of English treasures to American dealers and collectors.

The venture, which most of them approached with great nervousness, has been such a success that a similar exhibition is planned for Los Angeles before the end of the year, and another in New York in 1971.

Unlike most British trade fairs, this one was private enterprise without any board of trade backing. It attracted none of the big-name London dealers, most of whom already have American contacts, but it did bring in the most venturesome of the "little men" from towns like Woodbridge (Suffolk), Tunbridge Wells (Kent), Tetbury (Gloucestershire) and Market Weighton (Yorkshire).

Everyone brought the cream of his collection, ranging from a rare 18th-century table of magnificent inlaid wood, which took 50 years to make, to simple little pieces of pewter and Staffordshire china.

Most of the dealers, uncertain about what to charge, doubled their English prices and in some cases trebled them. They were astonished to find that the hundreds of New Yorkers who visited the fair, and who paid $2.50 a head for the privilege, thought these prices reasonable.

Instead of knocking off the customary 10 per cent to dealers, some of the British exhibitors knocked off up to 30 per cent—with a smaller discount to private buyers who looked hesitant, to help them make up their minds.

By the time the fair ended, most of the dealers had made a good profit as well as paying the expense of bringing themselves and their goods to New York—roughly $1,200 a head. More important, several have made good contacts with American dealers for the direct export of English antiques in furniture.

'She Had a Good Go as Twinkle Toes'

By JUDITH MARTIN

A generation of little girls sobbed when the beautiful, red-haired dancer was driven to distraction by the conflicting demands of art and love.

The picture was "The Red Shoes," starring Moira Shearer as Victoria Page, who leapt off a balcony, was run over by a train and just managed to utter a few last, poetic words to the sensitive young composer she loved before she died—ah, expired.

Within a few years after the film was made, in 1948, Miss Shearer gave up the dance (to say nothing of cornball movies) for love. Recently she was in Washington with her husband of 20 years, helping him promote his work.

"She had a good go as twinkle toes," her husband said (sensitively). "It's a question of these children, see?"

Miss Shearer, with ivory skin and flaming hair and as frail and exquisite looking as Victoria Page whooped with laughter. They have three daughters and a son, from 7 to 17 years old.

A discussion began about whether any of them displayed talent for the dance.

"Alistair has a marvelous back," she said.

"You just say that because you're in love with him," said Alistair's father. "Fiona has magic in her heels."

"She has flat feet," said Fiona's mother.

Miss Shearer said that she is much happier since she gave up her career "to lead a normal life with that old brute. Ballet's such a very narrow life—really it is. One momentarily regrets it, of course, but one is missing a habit. Just a shade, really—I had put 18 years in it."

Author Ludovic Kennedy and wife Moira Shearer

In any case, it isn't "The Red Shoes" for which she wishes to be remembered. There were all those years with Sadler's Wells, which later became the Royal Ballet; other films, including "Tales of Hoffmann;" and the theatre in London.

She has always thought that "The Red Shoes" was unbearably corny. "I laughed hysterically when I first saw it. I had to be taken out. It was rather a period charm now—a few creaks here and there."

But her husband didn't laugh when he first saw it. "Aren't you getting maudlin?" She asked as he told the story of how they met:

"I'd seen the film and I thought, 'I'd love to meet her, she's so beautiful.' I didn't know anyone in the film world, but then I met her at a ball for Sadler's Wells and the Old Vic. She was giving away prizes. I had a couple of drinks and then I finally said, "You wouldn't like to dance, would you?' And she said, 'I must warn you, I don't dance well.'

"Well, of course, I thought that was supposed to be funny, and I sort of laughed, but you know, she wasn't joking. She got right up on the balls of her feet and started pushing me around the floor."

And so they were married and are living happily ever after in a little Scottish cottage, or whatever—it's a 1760 "manse," 40 miles south of Edinburgh—and she is "a marvellous cook—as good a cook as she was a ballet dancer."

Which explains why the beautiful red-haired dancer is going around helping a man named Ludovic Kennedy publicize a book he wrote about Americans abroad, called "These Lovely People."

That's what happens when you decide not to get run over by a train.

Translation Needed, He Did It Himself

Latest to join the society of Do-it-Yourselfers is Dr. Ralph Allen, University of Victoria's vigorous theatre division head.

At the readings for Turcaret (or The Financier), Alain-Rene Lesage's brilliant farce which will be seen in a Victoria Fair 70 premiere, April 8-11 at McPherson Playhouse, he decided that the Merwin translation did not suit his purposes.

After trying out a few changes, Allen decided it would be better to begin again from scratch.

The result is a translation-adaptation of the entire play undertaken and completed in a week.

By now, of course, it is well away in rehearsal, with Richard Galuppi, the delightful Orgon of Tartuffe, in the title role.

"It's about tycoons of a sort and corruption in an affluent society," says Allen. "In that way it's quite relevant to today's world."

He describes the action as a case of everybody two-timing everybody—"there are double-crosses of double-crosses—but it's all very light, very French, very farcical."

The design of Robert Cothran's enchanting set, including a fabulous effect of parquette floor, is based on a double cross.

Two of the four performances in April are already sold out but tickets for the others are available at the McPherson box office.

Turcaret will join The Duchess of Malfi and Androcles and the Lion in this summer's Victoria Fair Repertory.

'I Just Stand Back and Let Vibrations Out' Says Willie

By HOLLIE I. WEST

The Lion is 73, but he still roars with a commanding sound.

This Lion is Willie The Lion Smith, pianist, composer, Harlem oral historian, raconteur, former gun-runner and contemporary of James P. Johnson, Fats Waller, Luckey Roberts and other men who formed the significant Harlem school of pianists in the 1920s.

Those were the times when pianists battled in all-night and, sometimes all-day cutting contests. Smith was frequently a victor in these sessions.

The Lion sang in an offkey and gruff manner, mugged easily and talked freely of life and music styles. But the main attraction was his piano playing, marked by gentle lyricism and powerful stride figures.

Smith put all these qualities on display during an engagement at Blues Alley in his first Washington, D.C., appearance in several years.

Smith gave a short discourse on the two ways pianists used to play "make believe rag."

"The first is in the key of 'A' and this is the way you heard it in vaudeville," he said as he ripped off a stock reading of melodic rag.

●

"Here it is in 'C.' This is the way us boys uptown used to play it when we put a little syncopation in there and made it dance." The second version, of course, was full of bravado and joy.

There were only about 15 persons in the club for Smith's last set — his wife Jane, whom he calls "silver top" because of her full head of shining grey har, a few friends and some fellow musicians.

The painist played mostly his compositions — pieces like the reflective "Conversation on Fifth Avenue" and the impressionistic "Morning Air." He closed with a forgotten standard, "It's Time to Say Goodnight."

Smith started a controversy several years ago when he challenged the idea that jazz originated in New Orleans. He said easterners were also playing jazz at the turn of the century.

"People have a tendency to forget that God made men and women all over the world, not in just one place." he said, backing up that view. "And everybody who knows anything about music knows there're two places where they teach good music — Boston and New York. Now you take some of your Washington boys — Claude Hopkins, Doc Perry, Louis Brown. They were playing early. Jelly Roll (Morton, a New Orleans pianist) couldn't play. He didn't have the training."

Were easterners playing the 12-bar blues early in the century?

"After you leave a Baptist church —black or white — you've heard it all," he replied. "There's only one thing in music — you either play it plain or you beautify."

Smith, who was born William Henry Joseph Bonaparte Bertholoff Smith, on Nov. 23, 1897 in Goshen, N.Y., walks in a slow, erect manner and looks fit.

●

"Your health is as good as your surroundings," said The Lion, whose nickname came from his bravery while under fire at the front for 33 straight days during the First World War.

"I have a very good doctor and surgeon. I surround myself with good friends, and I just stand back and let the vibrations move out.

"You know, James P.'s stepchildren draw $25,000 a year in royalties from his songs, and Fats Waller's son gets about $30,000 a year. I want to draw my own royalties now."

ON STAGE NEXT WEEK

Every afternoon during the coming holiday week, starting Monday, at 2 p.m., at McPherson Playhouse, Bastion Theatre will entertain the pre-teen set with a lively musical, Please Don't Sneeze. There will be the usual ice cream for birthday parties and in addition, free candy or popcorn for the first 100 children at the show, Monday through Thursday.

Thursday and Saturday, McPherson Playhouse, 8 p.m., University of Victoria is sponsoring the Western Canada Youth Theatre, a Kamloops-based company, in performances of Brecht's The Resistable Rise of Arturo Ui.

The play is directed by Tom Kerr.

Canadian Films Backed

TORONTO (CP) — Julian Roffman, producer of the film Explosion, believes Canadian films may be coming of age as financial assistance is being granted film-makers.

His movie, an $800,000 color feature, is the first English-language film to receive financial aid from the Canadian Film Development Corp.

Roffman said, "With the appearance of the CFDC financiers aren't any longer plagued by producers. The fund offers some chance, a glimpse of what's to come."

Explosion centres on two draft-dodgers living in Vancouver.

A Guide to Keep Technology in Its Servant Role

By STEVE HUME

We're in the middle of a revolution that's going to make the Agricultural and Industrial Revolutions look like small town fairs.

And like small town people used to wheezing merry-go-rounds, we suddenly find ourselves at the national exhibition, rocketing along the crazy rails of the Big Dipper and we don't know how to stop.

The electronics explosion, the computer explosion, the knowledge explosion — we're on the verge of shell-shock.

WHOLE EARTH CATALOG, Fall 1969. Portola Institute. $5.50.

We've lost touch with the technology that forms the basis and background for our increasingly frenetic lives.

Intelligent men are helpless when their car breaks, when the power fails, the plumbing goes. Youngsters in school still waste their hours memorizing, learning processes by rote when they could be getting instruction in how to extract information from libraries, computers, other people.

Technology, the ability to make tools and weapons, and culture, the ability to transmit by learning the technology, were the two things that set Australopithecus africanus down the evolutionary trail to manhood.

Man made tools to give himself the environmental edge. He sacrificed speed, teeth, strength for adaptability, for the ability to control the environment with his technology.

But now technology controls man. It gases him, burns him, electrocutes him, mangles him, frustrates him, poisons him and ultimately drives him mad. And on top of that, the technology seems on the verge of a break-through to the point where it perpetuates itself.

It's a scary place to be.

Fortunately some people are determined to do something about it. The idea is not to junk the technology, but to get back in control, and the way to establish mass control is to work at controlling technology at a personal level.

▣

And part of the way to establish control is to know what's available and what alternatives there are.

The Whole Earth Catalog is an attempt to provide one route to that control. It is a solid, constructive idea, and it might just be the kind of key we're looking for.

"The Whole Earth Catalog functions as an evaluation and access device. With it, the user should know better what is worth getting and where and how to do the getting," explains the Whole Earth Catalog.

"We are as gods and might as well get good at it. So far, remotely done power and glory — as via government, big business, formal education, church — has succeeded to the point where gross defects obscure actual gains. In response to this dilemma and to these gains a realm of intimate, personal power is developing — power of the individual to conduct his own education, find his own inspiration, shape his own environment, and share his adventure with whoever is interested. Tools that aid this process are sought and promoted by the Whole Earth Catalog."

Published in California by Portola Institute, Inc., Whole Earth is a Life-size, softcover manual of where to get anything you might conceivably need.

Tools listed range from exotic scientific theory to cheap motorcycles, from sex manuals to geodesic dome construction. They are divided into seven major categories: Understanding Whole Systems, Shelter and Land Use, Industry and Craft, Communications, Community, Nomadics and Learning.

If you think you might get stuck delivering a baby, or worse still, delivering yourself of a baby, Whole Earth Catalog gives you the information on where to get the information to teach yourself.

Or there's goat husbandry, Buckminster Fuller, camp and trail gear, the Yaqui way of knowledge, birth control — you name it, if it's useful Whole Earth Catalog has it listed.

The book is exciting to browse through and a humbling experience at the same time. There's so much there of value to the individual. But the important thing is that with the catalog the individual has a reference source for tracking down items and information regarding useful knowledge or tools.

▣

And best of all is the form on the last page which lets the reader participate. Trip over an item which is useful as a tool, relevant to independent education, high quality or low cost, easily available by mail and Whole Earth Catalog wants to hear about it. They invite you to drop them a line. They'd even like you to submit a short review of a book you think important.

Hope returns.

With a tool like Whole Earth Catalog available maybe we can find the off switch for the roller coaster.

Amazing Trek Of Overlanders Lured by Gold

By TORCHY ANDERSON

Vicky Metcalf, who has written numerous children's stories, has turned to a facet of one of British Columbia's most astounding stories: the gold-dazed contingent which came overland to the Cariboo gold fields from Fort Garry in 1862.

This simply told story deals with one family of the caravan: the Schuberts.

The main body of The Overlanders, as they came to be known, comprised Ontario groups who railed it to St. Paul, steamboated down Red River to Fort Garry and then creaked away across the prairie to Fort Edmonton — and the trials and horrors that lay beyond.

The Schubert's were: Augustus, a German, his wife, Catherine, Irish, and three children, all very young. Catherine was pregnant with a fourth child who was to be the first white child born in what is now the city of Kamloops.

JOURNEY FANTASTIC With the Overlanders to the Cariboo by Vicky Metcalf. Ryerson. $4.95.

Catherine was the only woman to join the party and hers were the only children. She was a well-built woman who miraculously concealed her condition from the little army of men for nearly seven months.

The project was well organized but it was, as the title of this book indicates, fantastic. It was incredible that any woman could make the journey Catherine Schubert made and survive to give birth to a healthy daughter in an Indian teepee at the junction of the North and South Thompson Rivers.

Let this be said for Augustus. He tried to leave his wife and children at Fort Garry. Catherine tried desperately to dissuade him from making the journey. When she failed she said the family must stay together. If he went she and the children would go. Gus had to decide. The gold prospects in the Cariboo were too much for him. So they all went.

▣

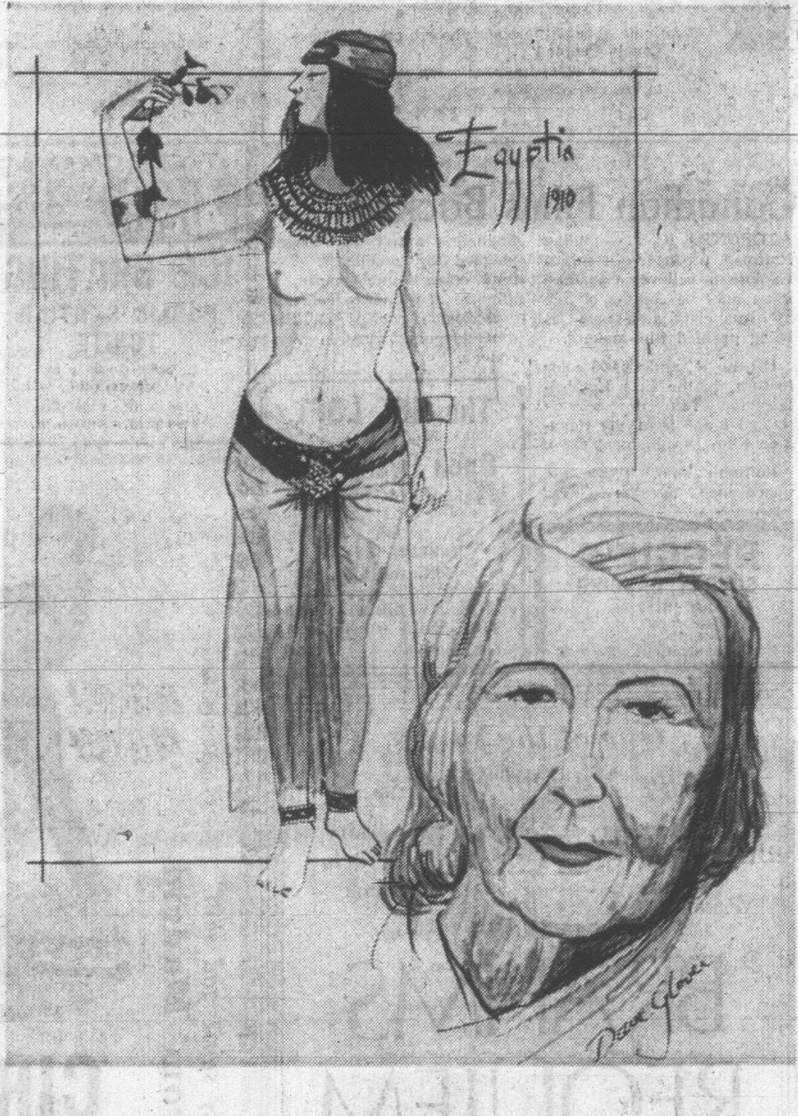
It is hard for us today to realize the strength of that magnet, the Cariboo, which drew them across the prairie to the tune of the shrieking axles of the Red River carts. It drew them from Edmonton to Tete Juane Cache, almost starving, with their packhorses slipping and sliding on the verge of 2,000-foot cliffs.

When they reached the headwaters of the Fraser they were eating their own horses and bullocks. The Overlanders split, some building a raft to take them down to Quesnel, gateway to the goldfields.

Another smaller section, including the Schuberts, made the daunting descent of the North Thompson to Kamloops, the meeting of the waters. With good reason the name Schubert holds a high place in the history of Kamloops.

This book does not pretend to encompass the whole Overlanders' story. It focuses on the Schuberts and their amazing accomplishment and survival. A reference to S. M. Wade's "The Overlanders of '62" (published by The Archives of British Columbia, 1931) shows that the personalized story of the Schuberts follows an accurate historical line.

In 1918, in Armstrong, B.C., a very fine old lady died. Catherine had begun her last and final journey.



Re-Birth of the Dance By 'Farm Girl' Ruthie

By AUDREY JOHNSON

At the turn of the century in America dance was not an art, it was a circus trick.

Ballet was dead. Athletic routines in vaudeville houses and stiffly corseted "toe-dance" pirouettes inserted into opera performances were regarded as entertaining but not by any means high art.

Ministers were inclined to fulminate from their pulpits against the indecency of this type of performer.

Then along came Ruthie Dennis, a New Jersey farm girl with an instinct for dance.

She began her incredible career on the stage of Worth's Museum on New York's Sixth Avenue — a combination variety house and showplace for monstrosities.

It was a two-week engagement during which she did slow high kicks, backbends and roll-overs, but for the teen-age girl who was soon to be canonized by director David Belasco as Ruth St. Denis, it was the beginning of one of the longest and most distinguished careers in dance history.

It was also the prelude in American to a break-through — both a re-birth and an innovation that would see dance take its rightful place among the fine arts.

Others followed St. Denis in pioneering the new free concepts of dance, including her future husband, Ted Shawn. One, Isadora Duncan, was a great contemporary.

But it was St. Denis who set alight the torch and carried it flaming through half the world. And it is to her the laurels belong.

This is clearly her biographer's viewpoint in this account of her 91-year-long life.

It is a fascinating account, well ordered and documented, tinged unmistakably with the devoted affection of a close friend as well as with the perceptiveness of a dance afficionado.

Author Walter Terry is one of America's most distinguished commentators on dance and was for many years dance editor of the New York Herald Tribune and World Journal Tribune.

Currently he serves in that capacity with the Saturday Review. He is also the author of a biography of Duncan.

He draws a vivid and detailed portrait of "Miss Ruth" and while he tends to sugar-coat her selfishness and other egotistical faults, he avoids, most of the time, the temptation to sentimentalize.

The extraordinary artist, dedicated almost from childhood to a concept of great dance dramas, profoundly but broadly religious in her feelings — many religions had meaning for her — was fundamentally an honest and straightforward person.

MISS RUTH by Walter Terry. Dodd, Mead. $8.50.

HISTORY OF THE DANCE by Richard Kraus. Prentice-Hall. $8.75.

Of herself, she said candidly, "Technique? Never heard of it . . . I really belonged to the do-it-yourself school of dancing."

And concerning her marriage to Shawn she confided to Terry: "I was a very bad wife to a very good husband."

In 1960 Miss Ruth said: "I really and truly don't expect to live forever, but, at the moment, all the signs point to the contrary."

She was still dancing, creating, following her star.

At 90 her mind was filled with plans for a work on the theme of rhythms of the resurrection, with the organization of a dancing choir of elderly women, with a special television series.

"And then," says Terry, "she died." On July 21, 1968.

Truly, as the trite phraseology of television has it, a legend in her own time.

As recounted by Terry it is a living legend and the personality within the legend shines through strongly.

In fact there is so much humanity — dramatic, humorous, romantic — in the story behind the legend that this book is by no means to be labelled for dance devotees only.

The Richard Kraus History is, naturally, a different matter.

This is a comprehensive discussion of dance beginning with its function in primitive cultures and concluding with an analysis of modern dance theatre and the future of dance education.

The author is, among other things, major adviser on dance education curriculum at Columbia University.

He says in his preface to the volume, that it has been "a fascinating book to write."

It is clear that he has found it so for it reflects his scholarly enthusiasm in meticulousness of important detail and soundness of research.

Plentifully illustrated throughout, footnoted and indexed, it is a reliable treasure house for the student and devotee of the dance.

'My Roots Are in Rootlessness' Says the Peripatetic Graham Greene

By ROY PERROTT

PARIS — Mounting the stairs, I wish I had read more than a few lines of Henry James, could grasp Joseph Conrad better, two of author Graham Greene's major influences.

I pondered the fact that Greene was supposed to guard his privacy like gold-dust. I rang the bell several weeks before I was quite ready.

He opened the door with a welcoming swing, a tall, lithe figure in a grey, chalk-striped suit, with shrewd and somewhat anxious eyes.

I said I had come over on the boat-train because I was tired of the anonymity of airports. But there was still all that clanking at Dunkirk to endure in the middle of the night.

"Hm," he said, holding up a glass to the glinting light coming in from the boulevard, to get the measure right. "I quite like vodka, don't you?"

Plod Over Ocean

Yes, he said, he was fond of trains, too. Also those cargo ships carrying about a dozen passengers, which went plodding over the ocean, where you could read the books you had been meaning to and ruminate a little.

Now in his flat in the north of Paris — a modest place, considering his success — Greene said he had moved into one of his more ruminant phases: his new novel, Travels With My Aunt, came out recently and the autobiography of his early years, A Sort of Life, is in the final polishing stage.

The manuscript lay on the plain oak table by the window where he works. "And where I have breakfast, too," he put in, in case I thought there was something special about it. With permission, I looked at the preface.

"Failure too is a kind of death," said the opening sentence, in that darkly echoing style of his; "the furniture sold, the drawers emptied; the removal van waiting like a hearse in the lane to take one to a less expensive destination. I have preferred to finish this essay with the years of failure which followed the acceptance of my first novel . . ."

"But why failure?" I asked, "when you've achieved so much as a writer?" "Hold on," he said in a cheerful way, "and I'll get you some soda from the fridge." He went stooping out to the small kitchen at the back.

Inner Buoyancy

I studied the bright Cuban paintings on the walls, the row of his favorite Victorian poets in the bookshelf. He looks like a man who has been a long, long way down in his time, I thought. But he still manages to get across, personally, as in his writing, an inner buoyancy, some ultimate optimism or belief that has fortunately — or unluckily, as some Greene character might mordantly say — kept pushing the coward he has often told us about back into the frontline trenches.

One tends to forget the early struggles of established artists. Perhaps their later ones, too. There were his early novels like It's a Battlefield or England Made Me or A Gun For Sale with their urgent ticker-tape style, their nagging sense of crisis, personal and universal, their bewildered Thirties atmosphere.

In them, in retrospect, one can sense his urgent, almost desperate, search for a centre, a true centre to write from.

Because their titles stick in the mind one has the erroneous impression that Greene was always a success. In fact, he was in debt to his publishers, Heinemann's at the time, until the Second World War. With Brighton Rock (1938) his work began to catch on with critics and public.

But fame and regard still hovered uncertainly. The Power and the Glory (1940), which many critics think his most powerful work, originally sold only 3,500 copies. And by that time, in his career as a writer, he had already written about half a million words.

It must have needed endurance. But even a casual visitor can sense that he has that. Now 65, the craftsman inside him remains a most exacting taskmaster.

All the time you are with him, whether he is fumbling in the fridge, being the attentive host or showing you his books, he is always thinking with part of his mind about his craft.

Write in Hotels

"You know," he said, coming back, "boredom has always been my problem. That's probably what has made me travel so much. My roots are in rootlessness. Living out of a suitcase has never bothered me. In a way, my suitcases are my flat here and my place in Antibes. When I get on the move I can write in hotel rooms and feel quite at home with it.

"Yes, ennui is the thing. Writing's certainly hard work but it occupies only a couple of hours a day. I used to try for 500 words in a morning. Now I aim at about 200. It's tiring on the inner eye trying to follow the movements of your characters. Even if they're not on stage you feel you must know what they might be doing."

I wondered what he did most evenings. He gave a short, rueful laugh. "Well, when I can face it after a drink I polish the 200, of course." He writes in minute handwriting, almost illegible to anyone else. Then a final version goes into the dictating machine for the typist.

We talked about his autobiography. It deals with his life up to the age of 25, a storehouse of arduous inner experience from which the ironies and compassions of his mature writing have come. One of its incidents retells how, in adolescence, he found a revolver, and played Russian roulette.

"Then I had this attempt at psychoanalysis when I was 16. I went to stay at my analyst's house. One night I had an erotic dream about his wife. My only act of moral courage was to go and tell him about it." He twinkles a little at the memory.

Somehow he learned to accept this young nihilist and extract a range of lessons from him.

Having pulled that despairing trigger on himself so often, somewhere along the line he sensed how to construct, say, a Scobie of The Heart of the Matter with his dilemma of compassion, his inability to cause pain to others.

He could project himself into Querry of The Burnt-Out Case, the renegade architect, with his awareness of emptiness, his chestful of indifference toward life.

There is a big change between his early and later work. The river is no longer boiling so intensely through the rapids; it has broadened out and moves with under-understanding. "What was the turning point? When did you start feeling like the writer you wanted to be?"

Alerted to Flaws

"Well, there was a review of my ghastly second novel by Frank Swinnerton. A bit savage, I thought at the time. But you know how people sometimes alert you to flaws in yourself? Before that I was on the way to becoming another Charles Morgan, all terribly soft and easy. I began to shake myself out of that dreadful romantic dream world, a sort of disease I'd got by absorbing all the worst influences of Conrad. So I wrote Stamboul Train. Not great, but not bad. It meant I was getting in touch with life."

"But in the late thirties your work becomes almost different in kind. The cleverness goes and something stronger comes in . . . ?"

"Yes, there was a big change. In 1938 I went to Mexico and saw the Catholic priesthood under persecution. My religion had been purely intellectual till then. But I became emotionallly involved and, of course, that changes one's writing, one's whole life."

Did a writer's apartness sometimes feel like common or garden loneliness?

"Oh, I've plenty of good friends. Well, yes, of course it does. Isn't it part of the job? But let's go and have some lunch. I usually eat at a little place round the corner. Since you're paying we'll go somewhere nice."

Politics Wearying

We saw a couple of hippies standing on a corner, just past the Madeleine. "Remarkable," he said, "they all look like that distant relative of mine, Robert Louis Stevenson, same hair and everything."

He chortled loudly. "They've rejected the technological dream society. Quite right, too. A sense of values does keep bubbling up from somewhere in England, though the politics has become so weary and meaningless there now, wouldn't you think?"

Then, from something I said, he detected in me a half-suspicion that he might move much in literary circles, attend salons, hold occasional court at the Lapin Agile. The idea amused him. "After all, what have writers got in common: what could we possibly talk about? Evelyn Waugh was my great friend but we never discussed writing."

The restaurant was not as smart as all that. He chose a corner table, out of the way.

I asked Greene about Travels with My Aunt. He searched his mind but could not remember how it had germinated. "It puts a few characters together to see what happens; the first free-wheeling book I've done. The theme? I don't think it's got one."

On Dark Frontier

In his comedies, as in his other books, Greene's purpose has been all of a piece. Always living on the dark frontier, he has spent his time bringing unlikely people in from the cold just as once, long ago, that empty and indifferent young nihilist had to be found a place nearer the fire.

He is fond of cowards, partial to the desperate, loves the uncertain Hamlet in forceful men. "A writer's job," he once wrote, "is to engage sympathy for people outside the official range of it," and "the apparent villian deserves more compassion than the apparent hero."

I asked how his views generally had changed. "Well, I'd still fight for Cuba. Though I think one becomes steadily more neutralized. Catholicism becomes rather less interesting the more permissive it gets. You know, I went to Paraguay to get material for the new novel. I wanted a place that was both Victorian and violent, somewhere that seemed stuck in time. The authorities gave me a warm welcome until I started addressing students in favor of Fidel, the pill, and so on. Ha!

"I want to go to Samoa next. There's a quaint restaurant there called Aggie Grey's where they serve the wine in bottles labelled Armagnac for some reason. Tastes like syrup of figs." Something in Greene obviously prefers that vintage, in a way, to the best chateau-bottled.

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

Why does the businessman-part-time politician seem always to suspect the qualified expert in a given field?

Why, when he wants advice or opinion, does he turn his back and seek it from some other source?

Probably it's because he figures that the word from the horse's mouth will be totally subjective.

•

There's a modicum of truth in the premise as, of course, there nearly always is. On the other hand, there's a great area of danger too.

Danger that the advice or opinion of the persons not qualified by reason of training and familiarization in the field, will lead to errors sometimes enormously costly and often irreparable.

We've seen it happen in this city in areas of both sports and the arts. What about the grassing of Royal Athletic Park? What about the unsolved backstage problems at McPherson Playhouse?

Let's not call in the professional librarians for consultation. They may harbor prejudicial ideas of self-preservation. Let's spend $15,000 on a possibly workable survey by a management consultant firm.

'I'm not really concerned about the tendency to ignore the experts in our own pasture as it relates to the past or even current events. No protests are going to change the fait accompli.

But I am concerned as it relates to the future.

Because the day is inevitable when an auditorium building of some kind will be lifted off the drawing board and take steel and concrete form.

It may take the shape of an arts centre complex or of a convention centre complex.

My only hope is that it won't be a monument to the same sort of thinking — the businessman - amateur politician rejection of qualified local opinion which, at best, is consulted and then ignored.

•

At the moment the auditorium complex is one of this city's great needs in the arts-entertainment field.

And don't be concerned about what we are going to put into a 2,500-seat auditorium.

Experience all across Canada, qualified people tell me — and I listen to them — is that once these complexes are built they themselves foster the growth of events that keep their lights glowing.

People jeered when the arts centre was built as a centennial project at Charlottetown. Now the constant applause echoes across the land and Charlottetown has a thriving industry that it never dreamed of in pre-centre days.

Ottawa's National Arts Centre is still pretty new but the trend there points in the same direction.

Says one recent travelling observer: "In every capital city in Canada and in many other cities, some smaller than Victoria, auditoriums have been built and are functioning well."

•

The Chamber of Commerce is mounting a campaign at the present time emphasizing the fact that spring comes first in Canada to Victoria.

Unfortunately certain other good things have a way of occurring last in this city — prominent among them, a civic auditorium, which is practically a required 20th century facility in any sizable city.

But if we have to wait for it to arrive in Victoria until the dawn of the 21st century, it will be worthwhile if in the meantime, we have learned to tip our ears in the right directions.

In most of these things — libraries, theatres, athletic facilities — there are specific regional differences that make theories formulated by non-residents, no matter how efficient, useful as little more than general guidelines.

You still need the man at the centre, the fellow who has hoed and cultivated the field for several seasons, to tell you what works and what doesn't.

EX-WINNIPEG SOLOIST FEATURED IN REQUIEM

GISLASON

Resident in Victoria for a comparatively short time, former Winnipeg baritone Garth Gislason will be one of two featured soloists in the forthcoming presentation of Brahms Requiem.

The other is Catherine Young, soprano.

The Requiem is under the direction of Dr. George Corwin and will be sung by the combined University of Victoria Chorus and Victoria Choral Society.

First performance will be April 6 at Uvic gymnasium, the second, April 8 at Christ Church Cathedral. Both performances begin at 8 p.m.

Gislason studied in Winnipeg, Toronto and London, England, and spent four years singing professionally in England. He was choir master and voice teacher in Winnipeg before moving to Victoria.

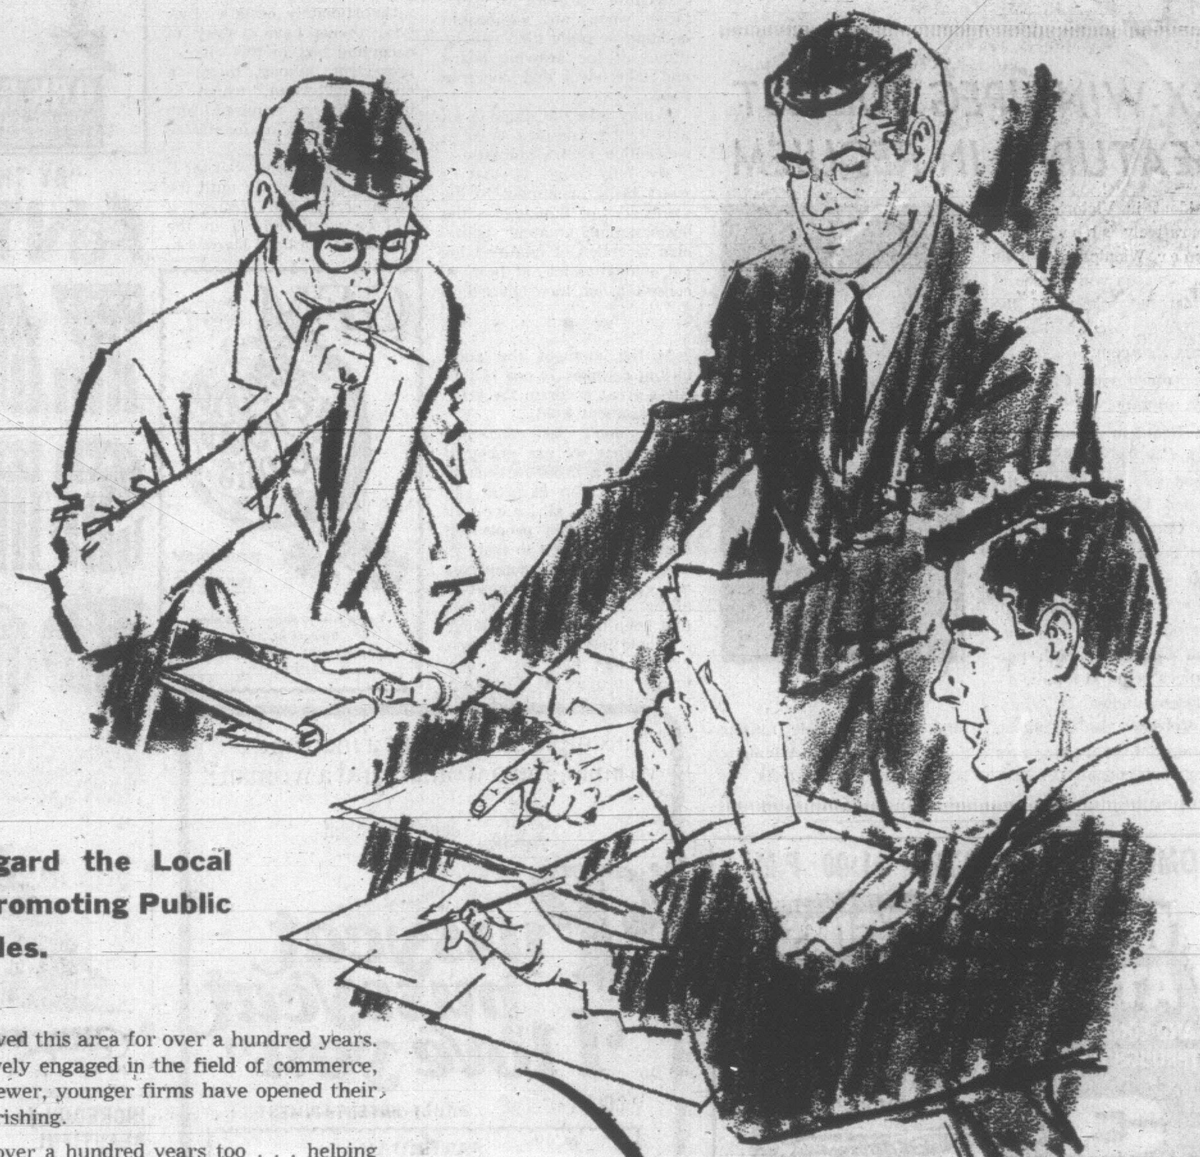
Victoria's Daily Newspapers

GIVE YOUR BUSINESS A HELPING HAND



Successful Business Firms Regard the Local Daily Paper as Indispensable in Promoting Public Relations and Bringing About Sales.

Many distinguished local business firms have served this area for over a hundred years. Now, impressive business concerns, they are actively engaged in the field of commerce, reaching out to the four corners of the globe. Newer, younger firms have opened their doors throughout the past century and are flourishing.

Victoria's daily newspapers have been here for over a hundred years too . . . helping business grow !

Newspaper advertising has played an important role in building prestige, goodwill and most importantly—PROFITS, to be turned back into the community's growth through expansion, which creates employment for more Victorians.

In the past decade, business has taken giant strides forward on the local scene. Our population has increased proportionately. There is an ever-growing demand for goods and services.

Soil Key to Pest-Free Plants

By JACK BEASTALL

With many of the supposedly harmless chemicals outlawed, the bewildered gardener is wondering what is going to take their place. To one who started gardening with an arsenal of chemicals this could well be a paramount problem.

Educated by advertising to believe that success in gardening is dependent on spraying every 30 days, it is reasonable to ask who or what is now going to fight the battle against pests and diseases.

Those of us who were gardening 50 years ago will remember that a certain amount of loss due to pest and disease damage was accepted as part of the cost of producing one's food and flowers.

A hole or two in a leaf was not a catastrophe, nor was a brown spot the cause of panic. We accepted these things as part and parcel of gardening.

It was not until the advent of million dollar advertising programs by spray manufacturers that the average gardener became pest and disease conscious. Confronted with blown-up pictures of minute insects said to be poised to destroy our environment, we became unduly alarmed.

•

Our fears might have been lessened had a counter program of education in elementary entomology and plant pathology been initiated, but anyone who raised the merest suggestion that things were not as bad as depicted was labelled irresponsible and ignorant.

Twenty-five years of high pressure selling of lethal products to untrained and unsuspecting gardeners has resulted in an environment polluted almost to the point of no return. Little wonder the gardener is bewildered.

It would seem the time has come for the gardening fraternity to do its own thinking.

One thing we know for sure is that gardens existed long before the era of "a spray a day to keep bugs away." Those gardens may not compare with today's standards of weed-free, spot-free, no-pest conditions, but they produced food on which millions of healthy families were raised and the environment was not considered dangerous to live in.

•

The problem of plant pests has been aggravated in many ways. Wholesale destruction of native plant material has driven many insects to the cultivated plants in gardens, and the indiscriminate use of sprays has greatly diminished the populations of natural predators. Unnecessary spraying, and spraying at the wrong time, has built up populations with greater resistance to natural hazards.

Not until the delicate balance of nature has been restored can we hope for assistance from natural sources in our efforts to maintain control. Our job as gardeners will be to apply reasoning to our problems.

First we have to face the fact that no garden will thrive without some work being done by the gardener. Those pictures we have been shown of a gardener under a sunshade with a glass of pink lemonade and a sprayer of poison beside him were totally unrealistic.

It is not green thumbs, but dirty hands and sore knees that make a garden, and when we get back on our knees we shall be closer to our plants and better able to see the start of what could later be a pest or disease problem.

•

The present work week of around 40 hours gives today's gardener some 32 hours of freedom each week. An hour or two of this time spent learning the life history of a few garden pests will pay high dividends. Knowing the time of appearance, rate of propagation, and the plants most likely to be attacked would go a long way towards planning an effective control program.

There is no dearth of literature on this subject. Library shelves are loaded, free bulletins are plentiful, all we need is the desire to learn.

Once we know the life cycle of any insect we can use our brains to beat it at its own game. We can camouflage the smell it is seeking, or make its egg-laying area uninviting, or sow our seeds to avoid the peak periods of the pest.

Tips for Home Gardeners

Our grandfathers used many forms of traps, and we shall have to return to this method of protection. The traps went off the market because gardeners became squeamish about destroying the trapped insects.

This refeals a strange quirk of the human mind. Gardeners who revolt at stepping on an insect or squeezing it between thumb and finger have thought nothing of using a spray to kill friends and foes alike. Not seeing the insects die was a salve to their conscience.

Earwig traps, soil pest traps, and fly traps were all used effectively when gardeners had no qualms about dropping the pest laden traps into a hot fire or a pail of boiling water.

These are just a few methods of control that will be revived, but the greatest good will come when we attack the real cause of most our plant troubles — the soil in which the plant are growing.

We have to understand that plants are made from plants. In other words, the soil from which plants obtain most that is needed for growing is composed of powdered rock and decomposed plant tissues.

•

These plant tissues, or what we refer to as soil, are converted by minute soil organisms into chemicals the plants can use, and a further conversion with the plants turns the chemicals into plant tissues.

Obviously, the conversion of soil to chemicals decreases the amount of soil. If the plants are to flourish, replenishment must be continuous.

Throughout this area the soils are badly lacking in decomposing plant tissue, otherwise called humus. Because of this our plants lack the vigor to withstand pests and diseases.

Had the money spent on pesticides over the past 25 years been invested in manures, and the time spent on spraying used to make compost, our plants today would be better able to care for themselves.

•

If we are not to apply our own reasoning to the pest and disease problem we have to (1) change our present way of thinking, (2) face the fact that gardening entails a little diligent and sometimes unpleasant work as well as hours of pleasure, (3) start at the root of our troubles and make some good soil so that we can grow healthy plants with some degree of built-in pest and disease resistance.

If we can accomplish these three objective in the coming season we shall have made distinct progress.

WORK FOR WEEK

If soil is suitable make planting of gladiolus corms now and another next month for a succession of blooms. Plant groups for decoration, not in straight rows.

Dahlia tubers which are still fairly dormant can be planted if soil is well drained, or garden near salt water where late frosts are unlikely.

Sow indoors, or in heated greenhouse, seed of white alyssum, coleus, nemesia, annual phlox.

Check recently planted trees to find if they have been loosened by strong winds. If so, fill in space around trunks with fine compost and firm gently with the feet. Avoid damaging the bark with tools.

The hardy fuchsias which grow in the open garden all year will flower more profusely by late summer if pruned to about six inches above soil level now. The tiny hardy rock garden fuchsias pruned back according to their size.

Grey-foliaged shrubs such as Senecio laxifolius, Santolina incana, Cineraria maritima, and the perennial Centaurea, can all be drastically pruned now to obtain better foliage later.

Make sowings of the hardy vegetables according to the condition of your soil. No use putting seeds into a cold wet soil, but gardens with southwest facing slopes and near salt water will be suitable for early crops. Carrots, spinach, onions, Swiss Chard, a few lettuce, parsnips in a deep soil, early peas and early potatoes are good risks.

Prune back lavender, sage, thyme, rue, and hyssop.

W. Germany Honors Composer, Poet

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Portraits of three famous Germans, all of whom were born in 1770, are represented on three West German adhesives released March 20. They are: 10pf, Ludwig van Beethoven (d. 1827), the composer; 20pf, Georg Wilhelm Hegel (d. 1831), the philosopher; and 30pf, the poet Frederich Holderlin (9. 1843).

On March 11, Lesotho placed on sale 2½-cent and 25-cent pictorials for the 100th anniversary of the death of Moshoeshoe I, who was paramount chief of that south-African country.

The Cook Island's four Easter pictorials came out March 12. Reproduced on each is a Renaissance painting of Christ's resurrection. Four-cents, 8c, 20c and 25c are the values. A miniature sheet holding one specimen of each denomination was also placed on sale on that date.

Hong Kong came out with an Expo '70 pair (15c and 25c values) March 14.

On March 15, Singapore released four stamps (and a souvenir sheet containing the foursome) for Expo '70. Pictured are: 15c, sea shells; 30c, tropical fish; 75c, birds; and $1, orchids.

The Great Seal of Sweden is portrayed on a 5-kronor definitive released March 9 by that Scandinavian kingdom. The seal features St. Eric attired in armor.

On March 16. Australia placed on sale two Expo '70 adhesives. Depicted on the 5-cent stamp is Australia's pavilion, and on the 20-cent stamp is the Southern Cross and an inscription in Japanese meaning: "from the country of the south with warm feeling."

Aircraft are shown on a foursome issued March 13 by St. Vincent. The denominations are: 5c, 8c, 10c and 25c, and they were lithographed on block CA watermarked paper.

Two multicolors issued March 9 by Belgium for European Nature Conservation Year delineate trees. They are: 3.50-francs, beeches; and 7-francs, silver birches.

Easter is honored by 3-cent, 10-cent and 20-cent pictorials placed on sale March 23 by Jamaica.

Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation is featured on 10-cent, 15-cent and 35-cent stamps issued by the Gilbert and Ellice Islands March 2. The observe the centenary of the founding of the British Red Cross.

The designs of Canada's Expo '70 quartet are unimaginative, but they have sharp, arresting appearances.

Hoffman Blanked Out By Network

NEW YORK (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System blanked out Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman during an interview on the Merv Griffin television show Friday night because he wore a shirt resembling a United States flag.

Network President Robert Wood said Hoffman's image was blanked out "because of the possibility of violation of law as to disrespect and desecration of the flag, and to avoid affronting our viewers,"

Griffin remained visible during the tape interview and the audio portion was untouched. A network spokesman said Hoffman, one of the Chicago Seven, probably was not told he would be blanked out during the telecast.

Tower of Pisa Leaning More

PISA, Italy (UPI) — Scientists said Tuesday that the gravity-defying tower of Pisa has leaned another 1-32 of an ich since last June.

The 179-foot high romanesque tower which, according to an old Italian song, "leans and leans but never falls down," is now tilted more than 14 feet off the perpendicular.

Scientists from the University of Pisa said their measurements showed the lean "caused by shifting subsoil on one side of the famous tower, is continuing at about the same rate as in the past.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, MARCH 28, 1970 —PAGE 27

Audubon Society Offers Survey for Region Parks

By HUMPHRY DAVY

An offer by North America's largest conservation society to make a survey of regional parks needs for any community in British Columbia has been enthusiastically received by outdoor groups here.

The National Audubon Society has offered to pay half the costs of surveys on parkland acquisitions or on any other aspect of outdoor development programs.

Immense Value

The society with headquarters in New York, has been responsible for establishing some of United States most famous parks and wildlife sanctuaries. It also operates a large number of outdoor educational programs.

W. T. (Bill) Ward, editor of the popular Wildlife Review, published by the B.C. Fish and Wildlife branch, said other cities in Canada have already availed themselves of the society's offer.

"Such studies could be of immense value to regional and community planners," he said.

He noted that Audubon had carried out studies for communities in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and New Brunswick.

In January it also carried out a cost-sharing study of the grounds of McGill University in Montreal, he said.

Ward said all field services are offered on a reasonable cost-shared basis.

"It will carry out any study on parks, schools and college lands, sanctuaries, refuges, forest lands, and open spaces," he said.

"In the United States they have carried out more than 1,200 such studies for communities and regions," he added. "It is offering this assistance because greenbelts are disappearing at alarming rates around cities."

Investigate Fully

Dr. John Harris, president of the Victoria Outdoor Club, said the offer should be investigated fully by the regional district parks board.

He said he would bring the matter up at the next meeting of the club.

"But I'm equally concerned at the slowness of the board to implement the 1969 regional park survey recommendations," he said. "Land prices are always rising and valuable green areas used for other purposes."

(The regional district at the start of the year had $570,000 for parkland acquisitions. This includes a government grant).

Enid Lemon, an official of the Victoria Natural History Society, supported a park study by Audubon.

Bring to Light

"I am going to bring this matter up at our next executive meeting," she said. "Such a study would assist our planners and it might bring to light some aspects of park planning which we have failed to observe."

She noted Audubon is a non-profit organization and would not be influenced by political considerations.

Jack Harding, president of the Victoria Canoe Club, said: "We should have someone look at our parks from the outside. I know of no better organization to do this than Audubon."

The enthusiastic response for an Audubon study reflects a growing concern of recreationists at the regional board's priorities for acquiring parklands with funds levied from taxes.

Large Tracts

Some feel it would be better for the board to concentrate on acquiring large tracks of land instead of small parcels.

The board's present priority program includes land acquisition at Island View Beach Park, purchase of the remaining privately owned lands around Beaver-Elk Lakes, Witty's Lagoon and creation of a large park in the East Sooke district.

Many recreationists feel the board for the present should concentrate on acquiring a large park at East Sooke and in the Highland district — linking Thetis Lake with Goldstream.

Bedroom Parks

"Small bedroom parks have little value," said Wilf Harper, a past president of the Canoe Club and a member of the Outdoor Club. "They eventually just become parking lots."

Harper felt that Audubon would also look at the park question from an ecological and environmental point of view.

"It could also be of some help in solving some of the University of Victoria's ecological problems, such as preserving the habitat for skylarks, swallows and trees," he said. "It might come up with a more interesting landscaping plan."

MOST YOUNGSTERS have Easter eggs, bunnies or newly-hatched chicks, but Susan Hawn, 4, of Corpus Christi, Texas has an eight-week-old lion cub to go with her Easter basket. "Sukie" is being raised by Mr. and Mrs. John Hawn and will eventually be one of more than 75 animals that will inhabit a drive-through animal reserve being built near Dallas. Hawn is a partner in the park.

Parolee Returned To Penitentiary

A 29-year-old man whose parole from an earlier sentence was revoked Wednesday was sentenced in court Thursday to an additional six months when he pleaded guilty to theft over $50.

Andre Gravel had been released from the peniteniary on parole March 12 after serving a portion of a five year, three month sentence imposed on him in Vancouver in May 1967.

He had been convicted of possession of an offensive weapon, possession of stolen property, conspiracy and skipping bail and was to be released in January 1971.

He pleaded guilty to stealing a nine-inch television set from the home he was staying at on Wilmot Place March 20 and selling it in a local nightclub the following day.

The set was worth about $200.

Judge William Ostler asked the accused why he had waited just a matter of days after his release before committting another offense "after you performed so well in the peniteniary."

Gravel answered he had been drinking.

"You don't drink in the peniteniary," he told Ostler.

"I hope not," the judge replied.

The six-month sentence will begin at the conclusion of the earlier sentence.

Dorreen M. Boyd, 45, of 108 Dallas, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a one-year probation for 13 counts of false pretences.

She had pleaded guilty earlier to the charges which all involved worthless cheques written in February to Eaton's and two grocery stores.

The cheques totalled $225 which she was ordered to pay back within three months.

Brenda A. Rose, 18, of 1812 Jade, was fined $150 for shoplifting.

She pleaded guilty earlier to taking merchandise, valued at $38.81, March 17 from the Simpsons Sears department store without paying for it.

"It's a tragedy to see you here," Ostler told the accused after noting that the presentence report had shown her to be an ambitious and hard-working person.

"It's a setback and I'm sorry to see it," he added.

Ostler imposed what he called a more modest fine than usual because he felt payment from her earnings meant for her education would be an adequate sacrifice.

Not Even One Sign of Age...

This is no miracle. Twice-daily one-minute applications of 2nd Debut with CEF is the simple recommended procedure for a perpetually younger-than-age-look. This now-famous emulsion contains the internationally loved extremely effective cellular expansion factor known as CEF. This very complex substance, originally found only in human tissue is the arch-enemy of facial lines and the loyal friend of facial skin that hosts it regularly. It does help facial skin to regain lost smoothness and to keep it through extra years. Apply 2nd Debut night and morning. 2nd Debut is greaseless. Watch your mirror daily for results. Ask at your favorite cosmetic counter for 2nd Debut with CEF 600, unless you are over 35. Then get 2nd Debut with double potency CEF 1200... or if you are in a hurry at any age. Gladful days are ahead for you with 2nd Debut.

All 2nd Debut preparations are available in the same style bottle wherever fine toiletries are sold. In addition to the two potencies of 2nd Debut with CEF, there is 2nd Debut Skin Cleanser, 2nd Debut Non-Alcoholic Skin Freshener, 2nd Debut Hand and Body Lotion, 2nd Debut Liquid Makeup and 2nd Debut Pressed Powder. All are warranted to please or the purchase price is refunded.

Weddings

Clement — Achtem

St. Patrick's Church was the scene of a double ring ceremony held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, March 14, 1970, when Patricia Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Achtem, 3225 Beach Drive, became the bride of Mr. Grant Bruce Clement, son of Brigadier General and Mrs. J. Bruce Clement, 5358 Alderley Road. Reverend Joseph Jackson officiated

The church was decorated with arrangements of white gladioli, crystal mums and coral pink carnations. During the signing of the register the organist, Mrs. Wanda Gill played Romeo and Juliet.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor length gown in silk peau d'ange, styled with a wedding ring neckline and long tapered sleeves. Re-embroiderer Venice appliques enhanced the fitted bodice and cascaded beneath the inverted pleat of the slim A-line skirt. A detachable court train fell from the waist at the back. A floral crescent held a full flowing cathedral veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of white glamelias. For something "old" the bride wore her grandmother's cameo brooch. The bride was attended by Miss Monica Thistle, as Maid of Honor and Mrs. Mary Gail Wood, sister of the bride was bridesmatron. They wore identical apri-coral silk long slim gowns, opening at the sides to reveal a slim pa it in eggshell. A silk tie encircled the empire bodice and formed a bridal bow at the back waist. Soft hand rolled flowers in apri-coral silk cascaded through the hair. They carried colonial bouquets of coral glamelias. The pretty flower girl was Janice Achtem, niece of the bride, in a floor length dress of apri-coral silk fashioned in empire style. She carried a basket of coral gladioli.

The mother of the bride wore a grey and white silk worsted ensemble, with matching accessories and corsage of pink rosebuds. The mother of the groom chose a print dress of emerald green and navy on white background with navy coat and accessories to match. Her corsage was pale pink roses.

Mr. Thomas Mayse was best man and ushers were Vernon Larson and Darrell Jones.

Mr. J. R. Giegerich proposed the toast to the bride, at the reception at the home of her parents. The rooms were decorated with arrangements of white crystal mums and coral pink carnations. The bride's table was centred by a three tiered wedding cake topped by coral pink roses.

After the reception the young couple left for a short honeymoon Up-Island. For her going away outfit the bride chose a navy pant suit topped by a red coat, a navy hat trimmed with a red and white scarf and navy accessories completed her ensemble. Her corsage was of white rosebuds.

McNaughton — McCormick

St. Aidan's Church was tastefully decorated with white gladioli and pink tulips for the wedding March 7, 1970 at 7 p.m. of Beverly Violet, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. McCormick, 1767 Adanac Street, to Mr. James Raymond McNaughton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. McNaughton, 1867 Townley Street. Reverend J. Rae Allan officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The radiant dark haird bride, given in marriage by her father, was beautiful in an elegant gown of Polma silk with a front silk panel. It featured a portrait scalloped neckline with bodice and lilypoint sleeves of Chantilly lace. A small front bridal bow accented the empire line, and a lovely attached train of Chantilly lace swept from the back. A scalloped four tier illusion net chapel veil misted from a floral headpiece. She wore a pearl drop necklace and matching earrings, a gift of the groom, and carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and feathered white carnations.

Sandra McLaughlin, maid of honor, bridesmaids, Betsy McNaughton, and Carolyn McCormick, and flower girl Lisa Dong, wore identical empire style sleeveless gowns of variegated deep rose chiffon over taffeta. They wore long white gloves, and pink material rosebuds adorned their hair. They carried cascade bouquets of pink carnations. The flower girl carried a colonial bouquet of red and white carnations. Ringbearer was Craig Dong. Mr. Gary Ford attended as best man, and Messrs. James McCormick and Billy Milne were ushers. The groom and the male attendants wore black tuxedos.

At the reception held at the Carlton Club, guests enjoyed a sit down cold plate dinner. Mr. Wilford (Bud) Orr proposed the toast to the bride.

For a honeymoon trip to Seattle, the new Mrs. McNaughton chose a [illegible] and coat ensemble [illegible] matching red felt hat with black accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Dawes — Dukeshire

Mr. and Mrs. Philip J. Dawes, 3850 Saanich Road, announce the marriage of June Ann, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Dukeshire of Clementsport, Nova Scotia, to their eldest son, William Phillip.

The wedding took place at 2 p.m. Saturday, March 28th, 1970 in United Baptist Church, Clementsport, Nova Scotia.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Church vestry.

After a brief honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Dawes will return to Victoria, where they will make their new home.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends for their kind expressions of sympathy in the loss of our beloved wife, mother and grandmother. — Cecil Clarke, Mrs. C. J. Pollock and family, Bob C. Clarke and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BOUGHTON, Charles A.—In loving memory of my dear husband who went to eternal rest on Saturday, March 29, 1969.

A million times I've missed you
A million times I've cried.
If my love could have saved you
You never would have died.
It broke my heart to lose you,
But you did not go alone,
The day God called you home.
—Ever remembered and sadly missed by his loving wife Margaret.

LUMLEY—In loving memory of Captain D. Lumley who passed away March 29, 1969.

A heart of gold stopped beating
Hard working hand at rest.
God broke our heart to prove to us
He only takes the best.
The leaves and flowers may wither
The golden sun may set
But the hearts that love so dearly
Are the ones that won't forget.
—Ever remembered by wife Pearl, Danny and all.

MOSS—In loving memory of our dear son, brother and grandson, John, who passed away March 27, 1964.

How strange he should sleep so profoundly
So young, so unworn by the strife.
While beside him, brimful of hope nectar,
Untouched, stood the goblet of life.
God knows the depth of our sorrow,
How bitter the trial must be
And right through it all,
He is loving
God knows so much better than we.
—Sadly missed by Mother, Dad, Sandra and Grandad.

NICHOLET—In loving memory of Joseph Nicholet, my dear husband, Dad and Grandfather, who passed away March 27, 1968.

Nothing can ever take away,
The love a heart holds dear,
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him dear.
—Mrs. J. Nicholet and Family.

"Complete Real Estate Service Across Canada"

There are many ways of putting your property into the hands of many selling brokers — Multiple Listing (which) reaches most Victoria Offices and Salesmen) is the sure way; or the listing agent will sub-list to other offices as seems advisable. A broad segment of selling agents is readily within your reach.

The key man in listing a property, though, is the listing broker you choose, and you should choose him with care. It is he whom you look to for advice as to the proper selling price to be placed on your property. It should not be too low — obviously — otherwise you will loose money; and it should not be too high so as to have a property which "drags" and does not sell in a reasonable time. This too can result in, eventually, a lower price than what could have been obtained. The advice is helpful in arriving at this figure. You will look to the listing agent to advertise your property fully; it is unlikely that anyone else will take on this task. Then, when an offer is received, the listing agent is available for advice as to its acceptance, no matter what the source of the offer may be. A key man in a satisfactory Real Estate Sale is the listing agent — a position of trust.

Our experienced staff is at your service.

B.C. ROUNDUP

Four Die In Head-On Collision

147 MILE HOUSE (CP) — Four persons were killed in a two-car head-on crash Friday in this Cariboo community 33 miles south of Williams Lake.

Police identified the occupants of one of the vehicles as Hugh Arthur McKellar, 19, and Gregory Frank Goodwin, 18, both of Prince George.

Killed in the second car were Sam Brown, 58, and his wife Eleanor, 55, of Sicamous.

Duncan Death

DUNCAN — Timothy Frederick Hodson, 53, of nearby Fairbridge, was killed Thursday when a tractor he was loading rolled backwards from a tilt low-bed truck and crushed him.

Plant Closed

BURNABY — Operations at a Dominion Glass Co. Ltd. plant in this Vancouver suburb remained at a standstill Friday as 300 employees refused to cross a picket line set up by 35 striking office workers seeking a $24-a-month raise on a $270 monthly base rate.

Kamloops Date

KAMLOOPS — The British Columbia Racing Commission has granted five days of pari-mutuel horse racing to the Kamloops Exhibition next September. Dates are Sept. 2, 3, 4, 5 and 7.

City Teachers To Attend Annual Meet

Sixteen teachers from Greater Victoria school district will be among 1,000 delegates at the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual meeting which opens in Vancouver Monday.

When delegates met Wednesday, they decided to support a resolution calling for work stoppages if the government does not move to boost its share of teacher pensions during the 1971 legislative session.

"It seems there's real concern for this issue because the vast majority voted in favor of the resolution," said Bill Broadley, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

CHEK-TV Licence Extension Given

A six-month licence extension has been granted to CHEK TV by the Canadian Radio and Television Commission.

The CRTC announced Thursday that the station's licence will be extended until Sept. 30, "pending consideration."

The announcement said that B.C. Television Ltd., owners of CHEK andn CHAN TV in Vancouver, will be given a chance to present their views concerning the renewal of the licence at a public hearing of the commission in Ottawa, starting April 14.

B.C. Television president J. R. Peters, of Vancouver, said the six-month renewal was a normal procedure for all Canadian TV stations whose licence expires at the end of March, as does CHEK's.

ARAB PRINCE HAWKING HOT DOGS

LONDON (AP) — Crown Prince Chazi Faisal, pretender to the throne of Iraq, has turned up as a hot dog vender and usher at a Kensington district movie theatre.

The once wealthy prince lost his fortune in the coup which ended the rule of the Faisals as the Iraqi royal family 12 years ago.

"I have had do take this job to help pay my way," he told reporters Thursday.

8 of 48 Warrants Outstanding

Eight warrants are still outstanding this morning of the 48 issued by RCMP Tuesday, all involving trafficking in various illicit drugs on the Island.

Eleven persons appeared in Victoria Provincial Court Wednesday for trafficking in the various drugs as RCMP agents ended a four-month exercise. Two appeared Tuesday afternoon.

Malcolm Cunningham, 17, of 641 Rendall, was raised from juvenile court to face a charge of trafficking in LSD Wednesday afternoon. He pleaded not guilty, bail was set at $2,500 and he was remanded to this afternoon for further hearing.

In Sooke Provincial Court, David A. Verge, 24, and Jennifer A. Smith, 24, both of Sand Cut Creek near Jordan River, were charged with trafficking in hashish and were remanded.

Bail for Verge was set at $2,500 while Miss Smith was released in her own recognizance in the sum of $500.

In Nanaimo, Norman Pierce, 24, was sentenced Wednesday to one year in prison and placed on one-year probation when he pleaded guilty to trafficking in marijuana.

Court was told Pierce sold two grams of the drug to an RCMP undercover man in Nanaimo Jan. 31.

In the same court Thursday, David Patrick Gibson, 16, of Nanaimo, was sentenced to six months definite and 18 months indeterminate in the Haney Correctional Institute, after pleading guilty to a charge of possession of LSD March 21.

Gibson had been raised Wednesday to adult court from juvenile court.

Andrew Willott, 24, of Ladysmith, was also charged in Nanaimo, with trafficking in LSD Nov. 27. He was remanded for plea and election until April 3. Bail was set at $2,500.

Christopher Aman, 23, of Nanaimo, charged with trafficking in heroin Feb. 5, was remanded without plea and election until next Wednesday. Bail was set at $6,000.

Goodwill Opens Doors to Clubs

By JUDI FREEMAN

If your group is searching for a pleasant and informative program for the next meeting, look no farther.

Goodwill Enterprises will be happy to help you.

Public relations director Wilfred Burton says make just one call to his office and he'll hand you your program on a platter—a guided tour of the Bay Street workshops.

He'll also buy you a cup of coffee in the workshop cafeteria and let you throw all your questions at him. The length of the tour can be tailored to meet your needs.

Reason for the tours, explains Burton is to show the people of Victoria the results of their continuing support.

TRAINING PROGRAM

Although the non-profit society celebrated its 13th anniversary this month, it has only had its existing workshops to train handicapped people since 1967.

Since then, 163 people have completed the rehabilitation training program and have found full-time employment in the community. There are 162 people on Goodwill's payroll at the moment, 140 of whom are handicapped.

A tour of the modern plant shows how discarded clothing, furniture and numerous other articles become the materials used to train the handicapped.

In one corner a young man wields a paint-brush on the frame of a bicycle. Behind him stands his recently-completed work of art—a candy cane striped playswing set.

In another area, a supervisor is demonstrating to his young trainee the art of buttoning an upholstered chair.

Training includes learning how the materials reach the different repair areas. Warehousing, stock control and assembly-line sorting are part of the rehabilitation program.

Used goods, placed in Goodwill depots around the city, are picked up and delivered to the Bay Street building. Warehousemen stack, store and place the goods on unit trolleys, emptied at the rate of 14 a day.

Assembly-line workers sort the goods, sending clothing down the line for further inspection, sending non-clothing goods to the appropriate departments.

Even non-repairable items are valuable, says George Hudson, training director. Unusable clothing is baled and sold for rags while articles, such as radios or TVs are "cannibalized" for their useful pieces.

CLOTHES BEST SELLERS

Mr. Hudson said that repaired clothing provides 50 per cent of Goodwill's income. The clothing is separated into seasonal wear then sent to be cleaned, repaired, pressed and priced.

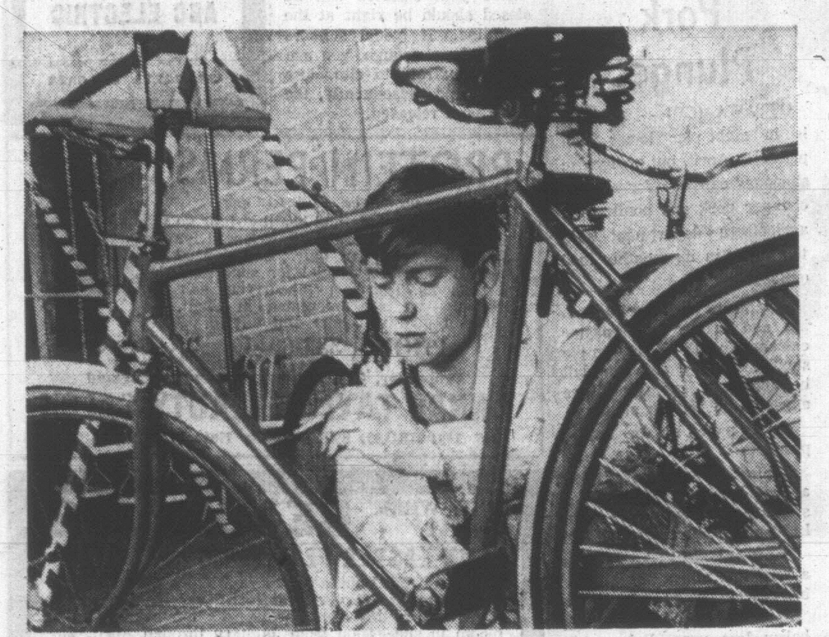
The cleaning area resembles a model dry-cleaning establishment and enables its trainees to become familiar with the most up-to-date equipment and cleaning methods.

Once the goods are, in saleable condition, they are sent to Goodwill stores in Victoria, Nanaimo and Duncan to be sold.

The most important finished product, of course, is the graduate from the training program.

He learns a skill, learns how to function in a work situation and earns a living as he learns. The handicapped people are paid from the store profits.

Goodwill rehabilitation program includes a course in upholstering. Here, Gail Johnston measures the material she will use to restore a chrome kitchen chair. Beside her is a half-finished footstool.



Painter Gary Williams applies a coat of red paint to a bicycle. He's surrounded by children's toys which will soon go to Goodwill stores. In the background stands a set of playground swings, gaily painted in red and white candy cane stripes.

The old rocking chair will be sanded down and repainted by Lloyd Milan before it is priced and sent out to one of the Goodwill stores to be sold. Trainees learn wood-working, upholstering and painting skills in this section of the Goodwill workshop.

A conveyor belt carries used clothing past assembly-line workers at the Goodwill Enterprises workshop. The workers sort items and assess the repairs needed.

Uplands Ladies Tee-Off Tuesday

The Ladies' Section of the Uplands Golf Club will hold its annual spring opening luncheon 1 p.m. Tuesday in the clubhouse.

A two-ball sixsome will begin at 9 a.m. with prizes to be awarded the winners. Prizes will also be awarded to those with the most original leis in three categories: golf, comic and attractive.

Come Hither Look Hides Policewoman's Badge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Watch out for a vivacious blonde next time you're slumming in Vancouver—after she takes off her wig and heavy makeup, she could turn out to be a policewoman.

Dressed in civilian clothes and usually disguised by wigs, women in the Vancouver force's 12-member female squad assist RCMP and city police in detecting such crimes as abortion, prostitution, bootlegging and gambling.

Judy Scadding, newest member of the squad, and Anne McKetchen, who's been with the team 19 years, both agree that's been the best part of their work — masquerading in the underworld.

"We just give them the old flashy smile and come-hither look," said Miss Scadding.

But Miss McKetchen no longer gets any underground assignments because she's too easily recognized by Vancouver's underworld denizens.

"Even when I'm supposedly disguised I am greeted like a long-lost relative, with words like: 'Where've you been all my life, baby?' It's really very embarrassing."

What type of woman enters the female force? Miss McKetchen said an applicant must be a stable person and, for the sake of her peace of mind, must be able to leave the job at the office.

"We are asked to give notification of death and we are assigned to such cases as child neglect. It can all be very heartbreaking."

Both rookie and veteran agreed that the only disadvantage to their profession is its interference with their social lives, with its often irregular hours and unexpected calls to duty.

As well, Miss Scadding said she had lost several friends since signing on as a policewoman.

"People are uneasy and can't forget I'm a policewoman even when I'm out of uniform."

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

A breath of the Auld Sod at Sydney Reynolds . . .

Sure and begorrah on our last visit to Sydney Reynolds we saw more interesting stuff in the Irish Room than you could shake a shillelagh at! . . . All sorts of things from the auld sod . . . including souvenirs of Ireland which Mr. Reyonlds bought on his last trip . . . and you could easily fancy yourself browsing in one of those shops on Dublin's O'Connell Street . . . The vast majority of these things are inexpensive . . . and just different enough to make imaginative gifts . . . Some attractive pieces of delicate Belleek . . . little vases, sugars and creamers, etc. . . . and really adorable Arklow table sets for children . . . plate, bowl, mug and egg cup . . . decorated with an assortment of nursery rhyme characters . . . and only $5.50 for the whole works! . . . We noticed some very decorative Arklow mugs in many different designs . . . $1.25 . . . and some nicely shaped large coffee cups and saucers sprinkled with shamrocks, for $1.95 . . . Some new Galway crystal Irish coffee glasses are the best-looking we've seen yet . . . Admired the very beautiful jewellery in soft green Connemara marble, which looks a bit like B.C. jade . . . Delightful souvenirs in this marble, too . . . Book ends, key rings, leprechauns peeping out of caves or perched on maps of Ireland . . . Blackthorn and blackwood small objects of all kinds . . . and you can even get a package of genuine shamrock seeds from Ireland at . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 801 Government St., 383-3931.

Norell's clothes flaunt the simple look. Their value comes through to only the chosen few in fashion who cherish fine fabrics, tailoring and workmanship.

Irish linens have real elegance . . .

We encountered Ireland again when we popped into Wilson's to see what was new . . . They've just received a shipment of Strelitz Moygashel linen costumes and jacket, dresses from Dublin . . . (also noticed a nice selection of Strelitz one-piece dresses which arrived while we were on holiday) . . . The costumes . . . full length coat over sleeveless dress . . . are very nicely tailored . . . They come in shades of turquoise, beige and navy . . . trimmed with big silver buttons . . . and are not out of the way price-wise at $110 . . . Jacket dresses . . . in blue, turquoise and pink . . . are tagged at $90 . . . Same smart tailoring as the costumes . . . with this season's shorter jackets . . . Another dress and jacket . . . the latter with short sleeves . . . is a delectable grape shade . . . would look heavenly on a blonde! . . . A couple of tie silk dresses with long torsos and finely accordion pleated skirts to swirl and twirl with every motion, took us back to our flapper days . . . a nice change from the "little nothing" dresses we've all been wearing so long . . . These are both small sizes . . . 8 and 10 . . . One is a red, white and navy chevron print . . . the other a geometric design in navy white and green . . . Long cuffed sleeves, tie belts and separate scarves all contribute to their deliciously feminine look . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 393-7177.

More and more of Paris' big-name couturiers are forsaking over-expensive clothes and turning to ready-to-wear.

New English Brevitt shoes for spring . . .

The tailored woman . . . the woman who likes to walk a lot . . . who wants to be shod in well-fitting, handsome, substantial shoes . . . that she can put on and then forget about for the rest of the day . . . this is the type of woman who should . . . and most frequently does . . . wear Brevitt shoes from England . . . We saw the new Brevitts for Spring at Munday's the other day . . . and right handsome they are! . . . A new model called "Carlisle" is particularly well-fitting . . . it has a rippled rubber sole, and padded insole for extra comfort . . . a strap buckles across the high instep . . . and colors are beige, red, olive and waxwood buffalo calf . . . "Soft-Moc" is an old favorite . . . leather sole, flat heel and hand-sewn moccasin vamp in a soft and supple leather . . . biscuit, oakwood brown or black ($16.95) . . . Other Brevitts are "Raynsford" . . . the basic 2-eyelet tie shoes with ripple rubber sole . . . black or navy . . . "Hunting" is a new pant boot with foam crepe sole, elastic gored sides and strap and buckle trim . . . Biscuit, brown or black . . . Another new one is "Blake" . . . with a little higher heel, high front and ornamental buckle . . . Comes in brown, black and red . . . a very good suit shoe . . . Prices (except Soft-Moc) are $21.95 to $24.95 at Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Special new service for business women at H of G . . .

We're sure House of Glamour's Danny Hajnal must lie awake nights dreaming up new ways of dispensing more and better service in his two shops! . . . Here's the latest . . . Starting on April 6, House of Glamour will open at 8 a.m. daily . . . so that businesswomen whose hairdos are in need of a first-aid treatment to last out until their next appointment . . . or who want to look especially well for a business or social date that day . . . can pop in without appointment before nine . . . and have a comb-out and a second cup of coffee . . . at a very nominal price! For those with very short hair H of G might even be able to fit in a shampoo and set! . . . And if you must have a complete new hairdo, and can't take the time during business hours . . . just phone H of G and they'll move heaven and earth to give you an appointment for 5 p.m. . . . even though it means staying open longer hours . . . We think this is just great, and hope you busy businesswomen will take advantage of it! . . . Tina, you'll be glad to know, is now back from Hong Kong, and welcoming her customers once more in the downtown H of G . . . And if you've been disappointed in not being able to get one of those new wigs we told you about . . . H of G apologizes . . . the demand has been just too fantastic! . . . More in stock now, though, so choose yours soon! . . . House of Glamour, 658 View St., 386-6188 and 1639 Fort St., 386-7715.

Period furniture of timeless beauty . . .

It's like turning back the pages of time when you wander through The Gallery at Home Furniture . . . Here are meticulously duplicated reproductions of the sort of furniture which made the great houses of Britain so gracious and beautiful in days of yore . . . Furniture from the best periods of the past . . . waiting to add its charm and timelessness to our own modern-day homes . . . From this you'll gather that we're smitten with the beautiful furniture at Home . . . and you're absolutely right! . . . Even the prices are much less than you'd expect to pay for such beautifully hand-crafted things! . . . This week we fell in love with a little beauty of a miniature book case . . . which would fit nicely into a hall, dinette, or any small space . . . Beautifully grained mahogany, it has a glass cupboard in front, two closed cupboards and a couple of little drawers . . . Another has six drawers and two cupboards . . . Both are low and shallow . . . Among other new arrivals are some graceful upholstered benches . . . solid hand-carved mahogany covered with rich velvet which you can order in any of 100 different colors . . . Benches seat two people . . . for use as window or nook seats . . . or even in a bedroom . . . Very handsome marble topped tables with solid mahogany bases . . . in various sizes which range in price from $49.50 to $195 . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

KNIT AND CHAT

By MAY MAC LEAN

Spring Clean-Up Includes Wool Bag

These headbands take only an ounce of wool each and can be knit in an evening. Mrs. Mac Lean tells how to order the instructions in her column today.

I always think it is a good idea to plan your knitting and crochet projects ahead. For instance, you might be toying with the idea of knitting a suit or coat, and these are fairly big undertakings, requiring a lot of work. You yourself know whether you have a fair amount of time to devote, or a small amount of time, and whether you are a fast or fairly slow knitter.

If you take all these points into consideration, you can judge whether you would have the coat or suit finished for the spring or fall wear, and build your wardrobe around it accordingly.

I always feel you have a little more time for knitting and crochet at this time of the year. This seems a period when nothing much happens, but before you know it, the summer holidays are upon us.

It's a good time of year to do intricate knitting, such as an Irish Fisherman sweater. And what joy they are to wear, especially for hiking and sailing, or, if you take your time knitting, they are just as attractive for wear in the fall.

A good idea is to take stock of what yarn and wool you have on hand. If you have a few skeins of one color, try to plan something using up these skeins along with another color, either contrasting or toning in with it.

On the other hand, if all you have is oddments, a knitted or crocheted afghan is a good way of using them up. There are several designs that lend themselves to using an assortment of colors. I've often knitted children's mitts in all colored stripes, making something useful and clearing out my oddment bag at the same time.

Have you seen those small looms they have for children? They love to weave the small squares, which can be made into many useful things—doll's blankets, scarves, tea cosies and afghans. Little girl's get a great sense of achievement when they have made something pretty and useful.

This week's pattern is a very useful way to use those oddments of wool that you have around. These dainty little headbands are made from just one ounce of wool or mohair, and can be knit in an evening! Why not let your teen-agers make their own? They are great for keeping the ears warm in the cool spring breezes!

To order Leaflet No. 6865, send 35c in coin or money order. No stamps or personal cheques please. Your order must be accompanied with a stamped fully addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to: May E. Mac Lean, Knit and Chat, care of the Times. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering and to allow two to three weeks for delivery.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Guested Out

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 25 and Doug (made-up name) is 29. We've been married for three years and are as yet childless by choice.

We love each other, but there is one large area of disagreement which has caused many heated discussions and nearly a separation.

Doug thinks nothing of inviting his friends to spend anywhere from a week-end to a month with us. (And what friends!)

Abby, I am not a lady of leisure. I have a taxing daytime job and we live in a small apartment and all the extra work of overnight guests falls on my shoulders. Even their laundry, and I am sick of it. These friends are lazy, careless, and ungrateful.

In all the time we've been married I don't think we've spent a dozen week-ends alone. Once, Doug picked up a dirty hitchhiker and invited him to stay with us! He stayed nine days, and I was frightened to death of him. He had a wild look in his eye and I think he was on something.

In case you think Doug is stupid, he has a B.S. degree and a master's in social psychology. So what's the answer? — Doug's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Common sense does not come in "degrees." Though on the face of it Doug appears to be big-hearted, he is foolish and inconsiderate to put friends (and even strangers) before you. You two need to come to a better understanding before baby makes three.

DEAR ABBY: A week before my husband's birthday, his mother, who lives out of town, called me long distance and asked me what he would like for a gift. I gave her a few inexpensive suggestions, then she asked if he could use any T-shirts and undershorts. I told her no, he had plenty, as that's what she gave him for Christmas. Then she said (and these are her exact words) "Well, that's what I bought him, so that's what he's going to get whether he likes it or not!"

Abby, I know it's not the gift—but the thought that counts, but why did she bother to call and ask me if she already had the gift bought?

Would I be out of line to tell her next time to just send a couple of dollars in an envelope and let him pick out what he wants? — Burned Up.

DEAR BURNED: Not in my book!

Pork Plunges

OTTAWA (CP) — No hope is in sight for lower beef prices in April, but pennywise shoppers can look for slightly cheaper pork and poultry the agriculture department said this week in its monthly food outlook.

Supplies of pork are increasing and broiler and roaster chickens will be in ample supply. Turkey supplies will be adequate, but prices are expected to remain steady.

Prospects for other products:

Apples: Stocks are well above last year and U.S. stocks are exceptionally high. Little price change expected.

Potatoes: Stocks lower than a year ago and a slight price increase expected.

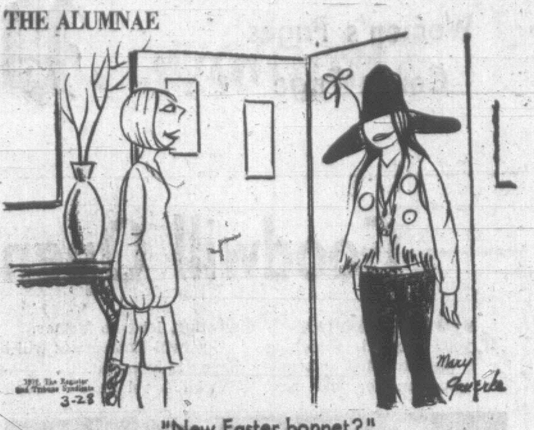
Carrots: Supplies much below last year. Prices will continue strong.

Hothouse cucumbers: Supplies increasing and prices dropping.

Hothouse tomatoes: Larger supplies available. Prices will continue strong until mid-month.

Eggs: Plentiful supplies at lower prices.

THE ALUMNAE



"New Easter bonnet?"

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

Would you please explain clipping for the necklines of dresses and also, the way a neckline should be treated when a Peter Pan collar is attached? I never know whether to make "Vs" or to clip straight into the seam. — Mrs. O.W.

Dear Mrs. O.W.:

You must clip straight in, right to the seamline in order to release enough fabric for the neckline to stay smooth. This should be done with all inner curves. Outer curves have too much fabric and they must be notched out in "Vs."

Be sure you have nice sharp scissors so that the point where your scissors will be closed should be right at the seamline. If your scissors aren't sharp enough, you are probably afraid to clip close enough and consequently, the seam isn't released.

The neckline with or without a collar is still an inner curve, so it would be treated exactly the same. Never understitch the facing until after this clipping is completed.

'Women Are Caught in a No-Win Game,' Says Sociologist

MONTREAL (CP) — Sociologist Marlene Dixon says the institution of marriage is the chief instrument of women's enslavement. Deprived of their rightful status and recognition, women "are forced to marry to achieve validation."

This and other theories of the McGill University professor are intriguing combinations of Marxist thought and feminist rebellion.

For example, in explaining why she curls her hair but doesn't wear makeup, she says.

"Listen, it's a multi-billion-dollar industry to put all that gunk on your face.

"They don't care about your face. They don't care about how many boy-friends you have. I mean, they show you waking up in bed with a man because you wear a certain kind of cosmetic. . . .

"It's obscene! I mean, human beings are valuable because they're human beings, not because of glunk; human beings are of value because they're human and can laugh and think and be creative and do their own things and people should relate to each other on those terms.

"So what I'm trying to say is that we want to create a society in which people can love one another, but on the basis of their humanity rather than on the basis of how desirable a sexual object they are, of how desirable an economic or status object they are."

STIRRED UP STORM

Now 33, Prof. Dixon has been the object of controversy since she graduated summa cum laude from University of California at Los Angeles and went to teach at the University of Chicago.

Last year the sociology faculty at Chicago split on whether to reappoint her when her three-year contract expired. Tenured professors voted against Prof. Dixon on the grounds that her writings in Ramparts, a no-holds-barred magazine of the left, and "the intellectual quality of her work did not meet the standards required for reappointment."

She moved to McGill last September, but is not convinced the attitudes will be different here. Prof. Dixon says she is saving her money —"this may be my last academic job."

"I'm going to miss it when they finally throw me out."

As the organizer of the Women's Liberation Movement in Montreal and Vancouver, Prof. Dixon is concerned with why so many women have "real problems of self-esteem and self-confidence."

"We want them to go beyond a gut-level anger at men who hurt them and to understand the system"—which begins when little girls are "put down" and winds up years later in a standard "trained incapacity" that works against even the brightest women.

MARLENE DIXON
. . . it's obscene

"Broodmare" conditioning to show women are only cut out for marriage and motherhood might have been acceptable in 1890 when a married woman spent 15 years of her life "pregnant and lactating," but it was no longer appropriate.

WOMEN CAN'T WIN

In this age of sure birth control techniques, says Prof. Dixon, who is married but shares her apartment only with five cats, "the physiological base of women's oppression no longer exists."

Nevertheless, the adjective "castrating" is still applied to women who earn positions of authority or management in nearly any field, she says.

"Any woman can make it (to independence) if she really wants to, but if a woman makes it, she has to be castrating, a lesbian, and about six other things. Women are caught in a no-win game.

"You can't win because if you make it, then all this stuff comes down on your head. There has to be something wrong with you. Why aren't you home pregnant?

PROVES INFERIORITY

"And if you are home pregnant, that proves you're inferior, otherwise you'd be out making it.

"Not everyone had a life history that gave them whatever it was, the drive, to fight the whole system . . . and there are many, many women whose gifts and talents and abilities are completely wasted."

Prof. Dixon talked about the factors that led to her beliefs.

After her occasionally-employed father died and her mother walked out, only Marlene was left to look after four younger brothers—now all "graduates of prisons."

"How can a child be responsible for a society that forces a child to raise children?" she asks.

"My brothers were angry and they were poor and the San Fernando Valley had very poor people and very rich people and my brothers would watch others driving by in their sports cars and throw paint on them—that's what they thought of people who drove sports cars."

Her first contact with the social sciences came when a social worker was sent to visit the home. "A very humiliating thing to be assigned (a worker). . . . I disliked the lady intensely."

But once she began working her way through UCLA, Prof. Dixon rediscovered sociology. "It caught me, it really entranced me, the theory did, and the ethics of science . . . serving mankind . . . the accumulation of knowledge . . . was like rediscovering religion."

'WOMAN AS NIGGER'

It was about this time that she joined the Congress of Racial Equality, "because for the first time in my life I had somewhere to put the rage."

As a result, Prof. Dixon has become particularly involved with the plight of working-class women—the "woman as nigger."

"The working-class woman, forced to help support her family, who does the same kind of work as a man, gets 40 per cent less than he does and works what amounts to a double shift."

"They're used just as blacks are to stabilize the labor market"—the last to be hired, the first to be fired.

Men are the implementers of oppression, she says. "It's really nice to come home and the dinner is always cooked and the floor is always done and your wife does that after she comes home from work—her own work.

"It is men who benefit from the position of women and it is men as husbands, lovers and bosses who do in women.

"It's not right to get the work of two people for the price of one."

FASHION FLASHES

Oriental influence will be seen in spring fabrics, whether in prints of sinuous abstractions or colors jumbled Hindu, style or austere in Japanese style.

The sandal will be important, sometimes a Japanese clog with high sole, sometimes flat and thong-wrapped up the leg in Near Eastern style.

The semi-Orientalism of gypsy clothes will stay flounced and colorful in light organza for parties, with gilt hoop earrings and many rings on fingers.

Early-to-Bed Japanese Leave Night-Time Expo to Stragglers

By JACK TRACY

OSAKA (CP) — Expo '70 is a night-time show, but few Japanese are around after dark to enjoy the glimmering lights and the fairyland aspect of Asia's first world's fair.

Before the gates open at 9 a.m., they pour out of buses, subway trains or electrified railways which fringe the site, many in groups with each leader carrying a banner to keep its members together.

Long before the 815-acre site closes at 10 p.m., only stragglers remain as early-to-bed Japanese head for the four gates and home.

While Expo 67 in Montreal on its mid-St. Lawrence River site was most enjoyable in sunlight, Expo '70 sparkles at night and can best be seen from the higher surrounding Senri Hills.

The red neon hammer and sickle of the Soviet pavilion, at 300 feet the highest building at the fair, dominates the scene in the north corner. On the opposite side of the grounds the four huge, white radar-like domes of the French pavilion sparkle at night with 1,500 flashing lights.

Near the centre of the fair, Canada's mirror-sheathed pavilion, seeming to dissolve in the reflection of daytime clouds and blue sky, shimmers with reflected light from surrounding pavilions at night.

The 160-foot Douglas fir logs of British Columbia, said to be the highest wooden structure in the world, are a landmark when silhouetted against the early-evening afterglow.

But it's the Japanese private pavilions that are showiest by night.

At the 210-foot Japan tobacco monopoly building, water sprays from the top to create an artificial rainbow. The Electrium of the country's power industry, a 1,200-ton structure suspended from four 129-foot pillars, glows like a giant electric lamp.

The Fuji Group building, called the world's largest pneumatic structure because it is made of 16 colored vinyl tubes 100 feet high, looks like a giant covered wagon in the glow of spotlights. It seems a pushover even for a child but Fuji engineers say it can withstand Japan's typhoons—winds up to 133 miles an hour.

The symbol of the Mitsui group of industries is another inflated structure with a tower 150 feet high shaped like a great tusk. Its blue color reflects surrounding spotlights and the end of the tusk glows red.

Outside the gas industry pavilion, two great torches of burning gas light up the plaza.

The white-domed Pepsi pavilion gives off dense white fog by day, and when the lights are on seems covered with translucent foam.

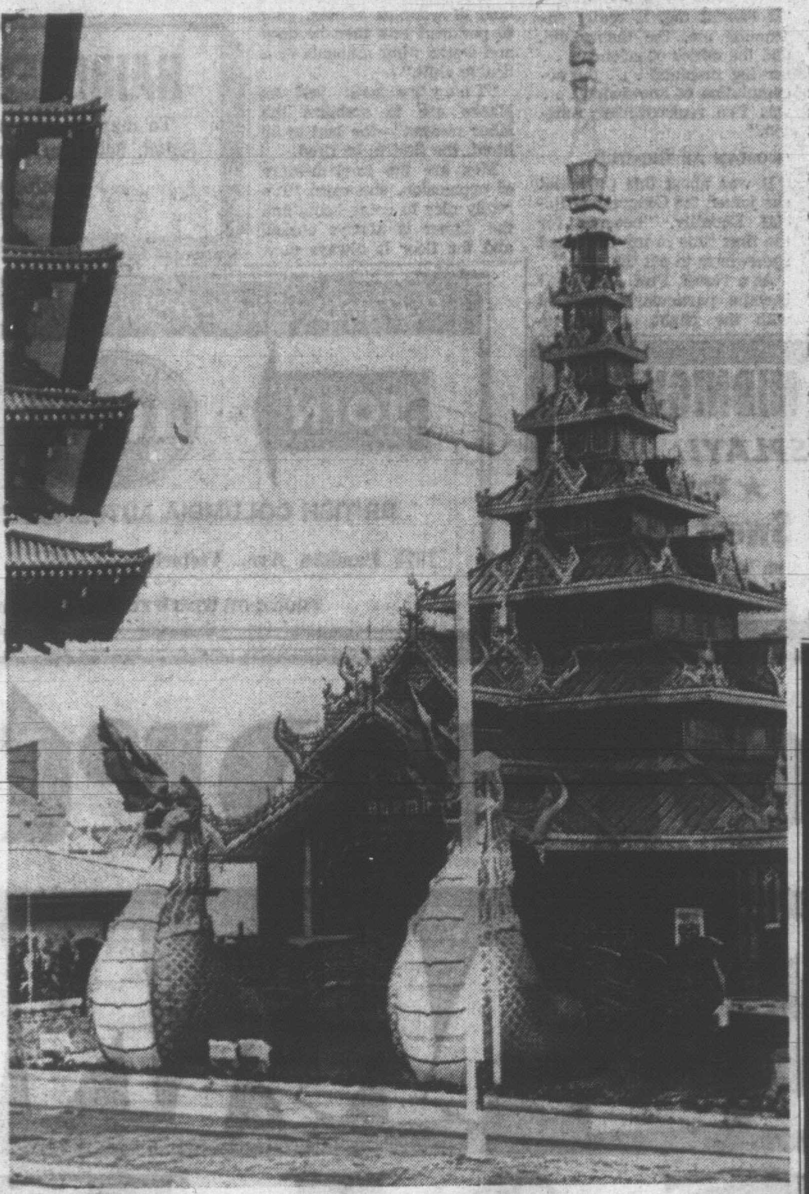
IDOL CASTS BEAMS

The Ricoh optical industries building has a great balloon held by four cables. At night neck-craning spectators can view it as a movie screen.

The Automobile pavilion, sponsored by Japan's 14 motor companies, consists of two tents, cone-shaped buildings cut aslant which project colored beams into the sky.

Centrepiece of the theme area is the Tower of the Sun, looking like a giant idol 210 feet high. Its searchlight eyes cast brilliant beams across the landscape.

Expoland, counterpart of La Ronde amusement park at Expo 67, is marked by five huge balloons 100 feet above the ground. When illuminated at night, they look like great planets. But unlike swinging La Ronde, which remained open into the early morning long after pavilions closed, Expoland shuts down when the main gates close.



HERALDED as the first major world exposition ever held in the Orient and a spectacular successor to Canada's Expo '67, Japan's Expo '70 opened it gates recently to the millions of domestic and foreign visitors who will view its wonders. Shown here is the Burmese pavilion representing a "Royal Barge" used in Burma many centuries ago.

A Yen For Food

By JACK TRACY

OSAKA (CP) — Like to sample the world's cooking? Then fill your wallet with yen—no other country's money can be spent here—and board the Expo '70 monorail for a globe-girdling gustatory tour.

The Osaka world's fair has about 200 eating places with total accommodation for 25,000. Of these, 7,000 seats are in the national pavilions of the 77 participating countries. Another 18,000 are at private pavilions and snack areas.

Since this is Asia's first world's fair and most of the projected 67,000,000 fair-goers during Expo's 183 days are expected to be Japanese, Eastern food predominates. No westerner should go home without sampling a Japanese meal—tempura or sukiyaki.

Tempura is shrimp floured and seasoned and cooked in hot fat. Sukiyaki is relatively new in Japan as a result of westerners bringing their meat-eating habits to a fish-eating country. Beef is marinated in soy sauce and sugar and cooked on a charcoal-burning hibachi stove at the table because it must be served hot.

Kobe beef is famous and breeders are said to treat their cattle with special care so the meat will be tender.

TOP SPOTS EXPENSIVE

Expo authorities plan to keep greasy-spoon type of eating places off the site. The Osaka prefectural food sanitation inspection centre has 15 public health officials watching the restaurants.

The official guide lists restaurants according to prices, 200-300 yen, 300-400, 400-500—there are about 330 yen to the Canadian dollar—but it has no listing for the first-class restaurants in the pavilions. That is where the money goes fast.

Fair concessionaires figure the average meal order will run 2,000 to 3,000 yen (about $6 to $9) but your cheque may go well above that.

For instance, a full Chinese meal at the junk-sailed Hong Kong pavilion can run to 2,800 yen (a little less than $9).

But in the Soviet restaurant—at 300 feet the highest pavilion at the fair—your cheque can come to a staggering 20,000 yen (about $66) with caviar, Georgian brandy and wine.

Restaurants in the Czechoslovak pavilion—popular ones at Expo 67 in Montreal—plan to bring in thousands of refrigerated pheasants for the gourmets.

CAN EAT UNDER WATER

If novelty dining interests you, try the Underwater restaurant at the bottom of an artificial lake near Expo's centre. Diners can watch fish swimming on two sides of the restaurant.

Then there are the Gondola snack bars. You get the snack and board a four-seat gondola which carries you to the top of a 90-foot tower for a view of Expo and the surrounding Senri Hills. There is a cycle of 20 minutes and you will have finished the snack by the time you reach ground level again.

If it's Canadian food you yearn for, try the restaurant in the Quebec pavilion where you can have the traditional tourtiere meat pie or sugar maple pie. The Ookpik is run by Van Godbout of Montreal, a veteran concessionaire of Expo 67, near the Canadian pavilion and serves Canadian beer. The food must be good. The Eskimo carvers from the Canadian pavilion eat there.

Cool-Aid Gets Grants

A combined St. John's Anglican Church and Cool-Aid youth hostel program received intermunicipal committee blessings this week.

Church and Cool-Aid officials appeared before the intermunicipal group to ask for an additional $1,160 to operate a youth hostel in the St. John's Church Hall throughout the summer.

In addition to donating the hall to serve as a dormitory for male youths the church chipped $1,000 in cash into the operational-costs kitty.

With the $1,160 from municipalities plus $600 in food vouchers from the provincial government and $300 in general income, the Cool-Air and church workers hope to have funds to provide bed and temporary board for an expected 2,000 transient youths.

The hostel is scheduled to go into operation April 1 and remain open until Sept. 30.

Cool-Aid spokesman Charles Barber said he anticipated a hefty increase in travelling youngsters this year.

In a three-month period in 1968 Cool-Aid provided 177 units of housing for youngsters on the move. A year later during the same period 1,198 housing units were provided.

'EXPLORER LOOF LIRPA'

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Once upon a time there was a Newfoundland adventurer, Loof Lirpa, who explored South America.

With that tale in mind pupils of a Kitchener Grade 6 teacher this week besieged the public library for information on the forgotten explorer. He was their research assignment for the week.

Librarians spent hours in futile search for reference to Loof Lirpa.

"Things began to smell fishy," said Alethe Johnston, children's librarian.

And by holding the explorer's name to a mirror, they found the only reference they needed. His name is April Fool spelled backwards.

WE DON'T WANT TO SPOIL IT!

'Sex Is a Serious Business,' Says Dane

By JOHN M. LEE

ODENSE, DENMARK (NYT) — This hometown of Hans Christen Andersen is attracting tourists early this year for reasons far afield from any children's fairy tale.

Charter flights from Miami, London, Tokyo, Rio de Janiero, and buses from Hamburg are bringing thousands of sightseers to a four-day show called Sex For the Millions.

The show, the latest assault on any remaining censorship in Denmark, opened to thin crowds in a drab exhibition hall.

Unlike the Sex 69 in Copenhagen last October, which masqueraded as a trade fair for the booming and legal, Danish pornography business, this fair is centered on an erotic variety show that includes intercourse.

●

The fair was made legal under Danish law by organizing part of the area as a private club, the Little Mermaid, requiring 24-hour notice of membership. Visitors join by mail or telephone in advance. The membership is about $3.50. The show costs another $13.

Ernest Penlau, the organizer of the fair, a bearded 32-year-old advertising man, who last organized a display of refrigerators, acknowledged he was offering nothing that could not be seen in private Copenhagen clubs almost any night of the week.

"People like to see it," Penlau said "But many don't dare go to clubs or small shops. But this show, in this big hall, this gives them an excuse."

●

Penlau rejected cheerfully any suggestion that he was championing any cause, since there are virtually no censorship or obscenity laws left to be attacked in Denmark. He said he was simply trying to make money, and he expected the fair to net about $65,000, half of which would be for him.

Miss Jette Sode, a 21-year-old blonde, whose act includes performing secual intercourse in the Little Mermaid said it was just another job. She said her fee totaled $650 for two performances a night for four nights a week, including the film rights. A London company paid $13,000 to film the show.

The director of the show is Miss Anne Bennett, a sturdy straight-talking woman in her late 30's. She said, "I am trying to create something artistic, and I am trying to create something sexy." Her troupe includes five girls, three men, two striptease dancers and two go-go dancers.

Some Danes were appalled. Torsten Quist, a young man from Aarhus, said, "They are spoiling what has been positive in Danish sex freedom. It is so bad. It is so shabby. It makes you ashamed to be a Dane."

The overall setting of the fair was tawdry, with no pretense of style or flair. But the atmosphere was good-humored without embarrassment. A few girls and older women stood out in the predominately male crowds.

●

'Too Much Attention Paid to Mechanics of the Resurrection'

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

After Luke had written his Gospel, his account of the life and ministry of Jesus, an account culminating in the story of Easter and its immediate aftermath, he wrote another book, The Acts of the Apostles, in which he told about what happened after that. In the opening paragraph of this second book Luke makes this simple declaration: "He — Jesus — showed himself to these men after his death, and gave ample proof that he was alive." (1:3. New English Bible.)

"He gave ample proof that he was alive." The rest of the book of Acts is commentary on that. The whole history of the Church is an account of the consequences of that. Here is the clue to the development in history of the Christian movement. Here is declared the dynamic of the Christian faith.

The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the centre of Christian belief. The entire New Testament was written in the light of the resurrection and must be read in that light. The Church is the community of the resurrection.

But the resurrection is a great puzzlement, sometimes a serious stumbling-block, to many thoughtful people, both in the Church and outside its fellowship.

Perhaps we have obscured the whole issue by paying too much attention to its physical side, to the mere mechanics of it. The New Testament writers did not seem much concerned about that side of it. Consider the empty tomb. Paul never mentioned it, nor did the writers of the other letters. It is, of course, mentioned in the Gospels — but it is really used there to prove the resurrection?

The New Testament writers seem more concerned to proclaim the resurrection than to explain it. The apostles and their associates were simply witnesses to the resurrection — not its physiologists or psychologists. C. T. Craig, an influential New Testament scholar, summed up the issue in this way: "The early Christians did not believe in the resurrection because they did not find his dead body. They believed because they did find a living Christ."

The resurrection — experience of the first Christians, their intense awareness of Jesus Christ as living Lord, has been explained — or explained away — as a mass hallucination, a pathological reaction of his followers to the suddenness of his arrest and trial and execution. But there is no evidence that the desciples were anticipating the resurrection, no evidence that their belief in it was in any way a projection of their fear and yearning, no evidence that awareness of the Risen Lord was other than a shattering surprise for any of them.

Furthermore, explaining away the resurrection-event does not explain away the tremendous shaking of human history which resulted when men somehow experienced the living presence of him whom death could not defeat. "He gave ample proof that he was alive."

I cannot explain the resurrection. I acknowledge that its means, its mechanics, are lost in the mists of history. But I do assert the reality of the resurrection-experience, the experience which made and continues to make the Christian religion.

The late Karl Barth, the most influential Christian theologian of our time, in his great work on Christian doctrine expressed the centrality of the resurrection in these words:

"The Christian community is the Easter community. Our preaching is Easter preaching. Our hymns are Easter hymns. Our faith is an Easter faith."

Easter, the festival of the resurrection, is a declaration of what the Christian religion is really all about.

Resigns

(a) This move permits counteraction on the Queen's side. It is well to know that this type of action can be applied when the White Bishop is on KR4.

(b) 11. P-QR4 should have been considered here.

(c) Benko is at the height of the 'Volga Gambit," and quite often applies . . . P-QB4 and . . . P-QN4 himself.

(d) Not bad, but P-QR4 was slightly better. White must have overlooked Black's 15th move.

(e) White counted only on 15 . . .NxP.

(f) 17 . . . QxBP is very strong. If now 18. Q-K4, P-K4, etc.

(g) After 19. B-QB4 follows B-R3; 20. KR-B1, BxBP, etc.

(h) If now 20. P-K5, P-B5; 21. Q-N1, QxQ; and Black wins.

(i) 21 . . . PxP is also good.

(j) If 25. QxP, R-R4 wins.

(k) He's lost. If 26. Q-B6, Q-B5 decides.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. Q-N3.

School Board Commends Bid Paring

Recent willingness of contractors to pare their bids on school projects should motivate the government to release more projects for tender, Greater Victoria school board chairman Dr. C. B. Jameson said Thursday.

He made his comment as the board opened tenders from 11 contractors for construction of a new distribution centre and garage addition.

The board provisionally awarded a contract to Patterson Construction Ltd. which had a low bid of $177,636.

High bid was $194,440.

The board had an allocation of $202,700, which had been trimmed from the original $255,000 in the current referendum.

The distribution centre will be built on Celia St. adjacent to the school district's existing shops.

Rental of distribution space currently costs the district $1,000 a month.

Another Extra-Value Vacation from Alitalia
Fado, Flamenco & Fez
A 3-week fiesta in Portugal, Spain and Morocco from as little as $795 including round-trip jet fare from Vancouver. $20 more from Victoria.

The people who brought you lower fares across the Atlantic now bring you extra value in vacations. Take this 3-week, 3-countries tour, for example. In Portugal, Spain and Morocco, Alitalia brings you several extras.

In fact, an extravaganza of extras.

You'd expect to see Lisbon, Madrid and Seville, The Prado, Casablanca, Fez and Tangiers. But how about a ruined Roman city covering a hundred acres?

Or the "Greenhouse" a man-made tropical forest? Or a museum of royal coaches.

An "Arabian Nights" castle with shining domes, gold mosaics and harem quarter.

Gypsy dwellings carved into a mountain.

The sad fado of Portugal, the exhilarating flamenco in Spain.

A cathedral with 750 stained glass windows (count them). A 17th-century fondouk. (Fondouk? That's an inn for camel caravans).

These are only a hint of the unusual features of this Alitalia Extra-Value vacation. It touches two continents, three cultures and a dozen fascinating cities.

And it includes everything. Jet fare. Accommodation in good hotels with private bath or shower. All but half a dozen meals. Sightseeing and surface travel by deluxe coach. The services of an English-speaking guide.

THE NEW FRUIT and vegetable market of Covent Gardens will look like this, according to an architect's sketch, when it moves from its location in the centre of London to the south side of the Thames River, five miles away. The market was granted a royal charter by Charles II in 1670.

BECAUSE OF AN ORANGE SELLER

$450 Million Moving Job

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP) — An eye-catching orange seller named Nell Gwyn sold her wares in Drury Lane more than 300 years ago, and that's much of the reason why London is wrestling with a $450,000,000 moving job.

Saucy Nell became the mistress of King Charles II and gave him a couple of children and a warm feeling for fruit pedlars and the theatrical district where she came to perform on stage. One result was that the monarch bestowed a royal charter on nearby Covent Garden, London's huge fruit-vegetable-flower market now in the process of upheaval.

Covent Garden, in almost the geographical centre of London, is to have a 300th birthday party on May 9—the band will be playing such appropriate tunes as Yes We Have No Bananas—and then its 4,500 regulars will think gloomily of packing up and shifting to the other (south) side of the Thames about five miles away.

SQUABBLE BEGINS

The move will touch off what experts describe as the greatest and most expensive job of redevelopment since the Great Fire of 1666. And several municipal authorities are squabbling over how to handle it.

It has been in the works for many years and the actual shift of the food-sellers—apart from longer-term rebuilding in the general area of Covent Garden—is due for 1973. But no one among the brigade of midnight-to-dawn barrow-trundlers and pedlars really believes it will ever happen.

"You're jokin', me old darlin'," said a skeptical porter shoving a load of tomatoes. "We've been 'moving' since bloody Dunkerque (1940) and ain't budged an inch yet."

Covent Garden indeed hasn't budged since 1670 when high-living Charles II granted to William, Earl of Bedford, the right to set up a market in "a place commonly called the Piazza near the Church of St. Paul, Covent Garden." Covent was a shortening of convent, of which there was one near the site.

An ancestor of the earl had commissioned architect Inigo Jones near the end of the 16th century to modernize the site on which the earl lived, with the idea of making money by clearing an accumulation of dilapidated buildings for the finest building location in the land.

Jones, creator of some of Britain's finest structures of his time, came up with a grandiose scheme on the model of the Piazza at Leghorn in Italy. The purse-watching earl cut out the fancy flourishes but the name Piazza stuck for a long time.

By the time of Charles II Londoners and country folk had set up shop outside the Piazza walls and the then earl—with Charles's royal blessing—decided to give cutlery maker Adam Piggott and candle maker Thomas Day the right to set up stalls and sheds for selling produce outside his own garden.

Over the years Inigo Jones's arcades and houses fell into disrepair and disrepute. By the mid-18th century the nobility had gone. And as the fashionable tenants moved out many of the fine old houses were turned into boozing and gambling dens and brothels.

Some preserved their character. On the west side of the market square stands the "actors' church" of St. Paul's, Covent Garden. It has been described by connoisseurs as a curious barn-like building, but designer Jones called it "the handsomest barn in Europe."

NELL PLAYED NEARBY

Covent Garden Theatre, the home of opera and ballet in London, stands on its east side, the third to be built on the site since 1732. And across the road is the Bow Street police station from which the historic Bow Street Runners (nicknamed Robin Redbreasts from their flashy jackets) chased criminals as the forerunners of Scotland Yard.

Nearby, too, is the site of the old Drury Lane Theatre—where Nell Gwyn played low-comedy parts—still bearing a successor theatre of the same name.

Covent Garden itself became in time the largest horticultural market in the world, handling 15 per cent of all the fruit and vegetables grown in Britain along with much from the Continent, and acting as price-setter for field products.

One of the sights of London for tourists used to be Covent Garden porters rushing around balancing as many as a dozen wicker baskets on their heads. But that went out at about the time of the start of the Second World War.

Now it's push-barrows and trucks in the old place, and at the new site it will be automation, fork-lifts and multi-storey car parks.

The Nine Elms location south of the Thames and alongside the railway tracks in the Battersea district will have an expansive 64 acres which now are being bulldozed of old warehouses and miscellaneous other clutter.

This compares with about 30 acres at the old stand, giving lots of elbow room for the hucksters apart from dispensing with the traffic chaos their suppliers create in the close confines of London's medieval street system.

"You get these huge things coming over from the Continent," says staff supervisor Sidney Evans, looking at a 20-ton truck carrying cauliflower from Italy. "Very confusing at times, because the drivers can't speak a word of English."

One result of this traffic jam-up has been to send down the volume of business at the market as more and more traders bypass the congestion and buy and sell direct at the ports or railway stations. The authorities hope the new site will help cure this.

High-Wire Thieves

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — High-wire artists are at work here, but they're not the circus variety. Sheriff's deputies report thieves are scaling utility poles along the Missouri-Pacific Railroad tracks in South Bexar County and stealing thousands of feet of copper wire from inactive circuits.

SHE THINKS . . . IT RAINS

LONDON (UPI) — A housewife said this week she is making it rain 3,000 miles away in Canada so that seal hunts will be washed out.

Doris Munday said she conjured up Canada's rains just sitting in her Brook Green parlor and "thinking very hard."

That way, said Mrs. Munday, she has caused the torrential rains reported here to have cancelled out many seal-hunting operations, just as she had earlier ended droughts in India, China and the United States and caused hail to fall on an English cricket ground.

"Nobody ever believes me," Mrs. Munday said.

"There's no mumbo-jumbo, no incantations, no witchcraft — I just think very hard, concentrate on what I want the weather to do, and it works. At least, it works 90 per cent of the time . . .

"I love animals, and when I read about these poor little creatures being clubbed to death (in Canada), I got angry," she said.

"So I made it rain."

Chedabucto Bay Cleanup Provides Valuable Experience

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The environmental laundering now going on in Canso Strait off Nova Scotia will have a national and international impact for years to come.

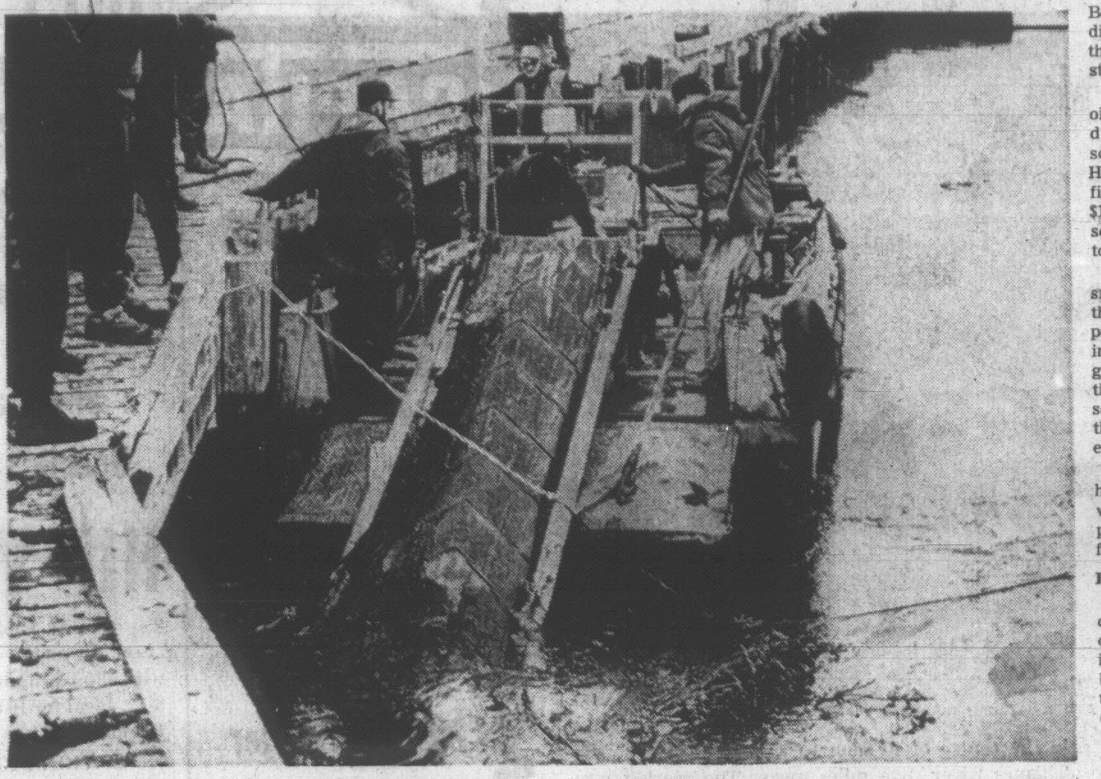
It has led, for example, to successful use of giant "roller towels" that mop the water's surface of oil spilled from the sunken tanker Arrow.

It is creating a blueprint and a tested organization for handling future marine oil pollution disasters.

"I don't think anybody appreciates the magnitude of this whole thing," says Dr. Harry Sheffer, vice-chairman of the Defence Research Board and No. 2 man of the huge cleanup organization.

"It is a major scientific experiment, even if it was not planned tnat way."

Probably 100 scientists are engaged. With any luck, mainly good weather, the major part of the cleanup operation should be finished in early April.



MOPPING UP the black tide of bunker oil from the Liberian tanker Arrow, broken and sunk in Chedabucto Bay off Nova Scotia, is the oleovator (above), the machine designed by Victoria scientist Richard Sewell of the Defence Research Board. His brother, Norman Sewell, head of R.B.H. Cybernetics, Patents and Processes Ltd., reports that two more machines are being built at Port Hawkesbury Shipyard in Nova Scotia for the anti-pollution fight. The local machine, says Newell, has proven more efficient than others tried at the site.

Implications for Future

Dr. Sheffer says the mop-up will cost far more than the $1,300,000 available via the insurance carried by the ship owners, and just who pays the bill remains to be settled.

Implications of the Arrow disaster also apply to future tanker operations in the Canadian Arctic where the passage of the super-tanker Manhattan raised spectres of a similar sinking magnified a hundred fold.

The Arrow incident will bring about a code of laws governing the conduct of oil-carrying vessels off Canadian coasts. Other countries with equally vulnerable coasts are watching for it with lively interest.

It is resulting in an unprecedented scientific assessment of the whole ecology of the area, to last months. The Arrow went aground Feb. 4 and broke up and sank Feb. 12 with several million gallons of oil aboard.

The grounding caught everyone unprepared, despite the fact that the sinking of the Torrey Canyon off Britain three years ago demonstrated the scale of disaster that follows loss of an oil tanker at sea.

The government stepped in with a cleanup task force under Dr. Patrick McTaggart-Cowan, executive director of the Science Council of Canada, and Dr. Sheffer.

Anti-pollution measure for the Torrey Canyon centred on bombing, burning or chemical dispersants which, in effect, spread the pollution. The Arrow team aimed at containing the spilled oil, recovering oil still trapped in the hulk, cleaning the surface and clearing the fouled beaches.

Dr. Sheffer said in an interview that recovery of an estimated 1,500,000 gallons of oil from the sunken hulk was given top priority.

Navy divers attached a pipe to the deck plates of the stern section using explosive bolts. A valve was attached, a hole was drilled through the plate and a flexible hose attached to carry oil to the surface.

Anchored above was the tanker barge Whale. Steam was forced down one hose line into the molasses-thick "bunker" oil to heat it enough to pump it up through another hose to the Whale's 500,000-gallon tanks.

The pumps lifted 195,000 gallons before a fierce storm broke two of the four mooring lines of the Whale and temporarily stopped that salvage. It was then decided to increase the number of outlets to five.

DIVERS ARE HEROES

The eight navy divers have been the heroes of this operation, working in 34-degree water 90 feet down. They were able to stay on the job only for 30-minute stints before surfacing to rest and thaw out.

Dr. Sheffer said the cleanup team is confident all the trapped oil can be pumped to the surface.

VICTORIAN

Next in priority are the masses of thick oil spread over the waters of the strait, buffeted by wind and tide and fouling the beaches. After more than a month, it had become an emulsion of 60 per cent sea water and 40 per cent oil.

A machine invented by Richard Sewell, a Defence Research Establishment employee on the Pacific Coast, was flown with the inventor to Port Hawkesbury, N.S., where the cleanup team has headquarters, complete with a major communications centre and helicopters.

Mr. Sewell's invention is a terry cloth-on canvas rig, like a giant roller towel with a wringer on the end. Dubbed the "slick-licker," it was designed to mop up much lighter grades of oil than the Arrow's bunker C, the thickest dregs of the oil refining process.

COULDN'T DIGEST IT

The scientists were doubtful at first, but it whisked up the oil at the rate of 40,000 gallons a day before getting what Dr. Sheffer calls "indigestion." The heavier oil caused the three-foot-wide by 11-foot-long mop to jam.

Three revised models are to be put to work during the next few weeks to complete the surface cleaning job.

Surface oil was threatening to foul a stretch of valuable resort beach along Lennox Passage. Ninety-thousand tons of rock fill were dumped across one end of the passage to close it off.

Then there were the fish-processing plants in the general area—at Canso, south of the wreck, and at Petit-de-Grat, east of it. They use huge quantities of sea water daily.

For the Canso plant, an alternate fresh-water supply was arranged through the town, which drew its water from a nearby lake. The town then was linked with a second lake because of the heavy requirements of the fish plant.

At Petit, filters were installed at the surface end of the sea-water intake pipe where they are accessible for the frequent cleaning forced by clogging oil.

LOBSTERS NOT HURT

Fishermen, with the lobster season opening between April 10 and April 30, wanted to know by mid-March whether it was worth getting ready for a new season. Fisheries Research Board and fisheries department divers established that none of the flora or fauna under the strait had been harmed.

For nets and gear fouled with oil, the cleanup team began developing a "laundromat," scheduled for delivery from Halifax in late March. They figured it worth while to spend $1,000 cleaning a $25,000 purse seine, for example, rather than to replace the net.

With rumors flying around the small fishing communities along the strait, the team drew up a public relations campaign that included regular visits to local government bodies to tell them the facts, plus bus tours of 30 school children a day through the cleanup area where lectures explained what was going on.

"The atmosphere was quite hostile the first day or two we were on the job but now the people there are our greatest friends," Dr. Sheffer said.

PREPARE FOR WORST

The team also devised a contingency plan to go into operation should the oil trapped in the sunken hulk break loose before it can all be pumped to the surface. It it heads to the open sea, a chemical which goes by the name Kontax, a mixture of sodium and calcium carbide, will be spread on it.

On contact with water, the compound bursts into a hot flame which has proved under test capable of igniting the heavy crude oil.

The final stage will be mopping up the beaches. Peat moss is to be spread to soak up as much oil as possible. It holds up to 10 times its own weight in bunker C. The oil-impregnated moss then will be buried or otherwise disposed of.

Some beaches will have to be partly stripped of sand, but only those that the team has been able to identify as areas where sand cover is replaced rapidly by wave action.

A local organization of fishermen, the Association of Concern, has volunteered manpower for the beach cleanup. The team also can call on 100 sailors who can be brought by helicopter from Halifax within an hour.

DRIVEN ON ROCK

One deciding factor will be the decision of the formal inquiry which opened in Halifax in late March. It will try to determine, among other things, what the Arrow was doing at the point in Canso Strait, close enough to Cerebus Rock to be driven on it in a storm. Locally, the rock is being Called Onassis Knoll for Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis who owned the Arrow. The spilled oil has been dubbed Onassis Molasses.

The scientists will keep an eye on the area for weeks after the cleanup operation ends, checking for damage to the undersea life.

The team itself expects to take up to six months to draft a major report on the disaster and on how to beat similar events, complete with recommendations for legislative action.

STANFIELD SLAMS INFORMATION CANADA

Grit 'Propaganda Machine' Feared

Times News Services

TORONTO — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield this week said he will abolish Information Canada if he becomes prime minister because it could become a partisan government propaganda machine.

Establishment of the new agency to co-ordinate all federal information officers under a single director "is the most ominous single step . . . by a government which is becoming disturbingly more authoritarian," he told a Progressive Conservative dinner meeting here.

He contended both the cabinet minister and civil servant designated to run and report to Parliament in the agency already have expressed views arousing alarm that Information Canada will become the propaganda arm of the Liberal party.

The Tory leader said minimum safeguards demanded that an opposition MP should be chairman of the parliamentary committee assigned to observe the agency's operations and an independent "propaganda watchdog" should be appointed to maintain a day-to-day examination, functioning like the auditor-general watching government finances.

"I fear that even these steps will prove an inadequate safeguard and a Progressive Conservative government, when elected, will dismantle Information Canada," Stanfield said.

He added that while he agreed with the objective of telling the federal government story to Canadians, Information Canada was not the way to do it because it creates "an instrument of propaganda so powerful that it invites abuse."

MEN IN CHARGE

Stanfield said the agency was being justified "in the name of efficiency as, through time, so many assaults upon freedom have been justified" and cited some of his objections to the men being put in charge.

Last Friday a Canadian Press story from Ottawa reported that potential appointees to Information Canada were being screened and recommended by officials of the Liberal Federation of Canada.

Shortly after it was issued minister without portfolio Corbet Stanbury personally intervened to request CP to kill the story.

Stanfield said whether the news report was true or not is really beside the point.

"What is instructive is the behavior of the minister who will oversee Information Canada. Rather than simply issue a denial — which is what most politicians do when we feel we are misquoted, which is probably most of the time — the minister intervened directly, to kill the story.

"If the minister's intervention sets a pattern for Information Canada, the press in Canada will in effect be under seige, and the citizen will know much less than he needs to know," said Stanfield.

He recalled that director designate of Information Canada, Jean-Louis Gagnon had assured Canadians it would deal only with information, in a speech this week to 400 federal information officers in Ottawa.

Later, however, Gagnon was asked how Information Canada would deal with politicians who release a flood of press releases for "political purposes only." His answer was that "maybe we could use a little propaganda."

"Obviously there is a very thin line between propaganda and information. We will need better safeguards than the good-will of Mr. Gagnon," said Stanfield.

LIBERAL EDITOR

Stanfield said Gagnon had made a contribution to Canada as co-chairman of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

However in Who's Who he is identified as: the founding editor of La Reforme, the house organ of the Liberal Party of Quebec; a founding member of the Liberal Federation of Quebec; and president for three years of the "Commission de Publicite et de Propagande" of the Liberal Federation of Quebec."

Stanfield said, with the potential for abuse of Information Canada, there is understandable concern that the director should be the former editor of a Liberal Party house organ.

Physicist Earns PhD

Victoria physicist Richard A. Gough has received a PhD from McMaster University in Hamilton, Ont. for his study of nuclear reactions.

Gough's parents are Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Gough, 1161 Rockland.

He won the Governor-General's Medal in 1965 when he led the University of Victoria's graduating class.

His research was conducted at McMaster, Yale and Texas A and M.

Gough will continue studies in nuclear physics at the Berkeley campus of the University of California under a National Research Council fellowship.

Achievers Celebrate With Fair

The Mayfair Shopping Center will be the scene of this year's Junior Achievement Trade Fair.

The fair will be held April 3 and 4 on the main floor of Woodwards Department Store and will feature representation from nine Junior Achievement companies and the Junior Achievement Bank.

It will be held on Friday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday. Purchases may be made and all companies are to be manned by Junior Achievement personnel.

Sunrise Service Set for Square

Men and women of many faiths are expected to attend the Easter Sunrise service in Centennial Square Sunday at 7:45 a.m.

For 27 consecutive years, this Easter service has been promoted by the Victoria Camp, Gideons of Canada. It was formerly held in Beacon Hill Park, but moved to Centennial Square during Canada's centennial year.

Music will be led by the Salvation Army Citadel Band and a male chorus conducted by Helmut Janzen. Rev. Paul Hawkes, pastor of Glad Tidings Tabernacle in Victoria, will give the Easter message.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Early Canadians Enjoyed Easter

By BOB BOWMAN

Easter was a happy time in French Canada. The coming of spring brought promise of fresh food supplies, and most people were also glad to see the end of Lenten restrictions. Although it was often difficult to cope with meatless days, Lent had to be strictly observed. Louis Gaboury, of the Island of Orleans, was caught eating meat in Lent without having obtained permission from the priest. He was sentenced to be tied to a stake for three hours and then be led to the door of the chapel where he would fall on his knees and ask pardon of God and the King.

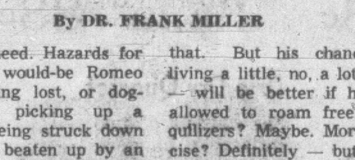
It wasn't easy to get substitutes for meat during Lent, and many people ate eels which could usually be caught along the banks of the rivers. They were smoked, salted, and kept in barrels until they were needed during Lent. They were cooked by hanging them in chimneys so the fat oozed down and helped to keep the fires burning.

Although the early Canadians looked forward to spring, it was disastrous if warm weather came too soon. Pierre Charlevoix wrote a history of Canada in 1744 and explained "If a compleat thaw comes on, farewell to the yearly stocks of capon, quarters of beef and mutton, and fish which had been laid up in the granaries, depending on the continuance of the frost; so that in spite of the excessive severity of the cold, people are reduced to the necessity of wishing for its continuance."

Of course the men looked forward to the ice breaking up in the streams and rivers so they could go fishing. They had to give their seigneurs one of every dozen fish they caught, but they could expect to catch that many fish in those days of no water pollution.

In fact even Atlantic salmon went all the way up the St. Lawrence River and its tributaries. When John Graves Simcoe founded Toronto in 1793 it was possible to catch Atlantic salmon in the Don and Humber rivers which now flow through the city.

The Wonderful World of Animals



By DR. FRANK MILLER

In spring a young dog's fancy turns to what he has been favoring the rest of the year. But there's an urgency, for bitches tend to "blossom" in the spring. The mature dog-about-town takes all this in his stride, which may quicken a little. But he handles his romances with a certain canine aplomb. Not so the really young dog who answers the call for the first time. He may be a youngster who has never been out of the house before, alone. But now he's got to go and go he does, making a surprising dash for freedom — and probably making it when someone opens a door.

For the first time, he doesn't loiter nor look back. His nose knows she's out there, somewhere. But the ways of love are seldom smooth. And for the young dog-about-town who doesn't know the ropes, romance may be rocky indeed. Hazards for the hapless would-be Romeo include getting lost, or dognapped, or picking up a poison, or being struck down by a car or beaten up by an irate owner of a bitch in heat. Finally, he can be torn to shreds by another, rougher, dog who insists on being first in line. These, and other risks make romance a hazard I can't heartily recommend — for a young dog, that is. I can't agree with so many who feel he should be entitled to take his chances for a little fun. "Let him live a little," they say. I'll go along with that. But his chances for living a little, no, a lot longer — will be better if he's not allowed to roam free. Tranquilizers? Maybe. More exercise? Definitely — but not of his own choosing. . . .

DEAR DR. MILLER: If a puppy is given a puppy shot and exposed to distemper, could it still come down with distemper later after the puppy shot had worn off? I understand the puppy shot that this pup had was good for two weeks. But then he got distemper a month after he was with this pup who already had it. How can something like this be avoided? — M.W.

DEAR M.W.: A puppy who is actually receiving protection from a serum injection would be protected from exposure to distemper. He would not be in danger later from the virus. He could not, in other words, carry the live virus around with him and be infected by it at a later date. If he did come down with distumper within a few weeks, it would be because (1) he was not actually protected at the time of the exposure to the virus and came down with it after a several week incubation period, or (2) he was exposed to the virus again after the temporary immunity conferred by the serum had run out.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it possible to cut a cat's claws without investing in a special cat clipper for this purpose? I wouldn't mind spending the money if I knew Doozie was going to let me keep cutting her nails. But I hate to have cutters on hand and find out she is going to refuse to let me cut them anyway. Will a heavy pair of scissors work temporarily?—N.D.

DEAR N.D.: A heavy pair of scissors will cut a cat's nails, but won't win any pussy-pleasing points in the process. They tend to shatter the nail and may cause painful pressure. However, you can use human nail clippers — the type with opposable, crescent shaped edges. These, especially the heavy pair for (human) toes, will do a good job on a cat's nail. For best results cut from side to side instead of up and down. Remember to clip off only the thin, curved tip of the claw. If you get into the "fat" part you will inevitably sever blood vessels and nerves. Only one such painful slip will make Doozie determined to "do it herself"

Smallest Province Schedules Elections

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Premier Alex Cambell, his Liberal government in danger of defeat by the Opposition in the Prince Edward Island legislature, announced Thursday that a provincial election will be held Monday, May 11.

Rising on a point of privilege as the house met, the premier said the Lieutenant-Governor had been asked to dissolve the 32-member assembly.

His announcementt ended weeks of speculation on an election date. The guessing began early in the current session when Keir Clark, a former health minister in the Campbell administration, crossed the floor to sit as an independent, upsetting the balance of power.

His defection left the government in a minority position. With the speaker able to vote only to break a tie, the 16 Liberals could have been defeated if all Conservative opposition members and Mr. Clark voted against it.

"Ever since the convening of this legislature we have heard repeated calls from the Opposition for the government to take its programs to the people for the ultimate judgment," the premier told the house.

"We have also been informed by members opposite that they will not support the government's budgetary proposals."

Because of these events and circumstances he had called the election.

Like a High School Dance But the People Are Older

By BOB MITCHELL

In some ways the scene at Holyrood House was like the high school dances of bygone years.

There were about 250 people in the room, most of them dancing to the beat of a rock band.

"Go in and have a look around, there's lotsa chicks," said Jim Rawlings, one of the founders of Victoria's Fifth Day Club.

It was midnight, still an hour to go before the party ended.

The girls wore semi-formal dresses—a few had pant-suits—while the men tried to look cool in their mandatory tie and jacket.

STRANGE TENSION

But beneath the alcohol-reinforced gaiety and restrained body movements there was a strange tension.

There weren't as many free women as Rawlings predicted: the majority had been staked out and claimed earlier in the evening, and now couples sat and danced together, obviously committed to not becoming separated for the duration.

Girls who sat alone were reluctant to dance. Maybe the Church Berry song the band was pounding out was a little too fast for them.

Or maybe they were bitter about all those men who just wanted to pick them up, and at the same time bitter about not letting themselves get picked up. . . .

NONE MARRIED

The Fifth Day is a club for single men and women between 21 and 35. Married couples are excluded.

It's called The Fifth Day because the club functions are usually held on Fridays, last working day of the week for working people.

For members ($8 a year) the Friday parties cost $1.50, and for non-members $2.50.

The Victoria club, only a month old, already has some 300 members. Parties have been held at the Empress Hotel and Holyrood.

Next club function is an Easter weekend trip to Las Vegas, along with members of the parent organization in Vancouver.

Next party is April 3 in the Georgian Lounge of the Empress.

The Vancouver Fifth Day club was started in 1967. Organizers found they had to organize Friday get-togethers by rotating between three downtown hotels because no one facility was big enough to accommodate crowds.

The club was started on the assumption cities like Victoria and Vancouver have multitudes of young, single, lonely people just itching to get together to have FUN, if only there was some place they could do so.

Good, clean fun is the overriding theme of Fifth Day publicity:

WEEKEND

"They know how to produce and how to have fun," says one sheet of the Fifth Day membership.

"When the weekend comes they turn their energy and attention to having fun," it blithely reiterates.

A couple of heavyweights are posted at the entrance to the party to keep out any "undesirables," Rawlings said.

These he defined as "hippies."

Not that anyone gets turned away for having long hair. He won't, so long as he wears a suit.

It's like the distinction between a respectable word like "swinger" and a not-so-respectable word like "hipster."

Airwave Monopolies Hit by U.S. Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Federal Communications Commission Thursday barred the future acquisition of more than one broadcasting station by a single owner in a single market.

And, in a proposal for the future, the FCC suggested breaking up existing mass media groups—multiple broadcasting outlets or broadcasting-plus-newspaper combinations—now under single ownership within individual markets.

The commission proposed dispersing media ownership in each community within five years, and envisaged a mass swapping of broadcast stations to allow present owners to scatter their holdings.

The one-to-a-market rule on future acquisitions is effective immediately, and marks the culmination of a proceeding which began two years ago.

The FCC said the new rules do not apply to present ownership.

But the FCC proposed a new rule which, if adopted, "would require present owners, within a period of five years, to reduce their holdings to an AM-FM combination, a television station or newspaper ownership in the same market.

Only two days ago the FCC issued a listing of U.S. broadcast and newspaper ownership, including 256 newspapers jointly owned by broadcast stations licence-holders in the same city.

No Blame Attached In Pedestrian Death

A coroner's jury Thursday said it was unfortunate that Bela William Dallos, 42, of 1317 Gladstone, had not been admitted to hospital as recommended by a psychiatrist on March 14.

Dallos dived under the wheels of a truck on March 19, the jury ruled.

The jury found that he met his death while his mind was disturbed and absolved truck driver William Hodgson, 1317 Gladstone, of all blame for the accident.

Evidence at the inquest disclosed that an unsuccessful attempt had been made to get Dallos admitted to the Eric Martin Institute five days before the accident.

He had seen a psychiatrist at that time, but not his own doctor.

The jury felt a mentally disturbed person should be under closer surveillance.

Where an individual could take his own life or the lives of others, and where a drug was being used to stabilize a patient, there should be a lapse in time of no more than 48 hours before he is seen by his doctor, the jury said.

Before the Judge

Isaac B. Brower-Berkhoven, 5304 Parker, was fined $300 for driving an auto when his blood-alcohol content was over .08 per cent.

He was apprehended March 6 about 10:40 p.m. after his car had hit a wall on Westing.

He had a breathalizer reading of .13 per cent at the time.

★ ★ ★

Daniel Norgaard, 33, of 876 Brett, was fined $350 for impaired driving and was prohibited from driving for four months.

He was involved in an accident at Gorge and Harriet Feb. 27 about 7 p.m.

★ ★ ★

George S. Jackson, 29, of Vancouver, was fined $500 for driving while his blood-alcohol content was over .08 per cent and it was recommended his licence be suspended for four months.

He was observed to drive across a double line on Douglas at a high rate of speed in order to pass two other vehicles March 2 about 11:15 p.m.

He gave a breathalyzer reading of .14 per cent at the time.

EASTER SERVICE AT TOMB

Times News Services

JERUSALEM — Christian pilgrims today lighted a fire at the traditional grave of Jesus Christ during special Easter observances which have drawn 15,000 pilgrims to this city.

Friday they retraced Christ's route with the cross more than 19 centuries ago.

The service today at the Tomb of the Holy Sepulchre, believed to be where Christ was buried and so identified by Emperor Constantine who built the church, is the ceremony of the Fire and Font, signifying light beamed from there to the world.

In Rome Friday Pope Paul, bearing a cross, trudged part of the way up one of the city's seven hills in the rain. Earlier the pontiff, without shoes, mitre or papal ring in order to signify mourning, lay prostrate to kiss the foot of a cross in the Basilica of St. Mary Major.

Abortion Reformists Picket PM in B.C.

By ALAN WHITE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau had a brief brush with a hastily organized female power demonstration Friday night after arriving here for an Easter ski holiday at nearby Whistler Mountain.

About 40 persons, including nine young members of the Vancouver Women's Caucus, a feminist group, were on hand when Trudeau's transport department Lockheed Jetstar touched down at Vancouver international Airport at 9:31 p.m.

The demonstrators assembled at one end of the terminal building, outside against a wire mesh fence that was being patrolled by plainclothes RCMP officers.

Disembarking the jetstar, Trudeau broke away from his party of three and walked the 30 yards to the fence to see what was going on.

Hatless and wearing a brown leather topcoat, Trudeau leaned against the fence and enquired about their signs, which said "legalize abortion now."

"You mean you've come for me?" the prime minister asked. Members of the VWC explained that their group is supporting "a nationwide campaign" for legalized abortion.

SAYS LAW CHANGED

"But haven't we changed the laws?" the prime minister responded. "Hell, the laws have moved quite a distance in the past year."

The discussion ended shortly thereafter and Trudeau rejoined his travelling companions for the 90-mile limousine trip to Whistler, a ski resort north of here.

He was accompanied by Manpower Minister Jean Marchand, aide Gordon Gibson and his wife. They'll stay at a private lodge in the Whistler area, Canada's proposed site for the 1976 winter olympics.

The length of his visit is not known.

Flight Delays Continue in U.S.

By United Press International

Striking U.S. controllers ignored a government ultimatum to return to work Saturday, tightening their squeeze on operations at New York airports and causing flight delays and cancellations from coast to coast.

The control tower at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, the world's busiest air terminal, was evacuated briefly after police received six telephoned bomb threats. No explosives were found.

The federal aviation administration said the air controllers' protest "sick-out" has spread to regional air traffic control centres at Memphis and Great Falls, Mont., for the first time and acknowledged that New York was "a very critical problem."

New York area controllers increased their walkout from 55 per cent to nearly 75 per cent of the work force on duty.

But primarily because the peak of Easter weekend departures had passed, the FAA reported that delays at Kennedy, Laguardia and Newark airports were lower than on Friday.

Delays at the three fields ranged from 35 to 75 minutes.

Elsewhere, 84 per cent of the scheduled work force at the Minneapolis regional control centre stayed at home. Other centres hard hit included Oakland, Calif., Denver and Kansas City.

Cong Near Cambodia Capital

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — The Cambodian government today said 3,600 Viet Cong troops were advancing on its capital here and ordered Cambodian regulars into frontline positions while mobilizing all former servicemen.

Unofficial reports said Cambodian tanks countered a Viet Cong attack at Koy-ky, on the Mekong River, 12 miles from here.

A government spokesman in the national assembly said three Viet Cong columns of 1,000 men each had pushed to within 50 miles of Phnom Penh from base bamps along the Vietnamese border northeast of the capital and another 600 VC were approaching from the east.

No clashes between these columns and Cambodian forces were reported.

STATEMENTS

The developments followed confused and fast-moving events Friday which clarifying statements come this morning from these countries:

In Saigon, two battalions of South Vietnamese knifed two miles into neutral Cambodia to kill Viet Cong in a raid on a Communist staging area Friday, U.S. military sources said despite earlier denials by South Vietnamese that the border had been crossed;

The sources added that the penetration took place, with U.S. helicopters giving support fire while hovering over the South Vietnamese side of the border, after the new rightist government in Cambodia had given its permission;

In Washington, the White House issued a statement acknowledging for the first time that U.S. commanders have been authorized for some time to cross the border in response to Communist attacks but denied this represented an expansion of the Viet Nam war;

In Cambodia, the capital of Phnom Penh was placed under curfew Friday and provincial reservists were called to duty to halt demonstrations against the new government following arrest of 20 students accused of leading a Thursday protest.

VICTORIA MAIL TO GO THROUGH

Mailmen will delivery throughout Greater Victoria Monday, although they have been asked by national union headquarters to stay home.

The Letter Carriers Union Ottawa office argued the day is a statutory holiday in the union's contract. But the protest appears to have launched too late to produce co-ordinated action across the country.

Marcel Bountin, president of the Victoria local of the union, said today members will report for work Monday. The local still has no official word from the Ottawa office on the subject and there appears to have been a breakdown in communication somewhere along the way, he said.

Mailmen in Calgary have indicated they will not report but a Vancouver spokesman said a request from them for support arrived too late to be considered by the union members there.

In Winnipeg a union spokesman said members will be advised to report for work.

Postmen in U.S. To Get Pay Hike

Times News Services.

WASHINGTON — Union and government officials have set aside all issues except wage increases in the United States postal dispute.

A joint announcement from the negotiation teams Friday night said both sides "agree that postal workers need and must have salary increases and that the only question is how much and when."

The statement added that "all other problems — and there are many — must be postponed until the wage question is solved."

THE GALLUP REPORT

Canadians Split On U.S. Control

Exactly half the people in Canada believe this country is becoming more dependent on the U.S. than it was a decade ago. In 1961, 43 per cent held this conviction; today 50 per cent say our dependence is increasing.

More citizens in Ontario (57 per cent) than any other region feel this way. In the Maritimes, about a third of the population say we are more dependent and in Quebec 42 per cent say it. In the West 54 per cent believe it.

The question:

"Do You Think Canada Is Becoming More Dependent on the United States, or Less Dependent Than It Was Say Ten Years Ago?

	More Dependent	Less Dependent	No Difference	Can't Say

CNTU Attacks Takeover

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Under a cloud of protest, negotiations were under way here today aimed at resumption of normal mail trucking service in Montreal under federal control as a result of a cabinet decision to take it over from contractors as a permanent government operation.

In a special Good Friday meeting, the cabinet cancelled five contracts with private trucking companies which were to have started on expiry next Tuesday of the old contract with G. Lapalme Inc., which had been the source of a series of rotating strikes and slowdowns holding up mail deliveries in the country's biggest city.

The move was seen by some as setting the pattern in other areas across the country, such as Victoria, when their existing private mail trucking contracts run out.

OLD CONTRACT

The Montreal post office Friday offered to hire about 285 of the Lapalme company's 457 drivers who had been trucking mail under the old contract.

But the powerful Confederation of National Trade Unions, representing the Montreal drivers, condemned the government decision this morning.

However, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, who announced the takeover, and the CNTU general secretary Raymond Parent began discussions today in the hopes of obtaining an agreement which would allow the Montreal post office to start trucking mail to sub-stations itself by Wednesday.

FOLLOWS DISRUPTIONS

The government takeover is a result of almost two months of work disruptions by drivers who feared losing their jobs if the earlier government plan to replace an existing exclusive mail delivery contract with five new ones had been successful.

These new contracts, which were to take effect April 1, will be cancelled, Drury said, and the government will take over direct control of mail truck deliveries.

The government plan calls for hiring about 285 of the present 457 drivers on the basis of seniority. The remaining drivers would be placed on a "waiting list" for future openings.

The union objects mainly to:

- The drivers being represented by a public service union after being hired by the government, rather than remaining within the CNTU.
- The fact that some drivers will lose their jobs and those hired by the government will be asked to accept the wage already paid post office department truckers in east Montreal: between

GAY BITS OF STRAW . . . . . . STILL PUT SPRING INTO A WOMAN

Easter Bonnets Bloom in Millinery No-Man's-Land

By JACK SCOTT

Yes, Virginia, Victoria's Easter Parade lives on. Just barely living, it's true. But it may be the last charming relic of a once-cherished tradition on the North American scene.

●

A reporter callously assigned to the no-man's-land of the city's millinery shops, a man selected for his coolness amid chaos, may now report that, weather permitting, large numbers of resolute ladies of the city will promenade under the classic, frivolous bonnet with all the ribbons on it when Sunday rolls around.

The giant computers are still digesting the statistics, but it may be revealed that the chapeau shoppes haven't done such business in recent memory, that seven out of 10 women covertly observed in the process of making up their minds were of an age to be somebody's grandmother, that each experimented with a mean average of 11.5 bonnets before reaching the irrevocable decision and that two out of three absolutely agree that there's just nothing like a gay little bit of straw to put spring into a woman's heart.

"I've had a new Easter hat every year for 55 years and I'm not stopping now." was the explanation of Mrs. Cora Hines who is, as it happens, a grandmother five times over. "Time was when we'd all take the streetcar to Beacon Hill Park after church to show off our finery. It was a grand sight. I still go every year in the hope that it will all happen again."

●

Mrs. Hines will be seen this year, come hell or high water, wearing a wide-brimmed pink straw with a matching pink organza sash, in which, it may be said, she looks like a million dollars, a superb example of the feminine mystique of economics since it cost a mere $22.98.

"A bonnet does wonders for your morale, especially at Easter, and please don't ask me why," was the explanation of Mrs. Margaret Murray, who will be 70 years of age next Tuesday and who, in a lacy, beige, wide-brimmed Tuscan straw, at $16.98, will look maybe 20 years younger. "I still have possibly three dozen hats from other Easters, including a Eugenie with a feather two feet high," said Mrs. Murray, "but any woman will tell you: there's no hat like a new hat."

Could just be that this sort of thinking might revive a dying tradition.

"Hats are definitely coming back," says Mrs. Rita Clarke, a woman of absolutely bottomless patience who has lightened the winter-worn spirits of thousands of the customers of Miss Frith's Millinery Shop and wouldn't be seen dead, herself, without an eye-stopping little something Atop. "More and more young women are following the trend of Paris and Rome. It isn't just that it's the new style, but every woman knows that she's a little bit more attractive in a hat."

●

Sure enough, there were at that moment two young ladies getting the message—one with a navy blue straw with a splash of white, pink, red and mauve organza flowers ($28.98)—and they were quick to agree.

"My boy friend has just traded his motorcycle in on a car," said one, all of 22, "and, gosh, I'm glad to get rid of that crash helmet. It did nothing for me."

"What's an Easter parade?" asked the other, clearly born 60 years after Irving Berlin, though the ancient tunesmith might well have composed a musical tribute to the velvet and organza cloche she was trying on.

There was a lone man in the Bay's hat department. He bought a dark brown fedora. It did nothing at all for his looks or his morale.

He Dropped Out —Of Dope Scene

Many parents are both frightened and baffled by the drug scene. Stories they hear and read leave them with more questions than answers. Little is heard from the young people who have used drugs.

Julian Martin is 17 years old, will be 18 next month. He has long hair, lives in Gordon Head and is a grade 12 student at Mount Douglas high school.

For two years he has used them all—marijuana, LSD, methedrine and the rest — everything but heroin.

He stopped. In the article below, written to his contemporaries, and appearing in the school newspaper, he analysis why kids take dope and why he stopped.

By JULIAN MARTIN

This expression of opinion was based upon, and written because of personal experiences and involvement of the last few years.

I direct it at my friends and companions and hope I have not instantly turned you into enemies. My purpose is to make you "turn off" and "tune in" or simply, convince you to quit using dope and direct your many talents and energy into worthier spheres.

The use of drugs by the "flower children" of the early 1960s was a grand experiment that failed.

They regarded dope as the means to an end — a possible medium for the development of new levels of consciousness. Their experiment backfired. Quickly, drugs began to be used for other reasons and today the great majority of users are abusing and crippling their power to change the fortunes of the world they will soon control.

If you are not too disgusted to continue, I hope you will read the following passages with great care and even greater honesty. Otherwise, read no further! You will not understand major portions of this article and just gain a false impression of what I am writing. So there!

How often have you wondered why you began using dope and why you continue its use? Most people began and continue) for one or more of six reasons.

- Status — to prove courage, daring or originality.
- Curiosity — to try and experience that which everyone talks about — drugs.
- Romance — the seeming romantic sub-culture of the "heads" and their supposed philosophy of life.
- Influence of friends — friends talked you into it. They use dope, so should you.
- Boredom and escape — you are bored with present life patterns. You desire a means of escape from tensions and problems of the world.
- Mind Expansion — possibility of finding new dimensions of consciousness through drug use.

★ ★ ★

What's your reason? Honestly now!

None of these reasons are valid excuses. True, one usually gains status for originality, but taking dope or selling it are certainly not original — no status points for following a common fad.

Curiosity alone is not reason enough to take dope more than once. There is always some other factor involved.

Only the uninitiated or naive would sincerely believe that the world of the "heads" is anything but sordid, violent, capitalistic and plastic. No romance here!

Haight-Ashbury in San Francisco reminds one of Al Capone's Chicago — murder and brutality commonplace events. Very little love or brotherhood either, I'm afraid. Cliques are rampant and almost impenetrable.

Surely to say that your friends influence you is a feeble excuse — individuality was the password of the last decade.

Those who use dope because of their boredom with present life are those people who say they use dope "because I enjoy the feeling." There is so obviously some hidden reason.

Escaping the tensions of life by using dope is extremely dangerous. This is the quickest way to cause a drug dependency. One shouldn't close one's eyes to the fact that one can't cope. If this is your particular reason, find a less dangerous hobby such as "Russian Roulette."

I usually wonder about the person who tells me that he is trying to develop a new dimension of thought through drug use. This is definitely the most subtle excuse.

What is a "dimension of thought" or a "state of consciousness?" Very few people seem to have any definite idea. Even fewer people claim to have developed this "growth of consciousness."

★ ★ ★

In my humble estimation getting "stoned" causes an ordinarily temporary accentuation of certain emotions, senses and thought patterns and suppression of certain others.

When by prolonged drug use some of these effects become more or less permanent do they add up to conscious-expansion? I tend to think not.

Everyone hates to be made a "sucker" or to be laughed at, but every time you buy dope (in any quantity) someone is laughing at you.

Every time you "drop acid" or "blow some hash" someone is taking you for a ride. Some dealers of drugs become extremely rich and affluent — on your money my friend.

(Parasites, Mr. Lowther (Mount Douglas principal Jack Lowther) called them, and although I hate to, I must agree.)

I am convinced that the non-medical use of drugs destroys ambition, creativity, energy and tends to narrow one's judgment rather than enlighten it.

Most users of dope would have to admit to a loss of ambition and energy (what about you, or don't you care?), many take refuge in living the life of the supposed "hippie — irresponsible, lazy and unrestricted.

Those who fall into this state of thought decide that they have finally "made the scene" and contentedly close their minds to further opinion.

Those of you who exist in this space (and the number is large) are usually as closeminded as the mythical yet despised "straight cat" — a blind conservative gentleman who supports the mythical yet dreaded "Establishment" — a scene where initiative dies quickly from reactionary brain-washing.

According to these same "hippies," anything and anyone that doesn't fit in with the accepted customs and graces of the "cool people" (a nauseating term) is branded "uncool" and summarily rejected (i.e., if someone under 20 wears a tie, he is immediately pounced upon and asked why he wears it—"it seems so strange . . .")

And yet some still talk of the Establishment of the older generation with disgust and loathing.

Our generatoin will "inherit the earth" within the next 25 years. We will be the Establishment. Are we prepared?

In order to meet the menace (no fooling now) of the world's great problems: overpopulation, loss of resources, pollution, disease, racial strife, and the lack of international understanding, we must begin to work together.

Individuality was the theme of the 1960s; sadly enough, it was too often interpreted as irresponsibility.

Hopefully, Unity will be the keyword of the 1970s—all of us united in the knowledge that each person is using his individual "God-given" ability in the coming struggle towards some greater degree of world peace.

The use of drugs clearly hampers the realization of this goal, I am hoping that you will be the catalysts in this struggle.

Come together now.

Joe Pilot Dreams Of Park

By DON VIPOND

Joe Pilot has a dream for Victoria — which is so elemental, so close to the roots of brotherhood, people may have trouble buying it.

He hopes young and old will work side-by-side to build themselves a park out of a brush-choked creek valley.

The stream is Colquitz Creek in the vicinity of Burnside Road, plugged with grass nurtured by pollution and hidden from the world by a jungle of scrub.

Joe fervently believes it could be turned into a magnificent park if enough people can share the dream and turn out to make it come true.

Work parties had already done some clearing along the creek between Hyacinth Park and Burnside. On the weekend of April 4-5 volunteers are needed to root out the dangerous stubble which stands like spear points in the wake of earlier work.

"I honestly believe Victoria's the only place where we can get people together on this," said the 34-year-old bachelor who bears a disconcerting resemblance to the standard portraits of Christ.

BIBLICAL FLAVOR

His dream has the flavor of the Bible in it too.

He sees the creek-park project as a step to meeting two great social needs — first, by taking a small but significant swat at the world-wide monster of pollution — and second, putting young and old alongside each other in a common cause where they are bound to meet, to talk, to nurture an appreciation for each other.

Both during and after the clearing job Joe suggests developing the park offers a perfect chance to blend the talents of young and old.

The heavy work will give the young a place to channel their energy. And the older people have the skills and talents of a lifetime to bring to it.

"All these retired gardeners walking around waiting to die. They could work here, have pride from really doing something and leaving something behind for others."

Other working bees have shown the spirit of the thing is reaching some people. At a session in December McDonald's Hamburgers provided 150 hamburgers and 150 hot apple pies for the toilers.

FREE DRINKS

The Tastee Freez people came up with five gallons of syrup to mix into drinks. Neighbors supplied buckets of water.

It's not all work. Some of the young people man guitars.

"Instead of doing something like going to a baseball game and watching 18 people play, we all play."

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please tell me why the Eiffel Tower in Paris was built?

A. It was built as part of the Paris Exhibition of 1889 and was designed by the French engineer and bridge builder Gustave Alexandre Eiffel (1832-1923).

Mixed-Media Happening Set for Uvic

"An unstructured and unscheduled collage of events, performances, and encounters, mixed media presentations, embarrassments . . . ."

That's one description of Event, a happening involving several University of Victoria departments Monday evening starting at 8 p.m.

Event will include students from the following departments: studio-visual arts, creative writing, music and theatre. Co-ordinator is arts teacher Dana Atsch.

CPR Pulls Fast Switch On Harbor Proposals

Revamping proposals for Belleville Street have come to a sudden halt after Marathon Realty pulled a last-minute switch in its plans presented to city hall.

Marathon, a subsidiary of Canadian Pacific Railways, presented the modified plans for facelifting the old CPR terminal to city officials Wednesday.

Thursday city council quietly but firmly tabled a bylaw designed to provide elbow room for the CPR proposals.

Marathon representative Lance Jefferson, although he hinted that his company could still go ahead "with a development", countered with a veiled threat that the CPR might now pull their summer Victoria-Seattle ferry service.

'WHAT WOULD HAPPEN?'

"I wonder how the merchants would like to lose $3.5 million a year?" he asked following Thursday's city council meeting.

"It might be a good idea to ask Victoria merchants what would happen if the Seattle run were stopped. It brings in 127,000 visitors every year."

Besides stating the company would go ahead with some sort of development on its property (design of that development is beyond city jurisdiction) Jefferson accused the city of trying to get all sorts of things done with our money."

'BOWLING ALLEY'

City officials, who term the latest CPR proposal "a bowling alley concept", remained unperturbed by Jefferson's charges and threat.

The bylaw council tabled would have reduced setback limits in the area from 90 feet to 45 feet. Without the set back CPR can still go ahead with a thin ribbon of development along the waterfront.

But even company officials admit it will be a poor looking development.

The switch in CPR plans took city planner Geoff Greenhalgh by surprise.

"We had worked out what we thought was a mutually acceptable proposal," Greenhalgh said. "The city was prepared to make certain concessions and the company had agreed to do certain things if those concessions were made.

"The latest proposal (received Wednesday) bore no relation at all to the scheme worked out and agreed upon."

Ald. Peter Pollen, chairman of the city's community planning committee, said Marathon had behaved "in a most insensitive fashion" and that after making a verbal commitment on certain issues had failed to come through "with a satisfactory undertaking."

He added that the city would not agree "to prostitute our environment for the benefit of a few big corporations."

PROMENADE CUT

Missing from the verbally agreed-to plan were proposals to convert the outer CPR wharf to a landscaped promenade provision for pedestrian access at various points of the over-all project; and an area of walkway at the water's edge.

Estimated cost of the concessions was $250,000. Marathon decided that would be too much.

Pollen had already described the proposal with promenade and walkways "a second best choice." He was referring to the original plans of Marathon which called for a close to $3 million face-lift.

This was later timmed to $1.5 and later to $1 million.

Price tag on the narrow strip of stores now planned for the old wharf area is not known.

'NOT THE BEST'

While hinting at withdrawal of the ferry service, Jefferson said he agreed that his company's latest proposals for Belleville Street "were not the best for the city or for us, but we have no alternative but to get on with something if we want to complete the project for this year's tourist season."

The ferry docks a few yards from the Marathon development and is expected to provide the bulk of the trade for the specialty shops.

The stores, and possibly a seafood restaurant, will be open only in the summer.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WHEN I WAS A BOY IN my father's house, my concept of God was unhazed by thought or theology. God was a supplementary father, Baptist by denomination, and gifted with awesome powers. He could see around corners and into minds, and he was more inclined to punish than to reward.

On Sundays, He required churchgoing. He might permit an afternoon walk on His day, but it must be a dress-up affair, and any activity that might be construed as fun was to be avoided.

It was a straightforward discipline, but a joyless one except at Christmas and Easter. Then Christ rather than stern Jehovah was in the ascendant, and my earthly father could substitute love, wonder and passion for the forbidding doctrine his congregations preferred.

For this God punished him . . . at least, I blamed God in those years, not realizing that men of harsh and narrow inclination see God as no more than a reflection of their own images.

They could accept Christ as the lamb of sacrifice and sing of fountains filled with Immanuel's blood. But I think now that in their secret hearts they disapproved of Him.

I tell you this out of remembered pain for my father. He was a simple man without unction or artifice, and he found more kindness outside his churches than within them.

When I was a boy, still in my father's house but older, I confused God with religion and turned my back on both. But I needed something—I couldn't give it a name—and as and when I could, went looking for it where others have also tried.

When a man applies perspective to his youth, a distortion takes place. Vision is refracted as light rays are by water. What seems clear in retrospect was actually vague, formless and deep-buried.

I would load a packboard and go into the Coast Range hills across the water from Vancouver.

Oftener than not, I started up by night, with my dog of those years for company. He would travel on his own feet until he became tired. Then he would whine to be picked up. Since he was small, I could drape him atop my pack, where he rode happily enough.

We would sleep for a while in the early morning, then push on with no particular goal or defined object. I can think of those trips now as lonely and unwise. But they didn't seem so then. To the extent that I served any defined want, it was simply to be part of the wild country for a weekend, or for a week if I had it.

My dog died, not in the hills but in the city, run over by a car.

Soon as I could get away, I headed out. No pack this time. Just what hard food I could carry in my pockets.

On the second evening away, I stopped for a breather in the bed of a summer-shrunk creek. Except for the whisper of water, all was very still. It was a time of waiting and expectation. I am no mystic, nor was I one then. But it seemed to me that something was shaping, and that some mystery of supreme import would be made plain.

But there was no revelation, only rocks and the thin strand of running water, and the dusk stealing up from the lowlands.

Nature has much to give, and perhaps there are men who have found God in nature. I would like to believe so. But those probings of hidden places solved no mysteries for me.

Nothing in my experience since has helped me reduce God into terms that my mind can grasp.

Yet somewhere along the way, and without knowing how or when, I have acquired a sense of God.

When I was a boy in my father's house, I tried to give God shape and substance. Now I am content with the mystery. In that I accept the fact of Christ and the validity of His teaching, I prefer to think of myself as a Christian.

I am aware that very many of the young today are involved in a search of their own for something that defies pragmatic answer. They may not find it, but if in the effort they turn their world into a better abode, I think they will be serving the purposes of God.

In the end, I have come back to the father-image. But a father more remote than a boy could conceive of, and master of not one universe but of the infinite.

I love Easter still. It is a festival keyed to the rhythms of an earth that sleeps to wake. Even more, it is a time of promise that calls to whatever faith in the triumph of light over darkness a man may possess.

The question remains. But for me, the sense of God is enough. I no longer feel that it is necessary for me to understand the mystery.

Soil Key to Pest-Free Plants

Tips for Home Gardeners

By JACK BEASTALL

With many of the supposedly harmless chemicals outlawed, the bewildered gardener is wondering what is going to take their place. To one who started gardening with an arsenal of chemicals this could well be a paramount problem.

Educated by advertising to believe that success in gardening is dependent on spraying every 30 days, it is reasonable to ask who or what is now going to fight the battle against pests and diseases.

Those of us who were gardening 50 years ago will remember that a certain amount of loss due to pest and disease damage was accepted as part of the cost of producing one's food and flowers.

A hole or two in a leaf was not a catastrophe, nor was a brown spot the cause of panic. We accepted these things as part and parcel of gardening.

It was not until the advent of million dollar advertising programs by spray manufacturers that the average gardener became pest and disease conscious. Confronted with blown-up pictures of minute insects said to be poised to destroy our environment, we became unduly alarmed.

•

Our fears might have been lessened had a counter program of education in elementary entomology and plant pathology been initiated, but anyone who raised the merest suggestion that things were not as bad as depicted was labelled irresponsible and ignorant.

Twenty-five years of high pressure selling of lethal products to untrained and unsuspecting gardeners has resulted in an environment polluted almost to the point of no return. Little wonder the gardener is bewildered.

It would seem the time has come for the gardening fraternity to do its own thinking.

One thing we know for sure is that gardens existed long before the era of "a spray a day to keep bugs away." Those gardens may not compare with today's standards of weed-free, spot-free, no-pest conditions, but they produced food on which millions of healthy families were raised and the environment was not considered dangerous to live in.

•

The problem of plant pests has been aggravated in many ways. Wholesale destruction of native plant material has driven many insects to the cultivated plants in gardens, and the indiscriminate use of sprays has greatly diminished the populations of natural predators. Unnecessary spraying, and spraying at the wrong time, has built up populations with greater resistance to natural hazards.

Not until the delicate balance of nature has been restored can we hope for assistance from natural sources in our efforts to maintain control. Our job as gardeners will be to apply reasoning to our problems.

First we have to face the fact that no garden will thrive without some work being done by the gardener. Those pictures we have been shown of a gardener under a sunshade with a glass of pink lemonade and a sprayer of poison beside him were totally unrealistic.

It is not green thumbs, but dirty hands and sore knees that make a garden, and when we get back on our knees we shall be closer to our plants and better able to see the start of what could later be a pest or disease problem.

•

The present work week of around 40 hours gives today's gardener some 32 hours of freedom each week. An hour or two of this time spent learning the life history of a few garden pests will pay high dividends. Knowing the time of appearance, rate of propagation, and the plants most likely to be attacked would go a long way towards planning an effective control program.

There is no dearth of literature on this subject. Library shelves are loaded, free bulletins are plentiful, all we need is the desire to learn.

Once we know the life cycle of any insect we can use our brains to beat it at its own game. We can camouflage the smell it is seeking, or make its egg-laying area uninviting, or sow our seeds to avoid the peak periods of the pest.

Our grandfathers used many forms of traps, and we shall have to return to this method of protection. The traps went off the market because gardeners became squeamish about destroying the trapped insects.

This refeals a strange quirk of the human mind. Gardeners who revolt at stepping on an insect or squeezing it between thumb and finger have thought nothing of using a spray to kill friends and foes alike. Not seeing the insects die was a salve to their conscience.

Earwig traps, soil pest traps, and fly traps were all used effectively when gardeners had no qualms about dropping the pest laden traps into a hot fire or a pail of boiling water.

These are just a few methods of control that will be revived, but the greatest good will come when we attack the real cause of most our plant troubles — the soil in which the plant are growing.

We have to understand that plants are made from plants. In other words, the soil from which plants obtain most that is needed for growing is composed of powdered rock and decomposed plant tissues.

•

These plant tissues, or what we refer to as soil, are converted by minute soil organisms into chemicals the plants can use, and a further conversion with the plants turns the chemicals into plant tissues.

Obviously, the conversion of soil to chemicals decreases the amount of soil. If the plants are to flourish, replenishment must be continuous.

Throughout this area the soils are badly lacking in decomposing plant tissue, otherwise called humus. Because of this our plants lack the vigor to withstand pests and diseases.

Had the money spent on pesticides over the past 25 years been invested in manures, and the time spent on spraying used to make compost, our plants today would be better able to care for themselves.

•

If we are not to apply our own reasoning to the pest and disease problem we have to (1) change our present way of thinking, (2) face the fact that gardening entails a little diligent and sometimes unpleasant work as well as hours of pleasure, (3) start at the root of our troubles and make some good soil so that we can grow healthy plants with some degree of built-in pest and disease resistance.

If we can accomplish these three objective in the coming season we shall have made distinct progress.

WORK FOR WEEK

If soil is suitable make planting of gladiolus corms now and another next month for a succession of blooms. Plant groups for decoration, not in straight rows.

Dahlia tubers which are still fairly dormant can be planted if soil is well drained, or garden near salt water where late frosts are unlikely.

Sow indoors, or in heated greenhouse, seed of white alyssum, coleus, nemesia, annual phlox.

Check recently planted trees to find if they have been loosened by strong winds. If so, fill in space around trunks with fine compost and firm gently with the feet. Avoid damaging the bark with tools.

The hardy fuchsias which grow in the open garden all year will flower more profusely by late summer if pruned to about six inches above soil level now. The tiny hardy rock garden fuchsias pruned back according to their size.

Grey-foliaged shrubs such as Senecio laxifolius, Santolina incana, Cineraria maritima, and the perennial Centaurea, can all be drastically pruned now to obtain better foliage later.

Make sowings of the hardy vegetables according to the condition of your soil. No use putting seeds into a cold wet soil, but gardens with southwest facing slopes and near salt water will be suitable for early crops. Carrots, spinach, onions, Swiss Chard, a few lettuce, parsnips in a deep soil, early peas and early potatoes are good risks.

Prune back lavender, sage, thyme, rue, and hyssop.

STAMP NEWS

W. Germany Honors Composer, Poet

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Portraits of three famous Germans, all of whom were born in 1770, are represented on three West German adhesives released March 20. They are: 10pf, Ludwig van Beethoven (d. 1827), the composer; 20pf, Georg Wilhelm Hegel (d. 1831), the philosopher; and 30pf, the poet Frederich Holderlin (9. 1843).

On March 11, Lesotho placed on sale 2½-cent and 25-cent pictorials for the 100th anniversary of the death of Moshoeshoe I, who was paramount chief of that south-African country.

The Cook Island's four Easter pictorials came out March 12. Reproduced on each is a Renaissance painting of Christ's resurrection. Four-cents, 8c, 20c and 25c are the values. A miniature sheet holding one specimen of each denomination was also placed on sale on that date.

Hong Kong came out with an Expo '70 pair (15c and 25c values) March 14.

On March 15, Singapore released four stamps (and a souvenir sheet containing the foursome) for Expo '70. Pictured are: 15c, sea shells; 30c, tropical fish; 75c, birds; and $1, orchids.

The Great Seal of Sweden is portrayed on a 5-kronor definitive released March 9 by that Scandinavian kingdom. The seal features St. Eric attired in armor.

On March 16. Australia placed on sale two Expo '70 adhesives. Depicted on the 5-cent stamp is Australia's pavilion, and on the 20-cent stamp is the Southern Cross and an inscription in Japanese meaning: "from the country of the south with warm feeling."

Aircraft are shown on a foursome issued March 13 by St. Vincent. The denominations are: 5c, 8c, 10c and 25c, and they were lithographed on block CA watermarked paper.

Two multicolors issued March 9 by Belgium for European Nature Conservation Year delineate trees. They are: 3.50-francs, beeches; and 7-francs, silver birches.

Easter is honored by 3-cent, 10-cent and 20-cent pictorials placed on sale March 23 by Jamaica.

Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation is featured on 10-cent, 15-cent and 35-cent stamps issued by the Gilbert and Ellice Islands March 2. The observe the centenary of the founding of the British Red Cross.

The designs of Canada's Expo '70 quartet are unimaginative, but they have sharp, arresting appearances.

Policewomen Pose as Fun Girls

VANCOUVER (CP) — Watch out for a vivacious blonde next time you're slumming in Vancouver — after she takes off her wig and heavy makeup, she could turn out to be a policewoman.

Dressed in civilian clothes and usually disguised by wigs, women in the Vancouver force's 12-member female squad assist RCMP and city police in detecting such crimes as abortion, prostitution, bootlegging and gambling.

Judy Scadding, newest member of the squad, and Anne McKetchen, who's been with the team 19 years, both agree that's been the best part of their work — masquerading in the underworld.

"We just give them the old flashy smile and come-hither look," said Miss Scadding.

UNDERWORLD

But Miss McKetchen no longer gets any underground assignments because she's too easily recognized by Vancouver's underworld denizens.

"Even when I'm supposedly disguised I am greeted like a long-lost relative, with words like: 'Where've you been all my life, baby?' It's really very embarrassing."

What type of woman enters the female force? Miss McKetchen said an applicant must be a stable person and, for the sake of her peace of mind, must be able to leave the job at the office.

"We are asked to give notification of death and we are assigned to such cases as child neglect. It can all be very heartbreaking."

Central Saanich Sewer Proposal Gets Rough Ride

By BRYDEN WINSBY

Proponents of the revised sewer plan in Central Saanich face a long, hard and perhaps bitter struggle before the proposal is presented to the voters for final approval.

This was indicated Thursday night at a meeting attended by 125 persons held at the Brentwood Elementary School. The meeting, sponsored by the Central Saanich Chamber of Commerce, was held to discuss the proposal and gauge public acceptance of it.

A panel of four, two for and two against the revised plan, spoke, followed by comments from the floor.

Before discussion got under way, chairman Gordon Ewan told the meeting the need for sewers was not under debate. What was to be discussed, he said, was the extent to which they were to be built and the financing of the scheme.

However, it soon became evident that such was not to be the case.

SEPTIC TANKS

Right now, the municipality relies on the use of septic tanks for treatment of its sewage. Some of these tanks are functional, while others are so ineffective they have become a health hazard.

Last December, voters turned down a $1.5 million sewer referendum, apparently feeling that it presented an unfair financial burden.

A revised proposal, now under consideration, has a $2.5 million price tag and represents a cost to homeowners of about $150 per annum for at least seven years.

With increased residential development in the area, many people, including developers, council members and public health officials, contend that an adequate sewage system is a must.

MAIN LINE

The proposed system involves running a main line, or trunk, in a west to east direction from the area around Butchart's Gardens to the East Saanich Indian reserve. Branch lines would run north and south of the main line, providing easier gravity flow of the effluent.

Panelist Ald. Donald MacLaurin, in outlining the new proposal, said, "By beginning now, we can get control of a planned use of the land and plan an extension of present zoning." He said the municipality has done an "outstanding job" so far in coming to grips with the problem of land usage.

TIME IS RIPE

"We don't want to go backwards in land use. The time is ripe now for a proper sewer system."

Howard Laatsch, former president of the Central Saanich Chamber of Commerce, attacked the financing of the revised scheme, calling it "nothing but a big bill." He said he fears a steady rise in the cost of the system, hindering those now building and burdening those who have a fixed income, forcing them to give up their homes.

"Not only that," he said, "when the pollution problem was first discovered, it was in Brentwood. Let's clean up and sewer Brentwood before we borrow all this money."

Art Bolster, another panelist, said that if voters turn down the proposal, they must find an alternative, "because no septic tank is adequate."

REFERENDUM

Haldor Beebe, long an outspoken critic of the sewer proposal, blasted the referendum itself, calling it "autocratic and undemocratic." He proposed that council find a better way of financing it, "even if it is unorthodox."

One member of the audience, Dave Prosser, said the draining methods of the proposed system were not adequate and cited a University of Pennsylvania study which says the Strait of Georgia, including the area around Sidney where the effluent would be pumped, is not properly flushed by the tided. He said only a portion of the effluent would be carried away.

"The rest would accumulate and really cause a problem."

Another resident said that when he first moved to the area a few years ago, he was told he would have to wait 10 or 15 years for sewers. He then put in an expensive septic tank system and is now told he will have to pay for a sewer system — one he does not need.

BROAD VIEW

One man said residents must take a broader view of the situation, not just how it affects them personally. "If we don't install sewers property values will go right down. People will leave as the health hazard rises. Contain your own effluent in your own backyard or get moving and solve the sewage problem."

One farmer stood up and mentioned the distances involve in some cases. "It's going to cost a lot of money just for me to hook up. Where am I going to get the money?"

MacLaurin, in reply, said, "I agree, the 'must connect and pay for the connection' rule in many cases can be an unreasonable request. This is something that will have to be ironed out."

Tentative Agreement Reported

Tentative agreement has been reached between Victoria Press Ltd. and the 207-member local of the International Typographical Union in contract negotiations dating back to October.

The company, publishing the afternoon Times and morning Colonist, agreed to a two-year contract retroactive to Jan. 1.

The ITU, representing the largest of four mechanical crafts employed at Victoria Press, said the terms may be ratified within three weeks.

An hourly-wage increase of 76 cents, spread over two years, with reduction of the time required for apprenticeship training, and in the number of years needed to qualify for four weeks vacation are principal items of the agreement.

FOUR MORE

"We are pleased to have concluded this agreement with our typographical employees for the next two years, but it is only one of the four mechanical unions we are negotiating with," said VPL general manager J. C. Melville.

The other three represent pressmen, stereotypers and mailers. A fourth, non-mechanical group is represented by Victoria Newspaper Guild, consisting of editorial, business office and maintenance staffs, which also is in negotiation with VPL.

FOOL FOIKUS FLEES FAIR

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Vancouver's elusive town fool, Joachim Foikis, failed to appear at a youth fair in London Thursday, and fair officials, who had sponsored his flight from Vancouver and his hotel, said he told them he was on his way to Europe.

They said he arrived in London Tuesday, checked into a downtown hotel and lived on the fair's expense account for the next two days.

A hotel employee said Mr. Foikis didn't check out but added that his room was empty.

John Killorn, public relations director of the fair, said he was at a loss to explain why Mr. Foikis didn't appear because he stood to gain a speaking fee of about $100 plus the equivalent of the return plane fare to Vancouver.

"But he wasn't on his way back to Vancouver, from what he told us ... He said he was going on to Europe and that's why he wanted the money instead of the return ticket to Vancouver," Mr. Killorn said.

Terrorists Free Envoy Despite Plan Failure

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Left-wing terrorists who kidnapped a Paraguayan consul Tuesday freed him today despite the failure of their demands that the Argentine government free two political prisoners in exchange.

Joaquin Waldemar Sanchez, 56-year-old Paraguayan consul, was freed in a suburb early today and appeared at the Paraguayan Embassy shortly afterward. He appeared tired but told reporters he had been treated well.

The Argentine Liberation Front (FAL), a small leftist militant group, had threatened to kill Sanchez and to execute the managers of United States companies in Argentina if the government of President Juan Carlos Ongania refused to free two members of the FAL allegedly arrested last week.

HAD ONLY ONE

Then an anonymous telephone caller told a local news agency that Sanchez had been killed and his body dumped into the Riachuelo River here. The call set off a police search of the river which turned up nothing.

Friday night, the FAL said Sanchez was still alive and would not be killed "for humanitarian reasons."

The government acknowledged that Carlos Dellanave, 20, was in jail, but said the other man whose release was demanded by the FAL, Alejandro R. Baldu, 20, was being sought by police.

The FAL claimed Baldu had been arrested, but had been killed or so badly tortured that the police could not release him.

Dellanave's father, Raul, who had been arrested in connection with his son's activities, said at a news conference Friday that the youth had been tortured while in jail.

Both young men had been accused of participating in bank robberies and in terrorist raids on military and police posts.

Sanchez, the Paraguayan consul in the border town of Ituzaingo, was kidnapped on the eve of the arrival here of Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner for a five-day official visit.

. . . MAIL

FEELS MEN SLIGHTED

Guy Beaudoin, director of services for federal employees in the CNTU, told reporters the union also objects to Drury's announcement of the policy at a news conference before the drivers themselves had been informed.

Beaudoin said Montreal mail service will be in a "bad mess" if the government tries to enforce its decision by the Wednesday deadline and the drivers refuse to work.

The present arrangement for mail truck delivery gives G. Lapalme Inc. an exclusive contract in the city.

The government decided to split up Lapalme's area and cancelled tenders which resulted in the award of five contracts in the city earlier this year.

Disruptions in mail deliveries began Feb. 3 as a result of the pending loss of jobs by Lapalme drivers and their demands that they continue under the new contracts.

WANTS DELAY

Beaudoin said the government's latest plan is unsatisfactory and the union has asked for a two-month delay to find a suitable solution.

The government action was recommended to the cabinet by Montreal lawyer H. Carl Goldenberg, who had been assigned by Prime Minister Trudeau to study and report on the dispute.

Marcel Pepin, CNTU president, said Friday night the Goldenberg recommendations were "a victory" for Postmaster-General Eric Kierans.

The four contractors holding the five contracts which are to be cancelled are reported to have invested about $850,000 in the purchase of trucks and to have hired between 200 and 500 drivers in expectation of starting work Wednesday.

Beaudoin said if the government is not able to buy these trucks and hire Lapalme drivers before Wednesday, "there's no way the mail will be moving."

Goldenberg said in his report that a takeover of mail truck service by the government is the only way to avoid future disputes.

A source in the post office department said the takeover could indicate the pattern the government intends to follow in other Canadian centres as existing mail truck delivery contracts expire.

Victoria Boy Tops Fair

A 15-year-old University of Victoria student was declared grand prize winner of the Vancouver Island regional science fair at the University of Victoria today.

David Buchan had an exhibit which he called "Experimental Studies in Metabolism." Using a respirometer and calorimeter, Buchan measures rates of heat dissipation from two guinea pigs.

Grand prize runner-up was Brian Maki of Oak Bay junior with "Photoperiods in animal activity."

Everton Races Ahead Towards Crown

LONDON (CP) Everton hammered Chelsea 5-2 today and took a five-point lead over Leeds United in the race for the English League soccer title.

Leeds lost 3-1 at home to Southhampton, its first home defeat in 39 games.

Everton now has 59 points with four games to play and Leeds 54 points with five to play.

Everton scored two goals in the first four minutes. Howard Kendall got the first after 16 seconds, and England World Cup ace Alan Ball the second.

VETERANS' CARE RATE UNCHANGED

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Relatives won't have to pay higher charges after all for veterans living in Veterans' Hospitals after their active treatment programs are completed.

And it's all due to the government's efforts to restrain inflation.

Charges for domicillary care of veterans in the hospitals were ordered increased from the years-old rate of $120 a month to $300 a month, for those who could afford them.

However, a Veterans' Affairs Department official Thursday said a count-order has intercepted the increase and rolled the rates back to $120 a month because of the restraint program.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The tissue under your skin has started to get a little bit thinner now that warmer weather is on its way.

Your skin tissue gets thicker in the winter in five different areas of the body surface — on the chest, abdomen, knees, back and the upper part of the arms. When spring arrives the skin starts to get thinner and that's the way nature prepares for hotter weather.

Researchers found that the temperature of your body may tend to go down less as the tissue under the skin increases in thickness when winter comes. The reverse is true, of course, when summer comes. The subcutaneous tissue seems to have some insulating qualities that ward off cold. When you don't need it then it thins out a bit.

GAGLARDI'S JOB-FINDER SERVICE UNDER NEW FIRE

'Political Patronage Alive and Well in B.C.'

Political patronage is flourishing in B.C.'s government despite Premier Bennett's stated view that it is a "cancer," NDP leader Dave Barrett charged Thursday in the legislature.

Barrett cited the establishment of the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen by Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi as a case where "plush offices and plush salaries" had been provided for Social Credit supporters.

The charge brought an immediate denial from an enraged Gaglardi who replied that Barrett was "misrepresenting" the truth and said that only two of 14 salaried employees of the alliance were known Social Crediters.

JOB-PROVIDER

The alliance was set up by Gaglardi — who is its chairman — with the aim of providing jobs for the unemployed.

During the current fiscal year the alliance received a grant of $140,000 from the government, and it will be given a grant of $500,000 for the fiscal year 1970-71.

Barrett, who termed the organization a "pork-barrel alliance," said it was a "payoff of public funds to friends of the minister and blatant patronage."

JOBS NOT POSTED

The job openings on the alliance were not posted, Barrett stated, and there were no applications handed in to the civil service for the positions available. He said he had checked with the civil service to see if this was the case.

Barrett pointed out that Ron Price, the executive assistant who heads the alliance, was a defeated Social Credit candidate and the son of Vancouver Socred MLA Bert Price. He had no experience in social work that might qualify him for the position, the NDP leader said.

SALARIES HIT

Regional Director D. G. Stewart of Kamloops was Gaglardi's campaign manager during the 1963 election, Barrett said.

The NDP leader, a social worker, had harsh words also for the salaries paid Price and the five regional directors. Whereas Price receives $1,050 per month, and Stewart $730 per month, Barrett said, the welfare department hires social workers with a bachelor degree (five years university) at a starting salary of $537 per month.

Even the most experienced senior social workers get only $820 starting salary with the civil service, Barrett said.

MERIT ALONE

To pay such high salaries to those without experience, Barrett added, would "destroy the morale and fabric of the civil service structure."

GAGLARDI

. . . defends appointments

Gaglardi replied that he had hired 14 people and only two of those were known Social Crediters. "Those two were chosen on merit and merit alone."

The minister said he had phoned the personnel manager of the civil service commission to ask for directions on how to hire personnel.

"I was told it was outside the civil service," he added.

NO POLITICS

Gaglardi described himself as the "champion" of the working man, and said the alliance staff had worked "arduously" to provide about 1,350 jobs. In a recent answer to a question the figure was placed at 1,281 jobs provided, 282 of which were permanent jobs for people on social assistance.

"At no time was politics ever used in the department, Gaglardi said, nor will there ever be.

The alliance had saved the taxpayers thousands of dollars, Gaglardi claimed.

Allan Williams (Lib. — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said the minister did not understand welfare problems and the people on the alliance did not know how to cope with them.

Gaglardi did not know how many of the people were still in the jobs found for them, Williams said, adding that there was no one on the staff organization equipped to counsel people in need.

RAY OF HOPE

Williams said that "compared to what we have now, the previous minister (Dan Campbell) was a ray of hope . . . The minister doesn't deserve our support."

Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) summed up the NDP attack on Gaglardi by calling him "the albatross of the Social Credit cabinet" who was "hurting" not only the government but the people on welfare.

He said it was "incredible" that a "high-flying, high-living minister" with "plush-carpeted offices" in Victoria and an expensive office building in Vancouver's West End should be made the minister of welfare. He also referred to a "suite in the Hotel Vancouver" after having asked in interjections, "how much rent" Gaglardi paid for that accommodation.

LABEL STICKS

"The patronage label still sticks," Williams said, and it would continue as long as Gaglardi failed to disprove the NDP charges about his approach to the welfare job.

Gaglardi assured Dave Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) that the alliance is making steady efforts to reach businessmen and praised the co-operation he has been receiving from them. He also said co-operation from social workers "by and large" has been good, as it has from unions he has dealt with.

Brousson said that as a Vancouver businessman the only contact he had with the alliance is from hearing Gaglardi on radio "hotline" programs.

EMPIRE BUILDERS

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) suggested that social workers too often are more dedicated to maintaining their "empires" than to helping people with new approaches.

Capozzi suggested something of a "worker's anonymous" system whereby welfare recipients who get jobs after several years of idleness should be helped by other workers to endure in the difficult readjustment period. It could take the form of making sure the worker gets picked up in the mornings, for example, he said.

He said it would require co-operation of both unions and businessmen to make the idea work.

Opposition MLAs attacked Gaglardi for using the terms "deadbeats" and "kooks" to apply to certain persons out of work.

Gaglardi replied that the reason some people would be removed from the welfare rolls would be to give those really in need more.

DAY-CARE AID

Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby North) said frustration was growing among lower income groups because of a lack of communication with the minister. She also called for greater aid to day-care centres from the government.

Barrett blasted Gaglardi for a statement he allegedly made that he was doing "such a good job" as minister of welfare that he would be getting his jet back. "That is the final insult," the NDP leader said.

There was not one single shred of evidence that Gaglardi was doing his duty, Barrett said. The minister had not met with the United Appeal or with the School of Social Work, the NDP leader added.

ELDERLY DESERVING

Barrett said that the government should increase the maximum in old age assistance to $175 from $150. "If anyone deserves better housing, income, and protection from inflation, it is the elderly."

The minister's salary and three other votes of the newly-named department of rehabilitation and social improvement were passed by the legislature during four hours of discussion.

The house adjourned at 5:45 p.m. until Wednesday.

Bennett Rejects Charges Of Public Funds Misuse

Premier Bennett labelled "stupid" charges that he spent public funds campaigning for Social Credit candidates in the 1968 feferal election.

Asked Thursday about the charges made by Liberal Leader Pat McGeer, the premier said he was traveling on public business during a period in which he also worked on behalf of federal Socred candidates.

FOUR RIDINGS

News reports at the time showed Bennett campaigned in four constituencies between June 11 and June 22. These were Okanagan Boundary, Okanagan-Kootenay, Kootenay East and Fraser Valley East.

All four Socred candidates lost in the June 25 election.

Reports also indicated the premier mainstreeted, taped television commercials, addressed campaign rallies and chamber of commerce meetings on behalf of the candidates.

"The premier is always the premier," Bennett told reporters in explaining that he was on public business and campaigned only when he happened to be in an area where the opportunity arose.

He described McGeer's charges as "stupid" and typical of the Liberal leader.

BEHAVIOR HIT

Meanwhile McGeer was accused by George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney) of "reprehensible" behavior in making the charges against Bennett and two other cabinet ministers outside of the public accounts committee.

Mussallem is chairman of the committee whose last meeting McGeer said he boycotted because it was being held in secret.

McGeer charged that Minister Without Portfolio Pat Jordan and Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi also spent public funds with no indication they were on public business during 1968.

Musallem said if McGeer had followed parliamentary procedures he would have made his charges in the committee instead of "in the corridors and on the news media."

City Police Display To Inform Public

If you are doubtful about some driving and traffic regulations, the point system or aspects of compulsory automobile insurance, you will find the answers at the Victoria city police exhibition next week.

It opens Monday on the fourth floor of the Bay and will run until Saturday.

Police officers will be there to help motorists seeking advice and information on all aspects of driving.

At a B.C. Telephone Co. booth on defensive driving, a motorist may also test his driving ability by answering a carbon-copy questionnaire. After completing the form, he tears off the first sheet and reads the answers on the second.

ALL ASPECTS

The exhibition takes in every aspect of police work — crime, education and community work. It represents more than a month's work and planning by co-ordinator Sgt. James L. Smith. He was assisted by Sgt. Ron Bentley and Sgt. Scotty Grant.

"After seeing a similar exhibition, I thought it would be an excellent idea if we had a similar exhibition here showing some of the facets of police work that are not so familiar to the public," said police chief John Gregory.

One of the big attractions will be demonstrations on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday at noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. by Vancouver city police Dog Sabre II.

TOP DOG

Sabre has been named the "dog of the year" because he has won the top award in police service dog competitions in the province. His handler is Constable G. C. Thompson.

One booth features a historic display which includes many old police relics, such as badges, ledgers dating back to 1860, old photographs and nightsticks.

One of the most interesting nightsticks is a decorated one which was used in England between 1840 and 1850. It was donated to the department.

There is also a desplay of Norris' cartoons depicting policemen, and a booth showing weapons used in armed robberies and bank holdups.

BOGUS BILLS

Other exhibits include counterfeit money with information on how to distinguish between good and bad bills.

Visitors will also be able to listen to police calls which have been taped for the exhibition. The object is show them how patrol cars get orders and how they are dispatched.

One display features the police department's most modern motorcycle.

The organizers of the show forgot nothing. They even included a recruiting booth where interested young people can obtain information on joining the force.

Government Holiday

The provincial government offices will be closed all day Monday.

EXTRA-LONG BREAK TAKEN BY MLAs

Most out-of-town MLAs headed home for an extra-long weekend Thursday night after the legislature adjourned at 5:45 p.m. until 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Adjournment means the legislature will sit after Easter for the first time since 1951. The session is expected to wind up next Friday, with a possibility it will run over until Saturday.

Deaf Man Perfects Tiny Hearing Aid

OFFERS FREE MODEL (not an actual hearing aid)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—A remarkable tiny hearing aid has been perfected by a man who has been hard of hearing for nearly ten years.

This small device has no dangling cords or separate transmitting units and represents a new, unusual design idea in a product to help hard of hearing.

It was developed especially for those persons who can hear but can't understand. This new hearing instrument provides "ear-level" hearing with the wearer picking up speech, sounds, television and radio at his ear. Due to the use of transistors, the user cost is extremely low.

A true life actual size replica of the smallest all-in-the-ear hearing aid ever made will be given absolutely free to anyone sending in this advertisement while supply lasts. So we suggest you write for yours now. No obligation whatsoever. Write to Anderson Hearing Electronics, 1320 Blanshard St., Victoria.

Are we slobs?

In The Financial Post magazine included with this week's Financial Post, an airline hostess claims many Canadian travelers are slobs. Other features cover Vacation U.S.A., book reviews, recorded music.

Every week FP is full of news to help your perspective. For example, this week:

- Should women wear pant suits in the office? FP polls 20 companies to find out what they think.
- The rise and fall of Vancouver's Fergusson brothers. FP reports how fast growth nearly caused a disaster.
- Noted tax experts examine the white paper on taxation. FP reports what they think and feel.

B.C. ROUNDUP

Four Die In Head-On Collision

147 MILE HOUSE (CP) — Four persons were killed in a two-car head-on crash Friday in this Cariboo community 33 miles south of Williams Lake.

Police identified the occupants of one of the vehicles as Hugh Arthur McKellar, 19, and Gregory Frank Goodwin, 18, both of Prince George.

Killed in the second car were Sam Brown, 58, and his wife Eleanor, 55, of Sicamous.

Duncan Death

DUNCAN — Timothy Frederick Hodson, 53, of nearby Fairbridge, was killed Thursday when a tractor he was loading rolled backwards from a tilt low-bed truck and crushed him.

Plant Closed

BURNABY — Operations at a Dominion Glass Co. Ltd. plant in this Vancouver suburb remained at a standstill Friday as 300 employees refused to cross a picket line set up by 35 striking office workers seeking a $24-a-month raise on a $270 monthly base rate.

Kamloops Date

KAMLOOPS — The British Columbia Racing Commission has granted five days of pari-mutuel horse racing to the Kamloops Exhibition next September. Dates are Sept. 2, 3, 4, 5 and 7.

City Teachers To Attend Annual Meet

Sixteen teachers from Greater Victoria school district will be among 1,000 delegates at the B.C. Teachers' Federation annual meeting which opens in Vancouver Monday.

When delegates met Wednesday, they decided to support a resolution calling for work stoppages if the government does not move to boost its share of teacher pensions during the 1971 legislative session.

"It seems there's real concern for this issue because the vast majority voted in favor of the resolution," said Bill Broadley, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

CHEK-TV Licence Extension Given

A six-month licence extension has been granted to CHEK TV by the Canadian Radio and Television Commission.

The CRTC announced Thursday that the station's licence will be extended until Sept. 30, "pending consideration."

The announcement said that B.C. Television Ltd., owners of CHEK andn CHAN TV in Vancouver, will be given a chance to present their views concerning the renewal of the licence at a public hearing of the commission in Ottawa, starting April 14.

B.C. Television president J. R. Peters, of Vancouver, said the six-month renewal was a normal procedure for all Canadian TV stations whose licence expires at the end of March, as does CHEK's.

ARAB PRINCE HAWKING HOT DOGS

LONDON (AP) — Crown Prince Chazi Faisal, pretender to the throne of Iraq, has turned up as a hot dog vender and usher at a Kensington district movie theatre.

The once wealthy prince lost his fortune in the coup which ended the rule of the Faisals as the Iraqi royal family 12 years ago.

"I have had do take this job to help pay my way," he told reporters Thursday.

8 of 48 Warrants Outstanding

Eight warrants are still outstanding this morning of the 48 issued by RCMP Tuesday, all involving trafficking in various illicit drugs on the Island.

Eleven persons appeared in Victoria Provincial Court Wednesday for trafficking in the various drugs as RCMP agents ended a four-month exercise. Two appeared Tuesday afternoon.

Malcolm Cunningham, 17, of 641 Rendall, was raised from juvenile court to face a charge of trafficking in LSD Wednesday afternoon. He pleaded not guilty, bail was set at $2,500 and he was remanded to this afternoon for further hearing.

In Sooke Provincial Court, David A. Verge, 24, and Jennifer A. Smith, 24, both of Sand Cut Creek near Jordan River, were charged with trafficking in hashish and were remanded.

Bail for Verge was set at $2,500 while Miss Smith was released in her own recognizance in the sum of $500.

In Nanaimo, Norman Pierce, 24, was sentenced Wednesday to one year in prison and placed on one-year probation when he pleaded guilty to trafficking in marijuana.

Court was told Pierce sold two grams of the drug to an RCMP undercover man in Nanaimo Jan. 31.

In the same court Thursday, David Patrick Gibson, 16, of Nanaimo, was sentenced to six months definite and 18 months indeterminate in the Haney Correctional Institute, after pleading guilty to a charge of possession of LSD March 21.

Gibson had been raised Wednesday to adult court from juvenile court.

Andrew Willott, 24, of Ladysmith, was also charged in Nanaimo, with trafficking in LSD Nov. 27. He was remanded for plea and election until April 3. Bail was set at $2,500.

Christopher Aman, 23, of Nanaimo, charged with trafficking in heroin Feb. 5, was remanded without plea and election until next Wednesday. Bail was set at $6,000.
